Negroes and their Late Masters.

The impression is studiously sought to be made by the Southern correspondents of certain journals of the North and West, that the Southern farmers and planters entertain a sullen feeling of revenge toward their late bondsmen, and are only restrained from treating them cruelly by the presence of the Federal troops. There is great and manifest injustice in charges or intimations of this kind. The Southern people cheerfully acknowledge that, as a general thing, their slaves were true and faithful—surprisingly so—throughout the war—a fact that was frequently remarked upon and applauded—and they do not blame the negroes in the least for what has occurred, and they frankly so tell them. Self-interest, too, the great controller of human actions, teaches the late masters and all who wish to avail themselves of the labor of the negroes, now that everything like force is known to be utterly out of the question, that kindness and good treatment, and the motives of gain must be held out to those they wish to retain or employ. It is now seen and felt to be of the utmost importance to all concerned, to the black no less than to the white population of the South, that the kindest and justest feelings should be maintained and kept up between the two classes, and whoever, by word or deed, does aught to disturb this relation, is the enemy of both, especially of the black, who is, and must necessarily continue to be, the weaker party.

As a general rule, the late masters of the negroes are, and, if permitted, will continue to be, the best and truest friends of those who were recently their slaves, and many of the negroes feel and admit that such is the fact. The attachment which existed between them—and, in numerous cases, there was a real, strong and generous attachment—still exists, and will continue to exist to the advantage of both, if not broken up by intrusive and pernicious outside interference. The planters and farmers are fast becoming reconciled to the manumission of their slaves, and some of them begin to hope, if they are not already convinced, that the result will be beneficial to the South at large, if not to the late owners—provided there can be real and substantial peace and a truce to political agitation and disturbance for the future. Whether this shall be the case, and there shall be a happy finality to the agitation and discord, which have disturbed and afflicted this country for so many long and weary years; and whether peace, tranquility and fraternity shall be restored and established, must necessarily depend on the people of the North, and of the great and powerful West, who have it incontestably in their power to say to the fanatical agitators and disturbers everywhere—peace, be still!

Let Northern radicals hold their tongues and forego all interference with what does not concern them, and let the negroes of the South be remitted to the management of the white men of the South, who thoroughly understand their natures and necessities, and we sincerely believe that both races will work harmoniously together for the good of both, and for the common interest of the whole country.

[Richmond Whig.]

Chief Justice Chase's junketing tour with his friends on the Commodore Perry, on the lakes, costs the country $2,000, a bill to that amount having been presented to the Collector of Buffalo sent by him to the Treasury Department and returned with the order to pay it. That's the radical regard for the people's pocket.

NOTICE.

ALL persons who may have at any time, since Gen. Sherman's army passed through this section, taken any cotton from the plantation of Mr. Robert Adams, will please return the same; or, if used, make arrangement for the payment of it with Mr. JOHN P. ADAMS forthwith, or legal proceedings will be commenced against them.
