LINES.

BY MRS. SARAH T. POLTON If I was the light of the brightest star That harns in the zenith now I would wander down from my home afar To kiss thy radiant brow;

If I were the breath of a fragrant flower With a viewless wing and free, I would steal away from the fairest bower,

And live, love, but for thee.

If I were the soul of bewitching song, With a moving, melting tone, I would float from the gay and the tless throng,

And soothe thy soul alone;
If I were a charm by a fancy wrought, I would bind thee with a sign, And never again should a gloomy thought O'ershadow thy spirit's shrine.

If I were a memory past alloy, I would linger where thou art: If I were the thought of abiding joy, I would nestle in thy beart; If I were the hope with the megic light

That makes the future fair, I would make thy path on earth as bright As the paths of the angels are.

AN OLD STORY.

BY MRS L. H. SIGOURNEY. Says Tom to Jem, as forth they went, To walk, one evening fine. "I wish the sky a great green field, And all that pasture mine.

"And I," says Jem, "wish yonder stars, That there so idly shine, Were every one a good fat ox, And all those oxen mine."

"Where would your herd of cattle graze?" 'Why, in your pasture fair," "They should not, that's a fact." said Tom; "They should not, I declare!"

With that they frowned, and struck, and fought, And fiercely stood at bay, And for a foolish fancy cast Their old regard away.

And many a war, on broader scale, Hath stained the earth with gore, For castles in the air, that fell Before the strife was o'er.

For the Farmers.

Farmers raise your own Hogs. The wretched policy, pursued at the South simost from the time whereof the "memory of man runneth not to the contrary," of raising cotton to buy hogs, horses and mules with to the neglect of other important productions of the farm, has been often commented upon and as often condemned by the agricultural and newspaper-press, and yet despite all the wretched policy is still persued. The high prices at which hogs, horses and mules from the West are frequently sold, one would impress upon the minds of our farmers and planters as with the diamond point, the importance of a radical change in their system of farming. Yet they go on in the old beaten path, heedless of the impressive lessons of experience. For years they have submitted to the degrading position of "hewers of wood and drawers of water" to the Western States, and altho' told 'with line upon line and precept upon precept,' of their independence yet they seem insensible to their slavish condition and make no effort to improve it. They occupy towards the stock raisers of the West. the miserable relation of tributaries. For them do they carelessly toil. To fill their pockets they impoverish their lands exhaust their own energies and the strength of their slaves, and live hard feeding almost solely upon the bread and meat furnished them by their inexorable task-masters and denying themselves the cheap luxuries of the dairy and garden. Scarce a fruit tree worthy of the name adorns their homesteads, only a few mangy runts of hogs to be seen about their premises almost too poor to drag themselves from the fence corner to feed upon the scant grass which nature has kindly provided for them. And such cows as may be seen stalking about the farm of a cold winter's day it were impossible to describe, whose every motion is intently watched by the bazzards in momentary expectation that they will drop down and die and furaish them a scant meal .-And such insipid milk as these poor kice yield with their life cannot with any propriety be cal Ted milk. The little ball of butter that may be extracted from it by dist of hard preserving churning, is as white and insipid as the milk it self. And who of the young folks have ever seen a home made cheese? We have been "man and boy for thirty nine years" and have never seen one. But we are wandering.

For the encouragement of other farmers to at least raise their own meat, we have been kindly farnished by Mr. Henry Borton, an excellent neighbor and most su-cessful planter in this District, with a list containing the weights of a number of hogs killed by him this winter. From this we glean the following particulars. Mr. Burton killed twenty two hogs two years old, the average weight which was nearly 351 lbs. The heaviest of this lot weighed 434 lbs He also killed one fourteen months old which weighed 310 lbs.. Fifteen of one year old av erage 177 1 8 lbs., the heaviest weighing 212 lbs. Some of our readers will recollect the monstrous hog Mr. Burton exhibited at the last Agriculturial Fair at this place. Having prepared him properly and fattened him as well as an overflowing corn crib would enable him he killed him the 234 of last month and he weighed gross 790 lbs., neat 701 lbs. We have forgotton his age; if we mistake not he was three years old. The whole number of hogs killed by Mr. Burton of his own raising was 71. averaging 282 14 lbs. a head. Now is not Mr. Burton's success encouraging to oth ers to follow his example ? He made a large cotton crop too, plenty of corn of course and an abundande of every thing else that can be raised on a farm. - Newberry Sentinel.

From the Albany Cultivator.

Management and Economy.

It is a subject worthy of inquiry, why some farmers, with only moderate means and with the growth of no extraordinary crops, make handsome yearly profits, while others with larger products in certain cases, accomplish little or nothing as an aggregate gain. The answer to this problem will doubt ess be afforded by the superior m mage nent in the arrangement of the complex machinery, in conducting the multifarous work of the farm. We believe that a bigd's eye view of an entire year's operation, would often greatly assist the farmer in improving his farms arrangements. and perhaps a few very brief suggestions may, at the present season of the year, afford some valuable assistance in accomplishing this pur-

the Charlotte and will be mederate comes, to obtain from a given quantity of land consumption of capital. To secure this result the following points should be attended

1. The land must be in such condition as to admit of working at all times, or nearly so, so that men and teams may not be standing idle, in waiting for the land to acquire a suitable degree of dryness. Hence if naturally wet it must be well under drained.

2. Its condition should be such as to admit of the application of manure to good advantage by thorough intermixture and otherwise-and not to render it useless by being enveloped with water or water soaked earth.

3. A high degree of fertility should be maintained-as the same labor in that case will yield a larger result.

4. A thorough eradication of weeds and their seeds, will save much subsequent labor in extending against them, as well as to save much of the fertility of the soil from waste in their useles growth.

5. A saving of the materials of manure should be carefully attended to, as one-half at least of the solid and liquid portions are usually wasted by a neglect to provide absorbants or reservoirs.

6. Selecting crops, and selecting a proper proportion of each, is of the highest consequence. The market value of one crop may be higher than that of another but if it draws hard on the strength of the soil, or costs much labor, or if the labor be required at a time when there are other important drafts upon it, such a crop should not be often repeated.

7. Everything should be done as cheaply as possible, for which purpose crops should be ar ranged so as to distribute the labor, equally through the year, that men and teams may not be idle at one period, and hardly driven at another, or in other words, that too much business may at times accumulate for its thorough completion in season. It frequently happens that the difference between profits and loss depends on this alone.

8. Nothing is more important than the distribution of crops in a rotation, as they exhaust the soil differently, or what one takes from the land, another leaves; hence the greater variety of farm product, the more perfectly the balance will be maintained in the soil. For example, wheat, barley oats, regarded as silica plants, or those which consume more largely the soluble flinty portions; peas, beans, and clover, are lime plants; potatoes, and turnips are potash plants; these different classes should be distributed so as to preserve the ingredients of the soil, if we may use the term, in equilibrium. To preserve also a clean state of land, sowed and hoed crops should be alternate with each other.

9. A system comprising a proper intermix ture of tillage and grass crops and raising domestic animals, should be carefully made out and adopted. Grain crops often afford the righest immediate profit, but domestic animals serve the indispensible purpose of supplying manure; hence, in estimating the profit of raising and fattening cattle, sheep and swine, the very important means they serve in providing pabulum for tillage crop should be carefully taken into account, a thing too often thrown entirely out of the question.

We briefly mention these few points in suc cessful farming, not as anything new but for the purpose of recalling the attention of farmers, who, by careful observation and accurate records, can arrange the details of adjusting their own operations, better than by any particular rules we could lay down for their gui

Professor Alexander C. Barry's TRICOPHEROUS.

OR Medicated Compound, for preserving, fastening, softening and promoting the growth of the hair, cleansing the head, and curing diseases of the skin, and external cuts, bruises, &c. The common consent and external cuts, bruises, &c. The common consent of all who have used Barry's Tricopherous, whether for the improvement and invigoration of the hair, or for eruptions, cuts, bruises, &c., places it at the head of all preparations intended for like purposes. This is no ill considered assertion. Figures and facts bear it out. The sales average a millions of bottles a year: the receipts, in cash, $100,000. This year the business will exceed that amount. The number of orders which daily arrive at the depot and manufactory, 137 Broadway, New York, addressed to Professor Barry, enclosing cash, and requiring immediate attention, would scarcely be believed. The wholesale demand is from 2,000 to 3.000 bottles a day, probably exceeding that of all the other hair preparations conjoined. The popularity of the article everywhere, and the liberal terms to dealers, combine to increase its sales with great rapidity; and improvements in its composition, made at considerable expense, adds to its repu-tation as well as its intrinsic value. For sale wholesale and retail, by the principal merchants and druggists throughout the United States and Canada, Mexico, West Indies, Great Britain and France, and by Dortch, Jones & Co., Camden.
