A singular man was the Bishop of Havana, whose death is just announced by telegraph. The despatch tells us that this Bishop had to be buried by public subscription, as he left nothing, having given all his possessions to the poor. Queer, was it not? Some people will say he was a very foolish man. He had plenty of chances to make money, which he might have put out at interest till it grew to be a fortune. He had a good salary, which he might have hoarded up, and by which he might have enriched his heirs. But, instead of doing any of these things, this singular Bishop had given all of his possessions to the poor, not leaving even enough to pay the expenses of his funeral. He died of the vomito, which is raging in Havana. He did not run away from the city because the vomito raged in it, but remained there for the sake of his flock, who were falling victims to it.

How a Girl Described the Centennial.—The following is a verbatim copy of an expressive letter a young lady at the centennial wrote to her mother.

Philadelphia, June, 1876.
Dear mother: Oh! Oh!! Oh!!!
Oh!!!! O-o-o-o-o-o-o-o h!!!!!
Your affectionate daughter,
MARY.

Mrs. Rebecca McLees, of Anderson, died last week.
