Selected Poetry.

A BETTER HOME.

I sigh for a better home. Than this poor world can give, Where troubles never come, Where sorrow eannot live; Here grief, and toil, and pain, And wild, distracting care, And many an earthly bane, Mixed with our comforts are.

> O for a resting place Of tranquil, calm repose, Far from this dizzy maze, This weary world of woes; To search from pole to pole, And rest you cannot find-Rest for the weary soul, The troubled, burdened mind.

I shall not always stay On this cold, dreary shore; The hope of a better day Bids me sigh and grieve no more. It bids me patiently endure The ills of this short life, And then I shall a rest secure From its turmoil and strife.

It points me to a land Where all are pure and blest-Where the wicked cannot stand, And the weary are at rest; No tears are there, or sighs-'Tis the spirit's blest abode, A mansion in the skies, The paradise of God.

for the Farmers.

From the American Cotton Planter. Irish Potatoes.

DR. Croun-Dear Sir: Being by nature half an Irishman, and baving become, from necessity, almost a thorough bred son of Erin, at least so far as a diet of praties and milk can change the nature of a native born Carolinian, I propose, for the benefit of your private cor respondent, to furnish you my mode of rearing and preserving through the winter, the same. It is notorious that the Irish potatoe is a general lover of moisture, the heaviest crops being uniformly raised in wet seasons. This fact suggests the propriety of keeping the ground, or soil, always moist; and the mode is, I conceive, the following: thoroughly polverise and enrich your soil to the depth of 18 or 20 inches, or deeper if you please; trench your ground with a hoe or spade about twhenty inches apart, each trench being eight inches deep and from 6 to 8 inches wide; place your cuttings "right side up with care" in bottom of trench, sprinkling or scattering hogs hair or cover them, filling up the trench level wish surface with pine straw. In this state lef them remain until the spronts begin to show themselves above the straw, when the whole bed or plat of ground, shall be covered 8 cr 10 inches deep with straw. This method will supply a good yield the dryest season, and enable the good housewife to gather a mess daily, selecting the best and leaving the small ones, without so much as soiling her hands even. Last of July or first of August, take up what may have been left from the daily consumption, or and which, by the following management, you may keep till the following spring. Dig them New York State Fair, September, 1852. small banks of 8 or ten bushels, covering with pine straw 6 or 8 inches thick, over which place a coat of earth of half the thickness, protecting the whole from rains, and consequently freezing, by a good shelter. Last year I housed from a piece of ground about 30 feet square, six bushels of fine potatoes, made from sprouts that put up from the potatoes made in the spring, and which had been left, in our daily collection, for table use. These were neither replanted nor worked the whole season, the straw effectually keeping down all grass and weeds, and retaining a sufficiency of moisture. For three years past I have had a supply both summer and winter, besides turnishing some of my friends with seed in the spring.

If I have succeeded in making myself intelhigible to your numerous readers, and putting a dark colored pair of pants; he will be sure to change them in a way of making their own species, his cap and clothes as soon as he can, he also wears them in a way of making their own supplies, without being dependent on a northern market, I shall feel that I am sufficiently remonerated for the trouble I have been at in detailing the advertised. above. SUMTER.

BUDDING OR INNOCULATION. - As the time for operation will soon be here, we insert the following, which we copy from "Kendrix's Work on Orcharding," and commend it to the attention of all desiring information on the subject, as about the best directions that can be given, and if properly followed will result in uniform succes. In cases of failure the operator must blame himself, and not the directions : a quiet and pleasant part of the town.

Innoculating is the operation of transferring any desirable variety of tree upon the stock of an inferior wild variety. The operation is principally practised on small trees, and only during the time the sap flows freely, and chiefly during the months of August and September. Select from the buds the ripest young twigs of the present year, and cut off the leaves, leaving the footstalk entire. Having selected a smooth place in the stalk, make a perpendic utar slit downward, quite through the bark, an inch or a little more in length. Make a cross cut at the top of this slit quite through to the the Court House door in Camden, on the 1st Monday wood, a little slanting downward; next, with in August next, the house and lots on Broad Street the ivory haft of the budding knife raise the in the town of Camden, belonging to the estate of Mrs. bark on both sides from top to bottom, being Martha E. second week in September, so that by the time cold weather comes they are good sized plants ready for transplanting; I then cover them with a thick layer of straw, and leave them until the time in spring when we usually sow the seed. Then transplant them in rows about the best, though they will flourish in most any must recommend him to public patronage. soil. The advantage in sowing them in Autumn is, that we have the plants ready to set out at the time others are sowing the seed; and by that means we have the cabbages some weeks earlier. The cold injures cabbage very little. I had some plants left out during the winter without any covering, and they lived and are thriving finely, though not-so well as those that were covered. It is best always to have them covered with straw, from nine inches to a foot in thickness. Having never seen any account of the best and earliest manner of raising this valuable production, I should like, if any one knows a better way, to be informed of it. - Dollar Paper.

Edward Harrison's

Unequaled Flour and Grain Mills. This Grist Mill has never been equaled, either in its simplicity, portability, compactness, or beauty of design. The frame work and casing are of cast iron, as also are the hoppers. A casting consisting of a triple-shaped base, with three columns resting uopn it, constitutes the frame-work which supports the easing. The easing is the cylindrical portion, or main body of the Mill, resting upon, and secured to the columns, and serves the purpose of inclosing and holding the stones in their places. The easing is made in two equal parts, and each part is composed of a plate and rim. The edges of the rims are closely fitted together and are secured by three bolts. frame and easing thus connected readily admits the advantage of three babit metal boxes for the support of the spindle. One in the center of the base, one in the middle of either plate of the casing. This arrangement renders the parts peculiarly adapted to stand the pressure of grinding without yielding in the least degree, and therefore it is that these Mills are known to grind the same quality of flour and meal, whether fed at five or twenty-five bushels per hour. The spindle being secured firmly and rigidly to the running stone, takes its bearings in the three boxes above named, and sustains the weight of the stone and the pressure of grinding, by resting upon a move-able step inserted in the center of the base. The hopper, which holds two bushels of grain, is supported upon the top of the Mill, by three pillars which are screwed into the upperpl te of the casing. The grani is fed and regulated by an ordirary shoe and a slide in the hopper. The stones are driven by a pulley of fifteen inches diameter, and eight inches face, wiich is placed upon the lower end of the spindle between the columns. The arms of the pulley are constructed in the form of spiral wings, or the purpose of driving a strong blast of air through apertures in the casing in contact with the stones, to keep them cool One of these entire Mills, including the hopper with stones two feet and a half in dinmeter, and each of them cut from a solid block of burr, weighing in of planting best calculated to secure this end all about 1,300 pounds, and warranted capable of grinding, in the best manner, twenty-five bushels per hour of flour or meal, may be packed in a cask thirty-four by forty-two inches inside, and the s transported in safety to any part of the world.

Farmers will find them adapted to be driven by their horse powers. And although they are large enough to do the greatest amount of work, they will also grind two bushels per hour of fair meal with a one horse power, and more in the same proportion. The ad for a Mill which can be driven by horse pow rotten cotton seed over, barely sufficient to er, and grind grain to advantage, without getting out of order, has not heretofore been supplied; mills, of peck measure dimensions do not seem to be big enough. The objection to this Mill, if any, is not that it does not work well, but that it costs too much, perhaps; but others must decide about that, as there are enough cheaper ones. They have given satisfaction in all cases where they have been tried, and are now used in place of common mill stones, in many of the best establishments throughout the country, with decided advantage, both in the power required and in the quantity and quality of the flour and meal. The first premiums have always been awarded them, over all competition, at all the Fairs where they have been exhibited, viz: two Gold Medal's from the American Institute, in 1849 and 1850, and a Silver Medal from a portion thereof, and plant them as above di-rected, which will yield a fine crop by frost, in 1850; Diploma in 1851, from the Middlesex Mechanics' Association, and a Premium of $10, from the sons desiring a farther description, will b on a dry day; the same evening put them in nished with a circular containing all necessary information on application to W. W. TRYON & Co. agents, at Camden, S. C., who will sell the Mills at the Manufacturers prices. One of the Mills can be seen in operation at the re sidence of E. Tryon, in Camden. July 19, 27

$100 REWARD.

RANAWAY, on last Tuesday, the 17th instant, my boy RICHARD, a white mulatto, about five feet three or four inches high, tolerably stout built. about twenty-two years old, with straight light hair has a very sulky appearance, and answers quick and short when spoken to; said boy has a short thick foot, his hands short and thick, chubby lingers. He has the scar of a blister on his forehead just above the eyebrows, he may try to hide it by wearing his cap or hat down over his forehead, he will be sure to himself for a white man, for he is very white and has been taking great care of his skin for some time. when he left he had a cloth cap and black coat and his hair in front straight down to hide the sear of the blister. He is a shoemaker by trade, though he may not go at the business expecting that he will be so

The above Reward of 100 Dollars will be paid for his delivery in any Jail in the State. He will be sure to give himself another name. JAMES LOWRY.
