The Debt of Texas-Texas Not to be Represented in Next Congress.

New ORLEANS, November 10. - Ex-Gov. Pierce, of Texas, says that the friends of Provisional Governor Hamilton say that he will hardly call the State to meet in con-vention before the middle of January next, and the citizens of Texas believe that she will not be represented in the next session of Congress. The debt contracted by Texas amounts to $3,000,000.

From Louisiana. New ORLEANS, November 11.—General Canby has issued an order turning over to the authoritics all the sanitary regulations that have been held by the military since 1962; also, resigning all control over the State levees, the work on them, and the collection of the tax to keep them repaired. He is also withdrawing the provost mar-shals in the Parishes, except in certain cases, and is also stopping the issue of charity rations to persons unconnected with the army. General Fullerton leaves the fixing of the amount of wages between freedmen and their employers for the next year to be re-gulated by the law of supply and demand.

The Fenian Excitement.
WASHINGTON, November 13, 1865.—Mr.
Seward had a long interview with the President to-day, which gave rise to the report that the British Government had made some formal demand on ours in relation to the Fenian movement. The mumor is plansible, if not true. The British Government has been on the "anxious seat" for months. It sent one of its special detectives to this country some time since to furnish all the information he could collect concerning the strength, organization, efficiency and financial ability of the Fenians in America, and the disposition manifested towards the movement by our Government and people. This agent has really learned enough to alarm the Johnny Bulls, and has probably communicated much more on "information and belief." He has made overtures to one of our prominent detectives and endeavored to obtain his assistance by bribery. All these facts warrant the belief that the British authorities are serionsly alarmed, and that they have a seked Mr. Seward to 'define his position."
Toxosro, C. W., November 13.—The Fenian alarm continues.
It has been decided to place a force of volunteers on active service to check Fenian side. The base from errories for the designs and projects of the Jenians.

GENERAL BLAIR REFUSES TO TAKE THE NEW CONSTITUTION OATH .-- Gen. Frank P. Blair appeared yesterday at the Sixth Ward poll, held at the en-gine house on Washington avenue, to recerd his vote for the anti-Consti-tution candidates for Auditor and County Court Judge-Peckham and Dailey, when his ballot was rejected by the Judges of Election, Messrs. Stephen Ridgeley and John S. Thomp-son, because the General refused to accept the Drake infamy known as the new Constitution oath, but offered instead of it an oath prepared by himself, covering the whole ground of constitutional allegiance to the United States and the State of Mis-

General Blair, lafter waiting for se-veral to cast their votes, said: "Gen-tlemen, I offer to cast my vote, and am ready to prove to you I am twenty-one years of age, and have been a resident citizen of the State of Missouri for over twenty years, and that I am otherwise qualified to vote at the present election. Here is my bal-lot, (the General here presented to Judge Ridgeley his ballot.) I have prepared and now offer you an oath of allegiance, which I have subscribed and sworn to. I decline to take the oath prescribed by the new Constitu-tion of Missouri, and desire you to decide that I are antitled to get me decide that I am entitled to cast my ballot without taking said new Con-stitution oath."

Mr. Ridgeley replied: "We can't decide so, General, but must decide exactly the reverse," to which Mr. Thompson assented.

General Blair then said: "Gentlemen, I require you to say whether my ballot is rejected only because I have refused to take the new Constitution oath?"

The Judges answered: "Entirely so; for no other reason; because you refuse to take the Constitution oath. General Blair inquired; "Do you regard me in all other respects as a qualified voter ? Messrs. Ridgeley and Thompson replied: "Certainly; your vote is rejected upon that ground, and that ground only." The ballots for Messrs. Peckham and Daily were then folded by Mr. Ridgeley and marked by him "re-jected," and General Blair quietly left the poll.-St. Louis Republican.

Robert E. Lee. At Lexington, in the State the college erected in his honor should have for President a worthier chief than the one who quietly entered upon his duties just a fortnight ago. The new President is still in the prime of manhood, though already his hair and beard are grey; he has been long accustomed to command; he is fa-miliar with hardships as with fame-has slept for months amid the woods of Virginia, and has crossed the Rap-pahannock Northward at the head of a victorious army; he has been proved alike by good and evil fortune, and, whether when threatening the Federal capital, or when surrendering his sword to a Federal captain, he has ever borne himself as beseemed a man noble alike by ancestry and by nature. The descendant of "Light Horse Harry" has doffed the grey uniform for the garb of a peaceful professor; nor can we own that the change is a degradation, even for Robert Lee. There is a difference in the mode of action, but no alteration in the object, which is simply to render the best service he can to his native State. To that single aim he has never once been unfaithful; and he will still pursue it, we may rest assured, with the old high enthusiasm, tempered by a cautious brain. Throughout the war nothing was more remarkable than Lee's personal influence-the manner in which he impressed every one who approached him. That men with Jackson's purity and earnestness, or with the debonaire and graceful valor of Stuart, should appreciate the illustrious qualities of their leaders, was only natural; but even the humblest soldiers in the ranks felt, though they might not have been able to express the moral power which Lee exerted. The war was, in all conscience, sanguinary enough; but there would have been a very carnival of carnage, a devilish outbreak of all men's fiercest passions had the Southern leader been of different temper. Gallantly as the Con-federates fought, we must never forget that their armies were often composed of somewhat questionable raw material; that the volunteers, with all the instinct of bravery which seldom deserts a dominant class, had likewise many of the vices which are inevitably engendered by the posses-sion of arbitrary and lawless power. Accustomed to the unchecked license of authority, the slaveholders might perchance have been ready enough to give the war a character of internecine hatred ; and it was eminently due to Robert E. Lee that the courtesies and humanities of civilized warfare were, on the whole, observed.

The gentle nature of the man never degenerated into weakness; with a high hand he could restrain excesses, and admirably did he exercise his power. There are no purer pages in the history of the civil war than those which relates to his invasion of Maryland and Pennsylvania, at a time when the temper of the Southern people was sorely tried. Such qualities as he displayed could not fail, in the long run, to win the regard of a manly and affectionate people; and while we find that he was loved like a father by all those who shared his immediate perils, we have not yet forgotten that when the victorious veterans of the North were marching home through Richmond, they burst into a splendid shout of enthusiasm as they recognized, gravely contem-plating them from a curtained window, the familiar form and face of Robert E. Lee.

In a Russian city, far within the heart of the mighty empire whose power he withstood for nearly thirty years, quietly lives au old, grey beard-ed, weak-eyed man, against whom, when he held possession of his moun-tain fastnesses, Grabbe and Woron-zoff vainly hurled their disciplined battalions, and so calm is now the order of his life, that only with a strange thrill of wonder does the traveler hear that he has indeed seen Schamyl the Circassian. The hero of Rome, Verese and Marsala, limps about along the rocky pathways of Caprera. What English tourist on the conti-nent who casually meets George Klapa, remembers immediately the exploits of the man who held Comorn against the Austrians, and once sallied forth as far as Raab, on the road to Vienna itself. The action of these leaders are already passing into history, and may surely be viewed with historic impartiality and calm. Beaten like them, Lee serenely accepts the altered conditions of his life. Had he consulted a poor and outworn feeling of "personal dignity," he would have left the country in which he had held command so absolute, and suffered a disconfiture so over and suffered a discomfiture so over whelming. By men of all parties in Europe, he would have been hailed with acclamation; he would have found it impossible to remain in privacy; he would have felt again the breath of popular applause-but to what end? The welcome must needs have been misinterpreted across the Atlantic, and have tended, however unfairly, to excite an angry feeling. Lee as an exile, as a refugee, would have been a living protest against the Government which proscribed him; president of a college in Virginia, he lends the aid of his illustrious name

A CASE OF PARDON.-A clergyman of this city, a relative of Gen. Elliott, of South Carolina, who defended Fort Sumter, received a letter lately from him, stating that he was at Port Royal, supporting his family by fishing, and he requested the clergyman to endeavor to procure his pardon. It will be remembered that Gen. Gillmore commanded the land attack on the fort. To facilitate the case, for such pardons are granted slowly, as an act of graceful courtesy from one brave soldier to another, and as a deed which would exert a most happy influence, the clergyman wrote to Gen. Gillmore, saying that if he would go in his barge across the bay he would see a fisherman's hut, and in that hut a wounded fisherman, whom he knew very well as the former commander of Fort Sumter, and he requested him to procure the Gen. Gillmore at once repardon. sponded, thanking the clergyman for the suggestion, and sending a letter to the President, asking the pardon as a personal favor. The clergyman saw the President a few days ago, and the pardon · granted, and will be sent to him as soon as it can be hastened through the necessary official bureaus. This pardon, the Attorney-General told the clergyman, will secure to Gen. Elliott the immediate restoration of his lands close to which his fisherman's but now stands.

CRIME IN HIGH LIFE IN CANADA The Hamilton Times, Upper Canada, in the following paragraph, gives an intimation of a deplorable state of society in Canada—the result of official corruption and of the deference paid in British dependencies, as at home, to a spurious aristocracy :

RECOGNIZING REBEL MONEY-The Lebanon Register says that at the October term of the Circuit Court for Cannon County, 1865, a suit was tried which was predicated upon the promissory note, payable in Confederate money, due in November, 1863. Judge Cooper held that inasmuch as the United States had acknowledged the Confederate States a belligerent power, a contra t, payable in Confed-erate money, made in a locality that was in the military occupation of the Confederates, would be valid and binding upon the parties, and that the plaintiff would be entitled to recover whatever the proof showed the Confederate money to be worth at the time the note fell due.

BELGIAN TROOPS FOR MEXICO, -The Meuse, of Belgium, October 23, pub-lishes the subjoined:

"Negotiations have been entered into and adopted, in principle, for the formation of a new corps of troops for the Emperor Maximilian in Mexico, consisting of a regiment of cavalry, composed o seven squadrons, of composed o seven squadrons, of which a portion of one would remain in Belgium to form the depot. The command will, it is said, be given to the Major of the regiment of Guides at Brussels, who would have the rank of Colonel. Another officer of the same corps would be appointed Lieu-tenant-Colonel. The first two squadrons will be ready to leave in January.

Great excitement was caused at Jackson, Miss., by a most infamous outrage upon Drury J. Brown, a respectable citizen, by prominent and respectable citizen, Captain Peck, Provost Marshal of the negro bureau. Peck attempted to use his authority to rob Mr. Brown, and Brown applied to headquarters for relief. Upon his return he was for relief. Upon his return he was assaulted by the Captain, and after some difficulty he called on his negro guard to seize Brown, which they did, and dragged him in the most brutal manner by the heels to the guard house. The outrage was so infamous that the citizens rose en masse and demanded Mr. Brown's release, which was granted, and the brave captain fled from the scene of danger.

When the train had passed, the cow lay with her head cut off, and the little dog with his tail cut off, sat between the rails looking after the re-tiring cars with a face indicative of the most intense astonishment and disgust.
