As we have seen various conflicting As we have seen various conflicting statements in reference to the movements of Mr. Mitchell, we copy the following from the Richmond Enquirer, which may be relied upon: "This distinguished gentleman, who came to this city after his recent release from confinement in Fortress Monroe, visited Washington city a few days visited Washington city a few days ago, and after a very short sojourn there, returned to this place and immediately took passage for New York, on his way to France. We are not advised as to whether he leaves this country permanently or only temporarily. Whatever may be the case, we are sure he carries with him the good wishes of all our citizens."

Some idea of the extent of the oyster trade may be formed from the fact, as stated in the newspapers of Norfolk, that the shipments of oysters from that city amount to between 1,200 and 1,500 barrels each trip of the steamers, and about the same to Boston, and the two lines of Balti-more steamers take daily an average of about 1 000 boweds of about 1,000 barrels.
