Address of President Davis.

DANVILLE, April 5.—The President issued an address this morning to the people, in which he says the General-in-Chief found it necessary to make such movements of the troops as to uncover the capital. It would be unwise to conceal the moral and material injury to our cause resulting from the occupation of the capital by the enemy; it is equally unwise and unworthy of us to allow our own energies to falter or our efforts to become relaxed under reverses, however calamitous. For many months the finest army of the Confederacy, under the command of a leader whose presence inspires equal confidence in the troops and people, has been greatly trammelled by the necessity of keeping constant watch over the approaches to the capital, and has thus been forced to forego more than one opportunity for a promising enterprise. It is for us, my countrymen, to show by our bearing under reverses how wretched has been the self-denial of those who have found us less able to endure misfortune with fortitude than to encounter danger with courage. We have now entered upon a new phase of the struggle; relieved from the necessity of guarding particular points, our army will be free to move from point to point and whip the enemy in detail far from his base. Let us but will it, and we are free. Animated by that confidence in your spirit and fortitude which never yet failed me, I announce to you, fellow-countrymen, that it is my purpose to maintain your cause with my whole heart and soul that I will never consent to abandon to the enemy one foot of the soil of any one of the States of the Confederacy. That noble State, whose ancient renown has been eclipsed by her still more glorious recent history—whose bosom has been bared to receive the main shocks of this war—whose sons and daughters have exhibited heroism so sublime as to render her illustrious in all time to come—that Virginia, with the help of the people and by the blessing of Providence, shall be held and defended, and no peace ever be made with the infamous invaders of her homes, by the sacrifice of any of her rights or territory. If by superiority of numbers we should ever be compelled to abandon or withdraw from her lines, or those of any other border State, again and again will we return, until the buffed and exhausted enemy shall abandon in despair his useless and impossible task of making slaves of people resolved to be free. Let us, then, not despair, my countrymen, but relying on the never-failing mercy and protecting care of our God, let us meet the foe with fresh defiance and with unconquered and unconquerable hearts.

From the South and West.

August, April 5.—Western papers of late dates report the enemy moving through the interior of Alabama in large force from points on the Tennessee River. Two divisions are near Montevallo, commanded by McCook. The enemy in force are near Tuscaloosa. Six miles from Tusculumbia they divided—Jasper, with one column, went towards Tuscaloosa; the other towards Montevallo. McCook's command was at the village of Elyton, which was burnt, together with the Red Mountain Iron Works. The enemy have tapped the telegraph line at unknown points, and are despatching to the Southern office.

Gen. Clanton despatched to his wife, March 28: "Wounded seriously; left by the enemy below Pollard, paroled by the Yankees to report at Barrancas on the 5th April."

The Clarion, of the 27th, states that two columns of Yankees were advancing on Columbus, Miss.

The steamers Gertrude and Natchez collided at the mouth of Spanish River near Mobile, at midnight on Friday, March 27. The Gertrude sank in a few minutes. Her cargo was valued at $2,000,000, consisting of provisions, which belonged to citizens who had purchased to supply themselves during the siege of Mobile—total loss; the Natchez uninjured.

Capt. Vernon Lock, of the privateer Retribution, is in prison at Nassau.

Col. Woodford has been relieved of the command at Charleston, and Col. Guernsey, of New York, appointed his successor. Woodford issued a parting puff to himself and congratulations to the officers, expressing love and glorification that they had become freedmen after long sufferings.

The Savannah Republican, of the 31st March, reports many societies organized in England and sending material assistance for the benefit of the freedmen in the South.
