"The policy of President Johnson," says the Richmond Enquirer, "for the restoration of the States to equal rights in the Union, commends itself to the gratitude and affection of the people of the Southern States. In mitigating the exercise of those rights which conquest gave, he has exhibited a magnanimity and kindness toward the people of these States as great as it was unexpected. He has won their gratitude, and will not fail to receive their cordial support. That he is moving onward in the work of restoration quite as fast as he deems prudent, cannot be doubted, and that he means to make the restoration of the Union the great distinguishing feature of his administration, must be apparent to every one. But the work of restoration applies to individuals as well as to States, and while Mississippi is restored, Jefferson Davis, whom she carried out, languishes in prison. His pardon and liberation would crown the work of restoration with completeness, and leave no issue between the North and the South. His imprisonment agitates the public mind, unsettles national thoughts, and disturbs the harmony of the Union. One-half of the nation would tremble at his trial, the other half would blush at his conviction, and the world would stand aghast at his execution.

"What good ends does his imprisonment serve? Does it make treason odious? Was the memory of Emmett made odious by his execution? Were Louis Blanc, Ledru Rollin, and their fellow-exiles made odious by banishment from France? What impartial jury can try him? What unprejudiced judge can administer justice? Shall loyal men only set upon that jury? Shall only a loyal judge try the case? Then as well condemn him without the formalities of a trial, as bring him before men whose passions and convictions, influenced by the issues of a four years' war, have made them prejudice and pre-decide the case. Jefferson Davis can never be made odious by trial, conviction or execution, or by all combined. There is not one man in these Southern States less guilty of treason or patriotism, whichever it may be called, than Jefferson Davis. He was the agent—the people, the principal and all are guilty in kind and degree. The war was the work of a constitutional construction which the framers left unsettled, and which disturbed the politics of the country from '89 to '60, and which culminated, not in treason, but in blood. That question of constitutional construction was settled fully and finally at Appomattox Court House, by the surrender of General Lee—and the trial of Jefferson Davis would give to it no greater finality. Therefore, in the name of the people of Virginia, we most earnestly ask the President for the liberation of Mr. Davis."

Secretary Seward and the French Minister have had two interviews this week.

GEN. PRICE'S EXILE—HIS EMPLOYMENT AS AN EMIGRANT LAND COMMISSIONER.—The Noticioso, of Vera Cruz, extracts the following from the New York papers:

The Brownsville correspondent of the New York Herald writes, that from a conversation that took place between him and a Confederate officer, he learned that Gen. Price, of Missouri, had taken service under Maximilian, who authorized the General to recruit a cavalry force of thirty thousand men from the late Confederate army. He also learned that several other prominent rebels had received kind favors from the Emperor, whose intentions are to collect a force of at least one hundred thousand rebels, in less than one year, in order to face Gen. Sheridan on the Rio Grande.—La Sociedad.

This will certainly be news to Gen. Price. For information to all concerned, we here state that Gen. Price has no hostile intentions against the United States of America. He came to Mexico as an exile, seeking for himself and family a home; for he had every reason to believe that he would not be permitted to live quietly in his own State. His Majesty the Emperor has appointed Senor Price an agent to examine lands for colonization purposes. In company with Senor Perkins, late of Louisiana, and Senor Harris, late of Tennessee, he is now at Cordova, in the State of Vera Cruz, actively engaged in the duties assigned him.

[Mexican Times, September 30.]

Advices from Western Texas represent that the Confederates who went to Mexico when the trans-Mississippi army surrendered, are running back to their old homes in the State.

An association of capitalists has purchased between three and four thousand acres of the coal and mineral lands near Richmond, and commenced to operate them with success.

It is stated by a Mississippi paper that Benj. G. Humphries is the only Whig ever elected Governor of that State.

A case of practical amalgamation occurred at Lawrence, Kansas, not long since. The couple were driven from the country.

Hon. Howell Cobb has located in Macon for the purpose of practicing law.

An order mustering several general officers out of the service was issued on Friday.
