Selected Poetry.

SATURDAY EVENING How sweet the evening shadows fall, Advancing from the west; As ends the weary week of toil, And comes the day of rest, Bright o'er the earth the star of eve Her radiant beauty sheds; And myriad sisters calmly weave Their light around our heads.

The world's hard contest close; The holy hours with God begin; Yield thee to sweet repose.

Rest, man, from labor; rest from sin;

Pright o'er the earth the morning ray Its sacred light will cast; Fair emblem of the glorious day That evermore shall last.

Turnip Culture in the South.

This vegetable, like almost every other kind, requires a different culture in the South, from that which it gets at the North. Our winters are so mild, that the turnip in some horse turning plow, taking from the ground as of its varieties, will grow through the whole many roots as you may want to plant elsewhere, winter, and the careful cultivator, may have never fearing but what there will be an abunturnips fit for the table every month in the dant supply left on the old patch.

For the first fall crop, plant the early white Dutch; sow as soon after the twentieth of July as a season offers to vegetate the seeds; for garden culture, sow in drills; for field culture sow broad cast. For late crop, sow the red top, and where tops are an object as well as good roots, sow the large English Norfolk.— The immense amount of foliage, with its large succelent stem, which this turnip produces; should commend it to more general culture, especially for plantation uses. But of all the turnips for Southern soils and Southern climes, commend us to the Rutaba; like all other varieties of the turnip, they require rich ground; lands that have been trodden by cattle, well and deeply plowed, suits all the turnip tribe; it highly, dig in the manure full a spade deep, but any manure that is stimulating, well turn- rake fine, and with a hoe form ridges 3 feet apart, ed under, will answer. Guano answers a capi- 4 inches high. On the north side of these ridges tal purpose, but should be well turned under set out your plants, 6 inches apart. This close-Three hundred pounds to the acre will pay well in the increased production of roots. The advantage the Rutabaga has over all other turnips, is the fact that it has but little disposition to seed in this climate, consequently its it is intended that the plants left for heading, roots remain firm and sweet, long after the shall stand 2 feet apart ultimately. Towards common turnip has become pithy and worth- the latter part of November, place stable manure less; its tops are also more valuable, fully equal along the line of plants; this will afford protection through the winter. In the spring, as soon to the best collards.

We last year took a piece of new pine land, less than half an acre, cowpenned it, and plowed it every good rain, from April till July. On the twenty-ninth day of July, we mixed half so as to leave them 2 feet apart, as you may need a pound each, of early white Dutch and Ruta- collards for use, work them as they may require baga turnip seed in a bushel of plaster, sowed broadcast, and rolled them in with a heavy cast | er, and you cannot fail to have an ample supply iron roller. The first day of September, our market wagon had a load of fine white turnips in the market, and continued daily to carry them until we had sold one hundred dollars' worth of white turnips, besides supplying a large family; as soon as the white turnips were gone, the Ratabagas took a start, and were fit for the table and stock in October; continuing to grow through the whole winter and spring, keeping in good order some thirty head of cat- aforesaid, I will offer for sale at public outcry, before tle, supplying a large family; preserving all their the Court House door in Camden, on the 1st Monday good qualities until the first of May, when, in in August next, the house and lots on Broad Street good qualities until the first of May, when, in in the town of Camden, belonging to the estate of Mrs. clearing the ground for a garden patch, we pulled some fifty bushels for the hogs.

Remember to plow the ground deep and aften before planting, and look to it in season, for turnip time is at hand.

We would not recommend sowing the Ru tabagas broad cast as a general thing, but where lands are entirely new, and have been made mellow with the plow, it answers every purpose, as the experiment above will justify. Soil of the South.

From the Southern Cultivator.

Guinea Grass-Its Culture and Uses. MESSRS. EDITORS :- In looking over the April No. of the Southern Cultivator, I was forcibly struck with an article from DeBow's Review, which seems to have been written by Dr. Withers, and headed "Cultivation of Grasses at the South." This is a most important subject, and one about which our Southern farmers seem to be as indifferent as though their cribs and barns were supplied all the time with an inexhaustible stock of provisions; and yet annually most of them are completely run ashore; the highest been formed between the undersigned mentioned evidence of which may be seen in the sad condie within said Certificate, under the name of DOUGLAS NESBIT. The general nature of the business to be tion of the poor mules and horses before their crops are laid by. There is scarcely a farm in PASSENGERS AND THE PRODUCTS OF THE the South upon which at least a few acres of SOIL AND MERCHANDIZE, in and by the steamer swamp land cannot be found which, if propedy Marlboro and Lighters, (to be owned by the said Partprepared and sown in Red Grass, (one of the best hay grasses upon wet land I have ever seen, yielding two good heavy crops annually) would places, and all intermediate landings and stopping places, and for the towage of vessels in the said Ports.

But certainly there is no farm of any extent upon which there is no farm of any extent upon which are the control of the a few acres of upland could not be made rich as JOSEPH JOHNSON, jr., (firm of Cameron, Mustard a garden and planted in Guinea grass. This brings me to the subject for which I set out, which was, not to give you a chapter on grasses, which was, not to give you a chapter on grasses, but to endorse Doct. to my stables and milch cows, and feed it as a green crop, or only partially cured. I feel satisin any country, except the Means grass, which, as I said once before, is its twin brother in appearance. No one can distinguish them by the eye; but there is this important difference between them. The Guinea grass produces no seed, though it seems to have all the seed vessels and blooms necessary to produce them; while the Means grass produces a wonderful quantity of seed, and if you allow a patch of it as big as a garden to get upon your place, it is as good as a warrantee title to the whole farm eventually, and greatly to the injury of the owner. Persons desirous of propagating the Guinea grass, should be careful to avoid the other. I send you by the stage a bundle of roots of the genuine article. - Make the ground, upon which you plant it, rich, have it thoroughly pulverised and subsoiled, plant in rows about 2 or 2 1-2 feet apart by laying the roots in the furrow lengthwise, and cover about as deep as you would cover corn. It will need no cultivation except to pull up occasionally a straggling weed or something of the kind. Before the summer is over the grass will have complete possession of the ground. It will be all the better by mowing as soon as the seythe can get hold of it. All you will have to do to continue it on the same ground as long as you please, is to add a heavy top dressing of manure every February or March,

PREPARATION OF THE CABBAGE BED .- Influenced by a desire to put you in the way of securing a supply of Cabbages for use early next summer, we advised you last month to sow a bed of sorts to raise the plants. Now, if you took our advice, those plants are nearly ready to be set out, so that the next thing in order is, to prepare the bed for their reception, which we shall now do. Select a loamy, dry bed, manure ness is necessary to provide against destruction by frost; so also, should the plants escape the frost, they will afford you many messes of greens and collards in spring from the thinnings out, as as the frost is out of the ground, haul down the first working of the plants. Thin out afterwards,
