The Court of Appeals sat in full gown on Monday and the few cases brought up will be quickly disposed of, the unhappy issue docket of the Com. The prodigious income of the value of real property in Charleston, especially of a certain kind, is the subject of general comment.-Tenements which but a year since hardly paid for the necessary repairs, are yielding good incomes to their owners. The Statue, which was constructed by Clark Mills, E-q., is placed upon an immense marble platform is thus described by a correspondent of the New York Herald :

"It is not saying too much to assert that there is no equestrian statue in the world equal to it. "It is not saying too much to assort that there is no equestrian statue in the world equal to it. I have seen most of the celebrated statues in the Old World, and understand that comparative merits of a'l; but I never saw anything, nor could I imagine anything, so like a living ani-mal. Its proportions, the anatomy, the attitude, and the action, is so perfect and life-like, that it mal. Its proportions, the anatomy, the attitude, and the action, is so perfect and life-like, that it scarcely seems an inanimate thing. Every mus-cle is in full play, and drawn up with the force of an excited and rampant horse. With its eye of fire and expanded uostril, breathing impatient fierceness, it looks, to use the poetie language of ture. Scripture, "terrible." The artist has fully realized the ancient and sacred poet's grand conception of a warhorse. There is no part of it, from the beautiful and fierce head to We very hair of the tail and the hoof, that it is not full of expression. Beyond all question it is, in point of mer-it, the first equestrian statue in the world. Those who were most intimately acquainted with Gen-eral Jackson, say that the likeness of the old hero Beyond all question it is, in point of meris excellent, and that dressed in precisely the same uniform he wore at the battle of New Or-leans, the whole figure looks livingly natural,--My astonishment is not less than my admiration. Here is a man who never saw a statue-who never was in Europe-who never studied under any of the great artists, nor ever saw their works; he, by the force of his own native genius and indomitable perseverance against the greatest difficulties, has, in this great work, outstripped all the genius of the Old World. "But the most striking feature of this colossal statue is the whole group being balanced and resting on the hind fect alone. There is no other support. The tail is thrown up, and the fore feet raised in a rearing attitude. Here is a mass of metal, thirty-five thousand pounds weight, balanced on the bind feet of the horse, and stands as immovable as the pedestal itself. It was considered a great triamph of art in supporting the world-renowned statue of Peter the Great, at St. Petersburg, which is only about a thousand pounds heavier than this one, by its hind feet and tail alone. The English papers speak in high terms of the artist of the Wellington statue, at Edinburg, for having succeeded in sustaining that great statue in the same way, that is, by fastening the tail. This must always give a fastening the tail. This must always give a tame, unnatural appearance to the horse. If the artists of Europe think they have done some-thing great—if the Russians think it a great merit in their statue, which cost nearly a million dollars and eighteen years labor—if the English boast of their Wellington statue-what shall w Americans say of our artist, who, by rightly pla cing the centre of gravity, and consequently giving the most natural attitude to the horse, has made his statue to stand without any other sup- Paints, Oils, Spirits Turpentine, &c.
