Farmers' Union Bureau of Information.

Conducted by the South Carolina Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union. Communications intended for this department should be addressed to J. C. Strubling, P. O. Box 100, Anderson, S. C.

Farmers, Come Let's Get Together and Help Each Other.

If farmers do not take care of themselves by sticking to their organizations, the other crowd will continue to do this thing for them at the other fellow's own price.

Farmers can, and must, come together and save this price for themselves. How is that warehouse business getting along? You may not recollect just now how much loud talking you did about this warehouse matter back yonder, but some others do. Boys, you must pile up the your fortifications will not protect you in times of need.

A Good Move.

Clemson College, through the aid of the government, will at once proceed to establish at Clemson Experiment Station a department of animal industry for the purpose of improving or disseminating the best types of stock in the State suited for the general use of our farmers. This is a very important step in the right direction, and if carried out to completion in a practical way, will do an immense work toward encouraging stock raising and consequent diversification of our farm crop.

This idea of sending out knowledge of improved ideas of breeding improved stock over the State will encourage farmers' sons to remain upon the farm. Clemson now has two hundred and fifteen students in the agricultural class. When these boys have finished their training for agricultural pursuits, the national government is ready to furnish these progressive young men with further aid in the way of a stipend and the new plant of breeding work. Then, when the State complete this work by planting the golden hoofs of the best breeds of stock over the State!

Under this new impetus along the line of progressive farming at Clemson we have a bright hope ahead for our farmers' sons. These golden hoofs, improved seeds and implements in the hands of well-trained minds of South Carolina's own sons we hope will write, not upon the State's own soil, a creditable reputation that all may be proud of.

Cow Peas—Inoculating With Nitrogen Fixing Bacteria.

There is no more interesting question before the progressive Southern farmer today than the enriching of their lands by growing cow peas for grain and hay, and, at the same time, storing an immense amount of nitrogen in the soil for future crops, especially those crops that require large amounts of nitrogen. One farmer in Alabama last year, it is stated, cleared $6,000 on a 400 acre farm of poor land by growing cow peas for hay, while the land will produce fully double the crops this year that the land produced before cow peas were grown on it.

Last season, at considerable expense and labor, we inoculated about eight acres of cow peas with Dr. Moore's nitrogen fixing bacteria, alternating with un inoculated plots, but found absolutely no improvement in the amount of nodules on the roots of the plots, excepting the earlier stages of cow peas on new lands. We also had several comparative tests with alfalfa, but could see no difference between the inoculated and the un inoculated, excepting the first month, at which period the difference in favor of the inoculated was very perceptible, in favor of inoculation on certain characters of soil. Our conclusion is that our Southern soil is already thoroughly inoculated with the cow pea bacteria, but the minds of Southern farmers need inoculating with the importance of the cow pea.

Notice to the Farmers of South Carolina.

You are hereby called to meet in delegated power at Anderson, S. C., May 21, 1906, for the purpose of organizing a preliminary State Union.

Each county will be one delegate for every one hundred members, or majority thereof, the first month, at which there is no County Union, one delegate from each local union. All farmers who are members are invited to attend.

All counties that have no Farmers' Union organization are to send farmer delegates. Please send names of delegates to B. F. Earle, Anderson, S. C., ten days before.

The purpose for which the State Union is called is to adopt a constitution and by-laws to govern the Farmers' Union in South Carolina, and to bring the farmers to a close and secret organization for the purpose of holding and controlling the price of cotton.

tionize the whole Southern farming system if the farmers would take hold of this system with half the energy they display in growing cotton. Professor C. L. Newman, of the Agricultural department at Clemson, is the recognized best authority on the cow pea in this country. He grew at Clemson last season over eighty different varieties and has at other times grown over twenty varieties of the soja bean, and we trust that the board of trustees of Clemson will continue to encourage Prof. Newman in this very important work of improving the cow pea.

A good two-horse disc harrow will throw up about as good cotton bed at one time going as we want. This is good work where land has been broken, and saves a big sight of labor and time. We are not after high cotton beds like we used to be; we must come down about on a level. This plan gives better protection to the moisture in dry times.

The character of the farmer is written or painted all over his farm about this time of the year: If there is not a large amount of green fields of small grain on your farm there is some kind of a green farmer around there.

Secrecy of labor calls for more stock and more machinery and labor implements and richer land. You must go fewer times up and down the rows and prepare one acre to make as much as two did before.

Killed While Turkey Hunting.

Georgetown, April 21.—A very regrettable accident occurred in this county early yesterday morning in the killing of Mr. J. B. Bunch by Mr. D. T. Allen, while turkey hunting. Both men are prosperous farmers living only a few miles from town.

Notwithstanding the fact that the game laws prohibit the shooting of turkeys in this county after April 1st, both Mr. Bunch and Mr. Allen went out early and took positions in some thick woods where turkey signs had been seen the day before. Each man was totally unaware of the presence of the other. Each began yelping to draw the turkeys with gunshot, and so true was the imitation that each man supposed the other a turkey. The real turkeys also responded to the sounds and approached the hunters, when Mr. Allen, seeing a movement and an indistinct object through the leaves, which he thought was surely a turkey gobbler raised his gun and fired. What was his horror to see Mr. Bunch rise from the log on which he was sitting and fall backward. Mr. Allen rushed to the side of the wounded man and asked if he was much hurt. Mr. Bunch replied that he was not only hurt, but was a dead man, and expired within a few minutes. The load of turkey shot had entered his chest and pierced his heart.

Mr. Bunch was a quiet, unobtrusive and industrious citizen and was highly esteemed by all who knew him. His untimely death is a matter of universal regret. He was 40 years of age and has been married several times. His last wife, who was Miss Mary Harrelson, and quite a young woman, was a bride of only a few months.

Mr. Allen is overcome with remorse at the terrible result of his mistake. He and Mr. Bunch had always been the best of friends and were near neighbors. Mr. Allen is an elderly man, probably 60 years of age, and his mistake was caused largely by failing sight, the distance between the two men when the shot was fired being about 50 yards.—The State.

The Race Question in the South.

"People of the North do not understand the race problem," said an East Side man, who has just returned after spending seven years at Nashville, Tenn. "People who go down there soon come to feel and act just as the Southern people do in the matter, and at that there is a higher sense of honor and a better social atmosphere among the white people of the South than there is in the North."

"Only the other day on the street car here I heard a conductor speak to a woman in a manner that would not be tolerated in the South. If such a remark had been made in a street car in Nashville or Atlanta, the fellow would not have got out of that car alive. Indeed, the Southern people would not permit even a colored woman to be treated that way. The Southern people will do more for the colored people than a Northern will. All that they ask is that he keep his place. They will not tolerate the idea of social equality, for to do so would mean that the white people would have to leave the South. Once they get the upper hand and there is no living with them."

"I like the Southern people for their kindness and hospitality. They are not as active in business as the people of the North, but they get more out of life. They live as they go along and if a man is in hard luck they will hold him up instead of crowding him to the wall. And their ideas of chivalry toward women suit me. They have a high sense of honor and shoot quick in its defence."—Toledo Daily Blade.

Mrs. Lena Crabb was accidentally killed by the sheriff of Laurens County, Georgia, on last Thursday while being carried by him to Dublin jail on the charge of abandoning her children. His pistol fell from his pocket and exploded, the ball striking the woman, killing her instantly.

During firing practice in the Caribbean sea there was an explosion in the turret of the battleship Kearsarge. Lieutenants Hudgins and Greame and five sailors were instantly killed and another seaman was fatally injured. The accident was similar to that which occurred on the Missouri two years ago, with about the same casualties.
