Selected Poetry.

From the Southern Christian Advocate. A FRAGMENT.

BY LIZZIE CLARENDON. There came a rush of menory o'er me,

And-I wept-I wept!-Sweetly as an infant's slumber. Gently as the close of day,

Softly as an angel number, Her pure spirit passed away. Love of earth no more could bind her, Hope had ceased her syren song, On the heaven—(where may we find her!) All her thoughts had centered long, Friends most cherished wept around her, Mother, Father, Sister,—all

To whom ties of nature bound her. Fondly on her name did call. While his agony, who loved her With a love most deep and pure, As death slowly, surely moved her Mortal man could scarce endure

For the tiny, pallid faces
Of the children of her heart, As they trembled in their places, Struck his soul with keenest dart, Helplessly they clustered near him, With their look of wondering grief Fixed on her who once could cheer them With an instant, sweet relief.

Though she cared for those who tarried On this lone and cheerless shore, With her best affections married To that land she leaves no more Tears of friends could not detain her When her passport she had gained Though we struggled to retain her, Till our grief her spirit pained. With her vision fixed above us, Far above our mortal ken, She could feel the woe that moved us,

But it failed to move her then, Earthlyties had all been parted By a kind and tender hand, So that her pure spirit started Griefless to that "better land." Mary-sister!-in thy heaven

Surely thou must think of me! Love like ours could not be riven Though the death-stroke fell on thee!-Though thy life was crushed with thee, And thy gentle heart was stilled,-Not the tomb itself could win thee From what once thy soul had filled!-And if yet thou thinkest on me With the tenderness of yore,

If from heaven thy gaze bath found me, Lingering on the earthly shore,-Mary! sister!-when the hours Of my little life are past, Surely, surely love like ours Will be mingled one at last! Woodville, Richland Dist., S. C.

Summer Tillage of Growing Crops. Advantages of frequent stirring of the Soil. The benefits of deep and thorough pulverization of the soil before planting a crop are beginning to be well understood by most farmers, but only a few seem to have any distinct idea of the importance of keeping the surface of the ground mellow by frequent stirring between the growing plants, except so far as may be necessary to prevent the growth of weeds-and even this we should judge is not deemed of much consequence by some who call themselves farmers. We propose therefore to state in few words a few of the advantages of frequent tillage, or maintaining a mellow surface among growing crops; and we hope that many of our readers will speedily test by experience the truth of our suggestion.

1. As a preventive of injury from drouth, frequent stirring of soil is of great advantage-and in our sunny climate more or less injury to crops is caused by drouth almost every summer. A mellow surface allows the rains to descend into the soil, instead of running off into gullies and streams; it also prevents the rapid evaporation or return of moisture from the soil into the atground, and by presenting a vastly greater amount of particles becoming quickly cool at night, condense vapor and cause dew, while a hard surface gives out the warmth received during the day and thus prevents the formation of dew. Every person must have observed that more dew falls on a mellow surface than on a hard one, and the soil beneath remains moist much longer during a severe drouth.

2. It enriches the soil, and thereby increases the growth of the crop. This is done by allowing the rains to descend into the soil as above stated, and thereby the ammonia which summer rains always contain, is absorbent and made available to the roots of plants, instead of being clayey and loamy soils to absorb ammonia is one of the most valuable discoveries which chemical science has made for agriculture. We shall speak of this more fully at another time.

3. The nutritive elements in the soil are rendered more available, by the admission of air, as well as moisture to the roots of plants. Much of the food of plants, like carbon, is either absorbed by the roots in a gaseous form, or is rendered soluble by the action of gasses of fermentation in which atmospheric air is a necessary agent; ly of but little advantage in clayey soils where the air has not free access, and it is measurably the same in dry soils when the surface becomes baked and hard.

The destruction of weeds. We should not deem it necessary to speak of this, did we not find some farmers still holding to the mistaken notion that weeds are an advantage in shading Joseph Johnson, jr., (firm of Cameron, Mustard the ground in time of drouth! Let such men & Co.,) of Charleston, State aforesaid, each of which consider that every weed acts as a suction pump, firms has contributed to the common stock of the Partdrawing moisture from beneath the surface, and sending it off by evaporation into air, and also absorbing nutriment from the soil-then the advantages of their destruction by frequent hocing | ER, B. M. STROBEL, all of Charleston aforesaid, the &c., we think must be obvious.

There are several other advantages, as the preservation of a more equal temperature in soils that are frequently stirred, &c., but fearing that II. DOUGLAS, of Bennettsville, State aforesaid, the former of whom has contributed eleven hundred and this busy season, we will not say more at present. Ohio Cultivator.

Balky Horses. N. D. Redpath, in the Raral New Yorker, DOUGLAS NESBIT, says: "Balky, or jibbish horses, are not only a R. H. DISHER, source of great annoyance, but too frequently G. R. RICHARDS, endanger the property and peril the lives of their owners. An East India gentleman one day took his seat in one of the omnibuses, in London, but at the time of starting all the efforts of the driver proved unavailing, owing to a balky horse attached to the vehicle. The poor animal became more and more restive in proportion to the tortures inflicted apon him by the driver, and several other whipmen who assisted on the oceasion. The strict became blocked up with spectators, and the interception of other carriages. Great danger was to be appreheuded. The East India gentleman, above referred to, suggested to the driver and his assistants, that | June 21-tf.

if they would try the East India method of fastening a cord to the horse's fore-foot, and cause a person to pull forward, the animal would start right away. The suggestion was received with contempt. However, after all other efforts failed, a long cord was attached to the animal's fore foot, and the moment the man gave a strong oull, the horse started off as if nothing had been the matter. The philosophy of the case seems to be that the animal, thrown off the centre of gravity by the propulsion forward, is taken by surprise and obliged to start. Try it."

From the Southern Cultivator. How Fruit Trees should be Trained in the South. Messas, Enrors-The subject of Pomology is one of deep interest to the farmer. It is a subject that should occupy the attention of every person who is the proprietor of one aere of ground, inasmuch as the same amount of land cannot be made to produce as much in any other crop as in one of choice fruit trees. It is a subject that has occupied the attention of ama-teurs in every age of the world, from the time our first parents were placed in the Garden of Eden down to the present day. Volume after volume has been written, in which every subject pertaining to the science has been fully and ably discussed. But when we consider the latitude in which their observations were made, will the question not arise, are they suited to our own dear sunny clime? To which my own observations compel me to answer in the negative; and I think the experience of others will bear me out in what I say. To obviate the most prominent difficulties with which we have to contend, I would recommend low training of the trees, which should be commenced when the trees are young; say when they have attained a height of three feet, they should be cut off with a sharp knife, within two feet of the ground, so that two or three branches may be thrown out to form a head. It sometimes happens that there is but one shoot thrown out; when this is the case, it should be cut back to encourage others. If the tree has been grafted in the spring and properly cultivated it will have attained a proper size to be cut by the first of the following July : but if not done then the operation should be deferred until the next spring; and all shoots at the base, to within three or four buds of the cut, should, as they appear, be rubbed off, to encourage those intended for leading branches. We will suppose the tree now to be one year old from the graft, with side branches 12 to 18 inches in length. They should now be cut back to within 6 or 8 buds of their base, and if there is three leading shoots, encourage two buds on each one; if there is but two, encourage three on each, so as to give the two about six leading branches, which will be sufficient to form a head. When trees are trained in this manner they afford a dense shade to the surrounding soil, killing out the weeds and grass, and thereby serving the double purpose of mulching and cultivation.

But the advantages do not end here; the flavor of the fruit is much improved by this mode of training, while it can be picked by hand, which alone should recommend it before all others.

And still another important advantage of being able to stand our high winds without the roots being turned where their branches should be. If any of the branches lie on the ground they should either be supported by props or pruned off. But this will never be the case unless the tree is very heavily laden with fruit .-One tree trained in this way is worth a half dozen long-shanked, top-heavy bean poles, for another important reason, that they are exempt from nearly all diseases that high trained trees are subject to, such as black knots, blisters, blight. &c.

That the finest fruit can be raised in the South, beneath the scorching rays of the god of DOLOGNA SAUSAGES, Smoked Tongues, Supemosphere, and in dry weather it absorbs a great- day, is no longer a problem. . In fact some vaer amount of moisture in the form of dew by al. rieties have greatly improved by a removal to lowing the air which is loaded with moisture at the South. As an instance, the Seckel, Bartnight to descend a considerable depth into the lett, Beurre Diel, and several other varieties of Pears, improve both in size and flavor; as also the Peach in all its varieties. The Cherry, Nectarine, Apricot, and some varieties of the Plum, are improved; but I regret to say it is not the ease with the Apple. Some kinds seem to hold their own pretty well, while others are utterly W. H. BURFORD, M. D. worthless.

> Professor Alexander C. Barry's TRICOPHEROUS,

OR Medicated Compound, for preserving, fastening, softening and promoting the growth of the hair, cleansing the head, and curing diseases of the skin, and external cuts, bruises, &c. The common consent of all who have used Barry's Tricopherous, whether for the improvement and invigoration of the hair, or for eruptions, cuts, bruises, &c., places it at the head of all preparations intended for like purposes. This is no ill considered assertion. Figures and facts bear it out. The sales average a millions of bottles a year: the receipts, in cash, $100,000. This year the ness will exceed that amount. The number of orders which daily arrive at the depot and manufactory, 137 Broadway, New York, addressed to Professor Barry, enclosing cash, and requiring immediate attention would scarcely be believed. The wholesale demand s from 2,000 to 3.000 bottles a day, probably exceeding that of all the other hair preparations conjoined. The popularity of the article everywhere, and the liberal terms to dealers, combine to increase its sales with great rapidity; and improvements in its compo-sition, made at considerable expense, adds to its repulation as well as its intrinsic value.
