

Singular Elopement at Liverpool. About two years ago a gentleman, who had previously been a master mariner, entered into a speculation with some other parties in Liverpool, the result of which was that he went to run the American blockade. Having made some successful "hits" in that way, he realized a considerable amount of money, and it was resolved, for the benefit of all concerned, that he should remain abroad for some time in order to wind up affairs. Just before he left Liverpool he had been married to a lady, who at the time was only twenty years of age, whose personal charms were remarkable, and whose friends are in most respectable positions in society. She was left in a fashionably-furnished house in one of the best streets of Liverpool, and ample provision was made for her maintenance. Added to this, he commenced sending her £50 a month shortly after he left England, and this was continued up to his return, which took place about the beginning of the present month. Two days after his arrival his young and beautiful wife disappeared in the most mysterious manner, and an detective, after some inquiries, made the following astounding discovery: Some friends of the errant wife reside not far from London, and about six months ago she gave out to her friends in Liverpool that she was going on a visit to the former for a couple of months, and she left accordingly. Her servants, in place of going towards London, she no further than Manchester, where, at a noted tavern, she acted as barmaid, and passed as the niece of the landlady of the house. A gentleman well known about Exchange-alley, Cornhill, London, who frequently visited Manchester on business, was in the habit of passing the lady and gentleman in question, which became doubly attractive to him after the advent of the pretty barmaid. After some time, this gentleman left for London, and by a curious coincidence, by the same train, and in the same carriage, the pretty barmaid left Manchester also. This astonishing discovery led to the conclusion that the lady and gentleman had done the same thing at Liverpool, and this supposition proved to be quite correct. The husband and assistant then began an exciting chase, commencing at Lime-street station of the London and Northwestern railway, thence to Manchester, from that to Crowe, and finally to the station at Chalk Farm near London, where a station porter was shown the portrait of the missing lady; and it was at once recognized by him as the likeness of a lady who left that station in company of a gentleman the day after her disappearance from Liverpool. Here, however, all traces of the runaways ended, but it is certain they are not in the metropolitan city, for the gentleman, on leaving London, made arrangements not to visit Exchange-alley, Cornhill, for a couple of months, stating that he was going on a continental tour for that time.

TO THE PUBLIC. THE NEW YORK NEWS HAS BATTLED AGAINST despotism for four years of blood and error in assertion of the sanctity of the Constitution. A patriotism sufficiently broad to embrace both sections has been its only guide, and it refers now with honest pride to its record to show that it has not been in the right or to the left under the violence of arbitrary power. True to its principles as THE NEWS has been through the reign of terror, it challenges public confidence in its honesty and independence for the future. The political transition of the present day opens to THE NEWS a new and wider field of usefulness. Standing now, as it always has, on the inviolability of the Constitution, according to the interpretation of the strict constructionists, it presents a rallying ground for all, in both sections, who are friends of a generous conservatism. An article in a recent issue of exceptional merit occupies a position which makes it the chief mediator in holding up to the party of order in both sections, interests and principles that give breadth and vitality to their alliance. As an inter-sectional agent, devoted to freedom of election to trial by jury, to the sanctity of the habeas corpus, and opposed now, as for four years of terror it has been, to the centralization that dares to trample on the rights of States, North or South, THE NEWS places itself as a candidate for support before the great body of this once free people. The circumstances of the moment make the dissemination of the principles of THE NEWS a duty of individual patriotism. Every man who concurs in its doctrines must, if he entertain a true sense of freedom, do so in no spirit of indifference, but rather with the earnestness of a high trust. Justified, may bound, in his love of liberty to do so, the proprietor places the canvass he makes here of the public generally in the hands of those men who give him the approval of their consciences as his individual agents. Every reader of THE NEWS cannot avoid the conviction of duty which is here pointed out to the citizen under the flag, that he has the right to support upon all of his friends and neighbors who give their earnest sympathies to the cause of "strict construction," inter-sectional conciliation, and all the rights of the citizen under the flag, to the sanctity of the habeas corpus, and the wider power for good which it seeks here through the service of its individual supporters. COMMERCIAL. WILMINGTON, September 20.—There has been but little doing in any branch of business, and transactions have been limited. The rivers are still down and but little produce is coming in on the railroad. We learn that three cars of cotton, consigned to this city were stopped at Marion Court House on the Manchester Railroad by order of the military authorities. Why is this? One of our largest commission houses has taken up the cotton at a station porter in this military division, asking if it is by his order, and that the cotton has been stopped, and for what reason. We do not think that it is the intention of the military authorities to interfere with the arrangements of merchants and planters in producing and shipping cotton, and suppose it is simply an error committed by some one. CRUDE TURPENTINE—Is quiet, with sales of 315 bbls. at $3.50. SPIRITS TURPENTINE.—We can hardly give a quotation for this article to-day—there is none offering.
