Grain Cradles.

7-Finger Count's Cradles!

Each Cradle is perfectly set by hand by an expert who has been making them for years. All of the wood part of these Cradles is cut out by hand, which prevents the Cradle warping and getting out of shape when exposed to dampness and the sun.

Fourteen-Finger Josh Berry Cradles.

There are a great many makes and styles of these Cradles on the market. Most of them are manufactured to suit the grain farmers of the West, where the grain grows much taller and heavier than in this section. Our experience has taught us that these "half cut" Cradles are not adapted to the needs of our farmers. Our Fourteen-Finger Cradles are set to suit the conditions of this section, and with them the lowest grade of the thinnest crop can be saved. Each Cradle is provided with a perfect patent fastening for the attachment of the Scythe or Blade. These Scythes are the very best quality we can buy.

CONDUCTED BY J. O. STRIBLING.

Communications intended for this department should be addressed to J. C. Stribling, Pendleton, S. C.

This Letter Explains Itself.

U. S. Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Plant Industry, Washington, D. C., June 8, 1905.

Dear Sir: Your letter of recent date in regard to nitrogen-fixing bacteria has been received.

The publication of the results obtained with pure cultures of inoculating leguminous plants has resulted in a very great demand being made upon the Department of Agriculture for the inoculating material. The distribution made during 1904 was for the purpose of obtaining a large number of tests of the method under average farm conditions, and it was impossible to anticipate and meet the demand which has arisen this spring. The original quantity prepared for distribution this season was promised early in February. In addition to this we have been able to supply only in cases where, for special reasons, a test appeared to be necessary.

Applications for next year's distribution should not be made more than two months previous to the time of sowing, and should state the legume to be sown, time of sowing, and quantity of seed to be treated. The distribution will be extended as far as our limited facilities will permit.

The patent which the Department holds upon the method of growing and distributing these organisms was taken out in such a way that no one can maintain a monopoly of the manufacturing of such cultures. The method has been taken up commercially and we understand that the product is to be handled quite generally by seedsmen. Upon application the Department has furnished all necessary information to the bacteriologist representing commercial concerns who claimed to be properly equipped, but we can not make any statement which could in any way be regarded as a guarantee of the commercial product.

Before experimenting with any bacterial preparations for legumes, you should study thoroughly the conditions of soil under which the use of cultures offers any possibility of gain. These conditions are discussed in Farmers' Bulletin No. 214, which we shall be glad to send to you if you have not already received it.

Yours very truly, A. F. Woods, Chief Pathologist and Physiologist.

Playing Second Fiddler.

Texas must be hard up for a representative when a great cotton State like it sends up a congressman like Burleson to represent her in the capitol at Washington by playing second fiddler to Secretary Wilson and the cotton bears.

Below is a clipping from a piece sent out we presume, by Secretary Wilson in defense of the recent Department report on the reduction of acreage.

"Personally," said Mr. Burleson, "I expected that the bureau acreage estimate would show a greater reduction than 11.4 per cent. I looked for something between 10 and 15 per cent. However, it is plain to me that, by the acreage and condition estimates as they stand are bullish. This being the case the agitation set on foot by the Southern Cotton Association is ill timed and calculated to result in harm to the farmer rather than in benefit, since the effect of it is to create the impression that the bureau estimates are bearish and force prices lower.

"Especially will the attack on the bureau be harmful to the producer who still has his last year's crop on hand and who, by reason of the attempt to make the bureau estimate appear bearish, is deprived of the higher prices which should be his because of the fact that those estimates are really decidedly bullish."

Such a puny, sickly statement as this as coming from a man in a high position as a member of congress from a great cotton State like Texas, is enough to make one bilious to read it.

Congressman Burleson of Texas, it seems would have the Southern Cotton Association, Farmers Union and all other cotton growers to sit still and believe themselves like good children as they have always done when an aching foot goes out from Mr. Wilson and the cotton bears.

When Wall street and Secretary Wilson make a statement cotton producers must keep quiet or the price of cotton will go down.

Mr. Burleson had just as well go way back and sit down, for we intend to have our turn at this thing or bust.

The Farmers Union is a Business Organization.

We are in this thing of Farmers Union as a business organization. We are in it to save money, not to put a few men in office at high salaries or to ride around over the country at the expense of others or to make money out of union men in every way. We are in it to save money, not to put a few men in office at high salaries or to ride around over the country at the expense of others or to make money out of union men in every way. We are in it to save money, not to put a few men in office at high salaries or to ride around over the country at the expense of others or to make money out of union men in every way.

How would it do for all the consumers of manufactured cotton goods—especially in the cotton belt—to get together and set prices on the manufactured products in their own pockets, regardless of the cost of manufacturing the new staple?

How would it do for all the cotton growers, grain growers, and other farmers to form one grand producers combine and set the consuming legions; treat with us and care was given.

It is high time that cotton growers read the riot act to these cotton manipulators and their henchmen.

The farmers' union now have in its ranks more than half the white cotton growers, and the organization is growing like green grass in the cotton rows in rainy weather.

Georgia has just organized a State Union. What the Farmers' Union and the Cotton Growers' Association can do for these favorites will be a plenty.

Some day not far distant we hope these two organizations will combine and turn loose their dogs of war upon these crouching cotton bears and drive them off the face of the earth.

The News and Courier says after eight months of experimentation, alteration and investigation, Messrs. J. C. Jaudon and S. L. Bond, of Charleston, have perfected and patented a cotton picker which, they believe, will make the picking of cotton by hand a thing of the past. The machine has just recently been completed, and after securing the patent papers from the Government offices, the picker has been exhibited to a number of friends, most of whom believe that Messrs. Jaudon and Bond have a good thing.

The graduating class at Annapolis this year numbers only three men from South Carolina—Isaac W. Hayne, Greenville; Andrew F. Carter, Ollon, and Hamilton F. Glover, Orangeburg. These three young men will shortly begin their long cruise.

They begin after leaving the Academy, having had four years' schooling at the Government's expense as midshipmen drawing something like $960 per year. This is the allowance for the next two years of the cruise. For the next three years they are allowed the sum of $1,400 and are then ranked as ensigns.

We understand that Mr. Lewis A. Brabham, of Buford's Bridge section, was bitten on the right wrist some weeks ago by a pet cat, and is now in the Pasteur hospital at Atlanta for treatment. His right arm is said to be in bad condition, and amputation may be necessary. The cat was not affected with rabies, but had been killing chickens and Mr. Brabham picked it up to kill it, when it fastened its teeth in his wrist. He choked it to death with his other hand, and yet it did not release its hold, its jaws having to be pried apart after death.—Bamberg Herald.

A shooting scrape took place at Bush, Aiken County, between some white men and negroes. Burrell McLean was killed and his son was seriously wounded, and two negroes were badly wounded. The trouble arose over an attempt by the two white men to carry a negro child before a magistrate to determine who was entitled to the custody of it.

A trial train on the Pennsylvania made the 498 miles between Chicago and Pittsburgh in 440 minutes.
