

by faithless and savage indignities towards our countrymen, who may come within their territories. Many citizens from this country, have within the last few years been insulted, imprisoned, and even put to death, while travelling over Prussia, Germany, Austria and Spain. During the last few years, it is a fact which should bring the blush of shame and indignation to the cheek of every American, that our countrymen travelling in Austria and Germany, in many instances, were obliged to feign themselves English subjects, to escape insult and indignity—not from the mob—but from the authorities of the country. So much more is England respected and feared than our own nation—and why? Simply because she never begs for aid, but enforces it with the strong arm of power. Her subjects are ever ready, and proud to acknowledge allegiance to their own "Britannia," and to appeal to her flag where oppression "runs riot" over the land; while, melancholy to be told, our countrymen, "from the home of the brave, and land of the free," dare not in Austria, say of America, "That is my own—my native land." The reason of this distinction in the treatment of our people, and those of England, is the proud defiance of the latter; while the authorities of our nation, if they have been noted for any foreign policy at all, it has been for temporizing, truckling and even begging for right—nay, more—they have actually become the apologist, of the insulters of their own country, to an outraged people.

Within the last four years, fifty American citizens quietly sailing on the high seas in an open boat, and unarmed, were captured and cruelly butchered by the Spanish authorities, without even a form of trial. Within the same period, many of our merchant ships in the Gulf, have been subjected to search, and their crews to insult. Thrasher, an American citizen, was openly captured in Cuba, and actually transported to that horrible sink, the Spanish Mines in Africa, without a shade of crime but his liberal opinions. These are humiliating truths—truths which cannot be relished by the friends of the just Administration; they are truths too, which teach us that begging will never obtain right, but that they "Who would be free, themselves must strike the blow." The poet has well said, "Coming events cast their shadows before."

The nation, feeling justly outraged at our beggarly position among foreign powers, has hurried from office the party advocating this submissive policy, and has elevated a power, the representative of which, fully fresh-drawing public opinion has declared, that an American citizen in any part of the world, must be made to realize that he is a sovereign—that he is a component part of his government—and that his flag will vindicate his just rights even with the sword, if necessary. Such we may hope is to be the future policy of this country, a policy which may, and will most probably involve us in difficulties, for it will require energetic measures to resume our long lost rights; but even if this policy produces war, should we not rather "rush to battle then," than "coward slaves, turn and fly?"

A brush with Austria would give us character and position abroad, besides giving us a fit introduction to the world, and diffusing our liberal opinions too wide for the safety of the old "heaven-anointed tyrannies" of the Eastern Hemisphere.

The temporary policy, adopted by our progenitors, while this nation was yet in swaddling clothes, "not to involve in European politics," has been followed too long, and is the chief cause of our low estimation on that continent. Ever rising "up like 'Bangno's ghost,'" to the imagination of our timid rulers, it has made them shrink from boldly demanding our rights, and tremble at the very thought of war. Peace is truly a happy boon, but peace, at the expense of self-respect, ceases to be a virtue. Forbearance has been practiced by our government, till her citizens are compelled to seek protection under disguise, from other powers. Did our ancestors intend this? Was this their policy when warlike France was overthrown, and Great Britain grappled with, for claiming the right of search, one of the very outrages recently submitted to?

But what would be the consequences of a war, with some of those old rotten monarchies of Europe, who not tend to show us to the world in a proper light, and to the propagation of our principles to these secluded and oppressed people? So far then, from injuring us—for who can doubt our ability to cope with any power in Europe?—it would probably have just the contrary effect upon people with whom we come in contact—the effect of teaching them that they were created for a far different purpose, than merely to live the "puppets of tyranny."

One of the British Ministers remarked, recently, in the House of Lords that, "if an American army should land on the coast of Ireland, for the purpose of invading Great Britain, the Irish Peasantry would rise up, almost en masse, and join the invaders, so great was their love for this country."

Why do the Irish so love America? The answer is easy—it is simply because of our democratic institutions, and the opportunities they have had, by contact and association, to learn something of them. So it would be with the inhabitants of the continent—let us come in contact, associate to some extent with them, and no army raised there, would contest a field with us—who they will have learned are the friends of the oppressed—but will rather turn their arms, glad to procure such friendly assistance, and with the shout of vive le Republique, tear the sceptre from the hands of their own oppressors. I am no propagandist, preaching a crusade against kingdoms and tyrannies; peace is more preferable, but much more would I desire to maintain our high national character, and be able to say, when surrounded in a foreign kingdom, by the myriads of royalty, with feelings of pride for my native land, "America! with all thy faults, I love the still."

Flowers will grow where the waters run. If the cuticle of the scalp is kept healthy, and the germs of the hair invigorated by stimulents which operate at their roots, through the inner skin or dermoid of the head, a strong and vigorous head of hair cannot fail to be the result. The operation of Lyon's Katharion is founded entirely upon this most reasonable law of the Natural World. It is prepared of such ingredients only, as will produce this effect. Hence the most incredulous have tried and been benefited by its use—and the secret of its immense sale. The appearance given to the hair is truly beautiful and pleasing.
