Our Local Cotton Markets.

We are pleased to read the Daily Mail's interview with Mr. F. M. Carey on the local cotton market question, which is about the first public acknowledgement we have seen from that side of the subject that there is a kind of division of territory among buyers; and more, that there is a little thing called "courtesy" afloat between our local cotton mills and cotton brokers, local cotton mills and cotton brokers, that keep down competition between buyers. We have never before heard this little thing that is costing our local cotton growers thousands of dollars every season called "courtesy." This is a bad little word. It costs the cotton grower too much.

Mr. Carey tells us again that all buyers and mill men are in the buying business for the money there is in it. Well, there is nothing now in this. We can now point out to cotton growers quite a number of cotton men that commenced buying cotton as poor men and they are now rich, and several of them are presidents of cotton mills, and we have never known these fellows to do anything else but buy cotton.

lows to do anything else but buy cotton.

The organized cotton growers are now trying to deal direct with the mills and save the grower this large "leakage" that has heretofore gone to pay for this "c artesy" or go-between men. We do not need this costly army of middle men if the grower and the spinners will deal directly with each other.

each other.
We do not censure these buyers for making all they can out of this business, for the whole fault rests with the grower for not using the same business propositions in his business to protect his interest that these buyers use in conductisg their business.

The merchants have at times took hold of the local cotton markets and bought their customers' cotton at top prices, but when the merchant went to sell this cotton the local buyers have been known to refuse to take this cotton or allow it to fill mill orders. Is this boycott or is it "courtesy?"

This darned little word "courtesy" is costing the cotton growers entirely too much and we wish Webster had not made or coined it.

We have been told time and again that our local mills were among the many friends of the farmer and yet we are in possession of the fact that some of our largest mills in the Pied-mont section have actually bought or mont section have actually bought or contracted for all the cotton for their next year's use at 7½ cents per pound, thus putting themselves out of the competitive market for cotton and placing the power that could have been used to protect their own people's interest at their own door, into the hands of others far away to depress markets to the injury of the farmer at the door of the local mills. But, they say that all this is nothing but a business proposition. Well, it is now up to the cotton grower to organize themselves into the strongest organization possible and stand up against delivering this cotton at prices the grower never made. Farmers, cotton growers, are you going to deliver the goods at prices to suit others, or will you come to the sid of each other and price your own products?

Farmers' Union Barbecue.

The Farmer's Union Barbecue on 16th August next at Anderson Fair grounds will be an old-time hand-slanking intermingling, how-do-you-come-on love feast, in the interest and for the promotion of our farmers' organization and the concert of action among cotton growers of the whole ganization and the concert of action among cotton growers of the whole South.

This grand rally will no doubt be the grandest gathering of frmers and their friends that we have had in this section in years.

At our last County Farmers' Union meeting at Anderson when the call was made for contributions for the barbecue, the liberality of the farmers and the success of the effort was at once made apparent by individual farmers contributing whole beeves each, until quite a banch of bullocks, yearlings, and calves were hurdled together for the barbecue. Then the sheep, ram, lamb and mutton, shoats, pigs and chickens fairly tumbled over each other to get in on the first round-up for the grand barbecue on 16th August, which insures a grand success at the very beginning.

After the live stock for the barbecue were driven in the hurdle, one enthusiastic and liberal farmer, who, no doubt, had attended many missionary meetings, walked up to the secretary's table and threw down a five dollar bill, and then after calling in all the $5.00 bills in sight he made it in turns for $4.00, $3.00 and on down to fifty cents until a considerable purse of hard cash was piled up to back up the live stock.

The next thing was a resolution asking all local Unions to meet at once in the first sunder the first sunder.

The pledmont Baptist Association, will hold its next session with the Beaverdam is six miles south of Liberty. Let delegates come prepared to atay three days. The information of Liberty and the first sunder the first sunder Spearman.

The following committees are to refer $4.00, $3.00 and on down to fifty cents until a considerable purse of hard cash was piled up to back up the live stock.

The next thing was a resolution asking all ideal. Unions to meet at once and gather in all the contributions of cash and a list of eatables and forward to the special committee, J. M. Payne, J. R. Cotwell and W. H. Glenn, at Anderson, who will receipt for the cash and reserve the list of contributions.

Just here it is well to pitate that this is to be a genuine farmer's barbeoue, and that these three committeemen are not to solicit or canvass for contributions, but simply to receive volunteer contributions from any farmer or farmer's friend for aid in getting up a large barbeoue contribution.

Farmer's Usion Warehouse.

When this subject was called at our last County meeting and the reports from subordinate Unions were all in, the determination to build a Farmer's Warehouse was developed beyond doubt. At this point the preliminary recommendations in the resolution passed at the previous meeting were taken up and put in working shape by appointing Messas. B. Harris and J. B. Douthit to apply for a charter, and amending certain clauses of the previous resolutions. Up to this time.

everything seemed to work harmon-

We find after more deliberate thought in the matter of taking the right to vote on transferring the stock out of the hands of individuals and delegating this power to the directors was wrong; and some of our largest cotton, growns now protest against cotton growers now protest against delegating too much power in the hands of a few men, and we think they have good grounds for taking this position.

The trend of popular opinion on this subject today is against this centralization of power. The people now demand the right of direct vote for U.S. Senators, and recent developments in cotton statistics at Washington demonstrate that the power for good here has been turned into a tremendous loss to cotton growers to whom this work was originally intended to benefit. For another illustration as to how For another illustration as to how this placing of too much power in a few men's hands may cause untold trouble, we only have to refer Farmer's Union men to the intenminable difficulties now holding up the distribution of the $16,000 of the Alliance Exchange funds now hung up in Court.

It goes without saying that if individual owners of this Alliance Exchange stock had the right to come together either by proxy or otherwise, that a solution of all difficulties and a distribution of this money could have been made long ago. But instead of this we are informed a few obstinate directors or leaders will squander most of these people's money in fighting each other. This farmer's warehouse stock is to be made up by farmers and controlled by farmers in accordance with the farmer's own ideas, and it matters not how difficult it is to transfer this stock; in fact, the more difficult it can be made to transfer this stock the more secure it will be for the farmer's interest.

While we are ready to acknowledge all the good that the Alliance done for farmers (and that is much) we are loath to state that it has left a heritage in these "sub-trustee stockholders" that is a stench in the nostrils of farmers and as obnoxious as its name is long. The Farmer's Union must steer clear of all the rocks that wrecked the Alliance. Instead of copying after their mistakes that wrecked them, the Farmer's Union should profit by their looking out for these danger signals.
