COMMUNICATED. SONNET

On the death of little WILLIE SARGEANT. Before me, in the cold white arms of death, He lies in dreamless slumber: on his breast His hands are folded, peacefully to rest, And through his pale lips steal no gentle breath; Unearthly beauty rests upon his brow, And lovelier seem his closed eyes the while Than when they kindled 'neath a mother's smile. O beauteous child, Death is thy mother now, And she has charmed thee to a haleyon sleep, And waits to lay thee on thy little bed " Of flowers: o'er the sinless dead My tears are falling, yet I only weep To think that when to thee, oh Death, my form is given. I cannot soar on such a stainless wing to Heaven. Oct. 19th. 1853.

> From the Baltimore Clipper. The Sabbath School Teacher.

While philanthropists whine, or of charity prate, And despair of the world-as they pass round the plate; While the patriot declaims of the dangers that lower, If any one else, save himself is in power,-There's a maiden just passing the place where we stand, See! she's leading a poor little boy by the hand. She neither aspires to vote nor to rule, But teaches a class in the neat Sabbath school.

Though humble her mission, and only designed To soften the heart and awaken the mind, Perhaps some results which that mission creates May be worthy a thought from the rulers of States.

Suppose some poor victim of want and neglect, With no parent to guide, no friend to protect-Who regards it his right to recover, of course, All the world has denied him, by fraud or by force.

That maden has taught him that honesty brings A reward far beyond all the treasures of kings; She has taught that the man who is honest and wise May to riches and honor with certainty rise.

Thus, instead of a life vowed to rapine and wrong, To defrauding the weak and defying the strong. He is won by the precepts impressed by that maid, To the good that exalts, from the vice that degrades.

When we think how her voice may a demon disarm, And lead it a captive unconscious of harm, The Sabbath school teacher has taught, it is plain, A lesson that Statesmen may study with gain,

for the farmers.

Apples for Stock.

The question, "Are common apples possessed of any value as a food for stock?" is one - which is frequently propounded by men who profess to have been close observers, and to have made many accurate experiments in order to solve this question. Not long since I heard an old farmer assert it as his "fixed belief, that the common English turnip was devoid of nutrimental properties, and that an animal fed exclusively upon the uncooked root would live about as long as if kept exclusively on water.' It is very certain-and no reasonable man, I presume, will attempt to controvert the question-that many experiments which are instituted for the best purposes and with laudable designs, result unfavorably in consequence of the careless manner in which they are conducted. A single experiment is often permitted to decide the fate of the article submitted to the test, whereas, whether the result be or not in accordance with our preconceived opinions, no "fixed opinion" should be allowed to take pos- THE Kershaw Steam Mill Company have constantsession of our minds, until the result obtained in the first case has been confirmed by subsequent similar results. To proceed in such an off hand manner is nothing short of the most shameless abuse of that reason which heaven has beneficently conferred upon us to direct us, and whoever adopts it, therefore virtually abrogates his right to think or judge.

Payne Wingate, Esq., of Hallowell, Maine, a man of ready discrimination and great enterprise in carrying forward the work of agricultural improvement in all its various phases and forms instituted a series of experiments in order to solve the very question to which we have referred in our opening remarks, viz: the value of apples as a food for stock. His method was this; two pigs of the same litter, and as near as practicable of the same weight, were taken, and one of them fed for a week on cooked po tatoes, the other on apples-the same quantity of food being allowed to each, at the end of the week both pigs were accurately weighed, and their respective weights, and the difference noted. The feed was then reversed - the pig which had, during the first week been fed on potatoes received apples and vice versa, and so on alternately for several weeks, the result was that the apples appeared to be fully equal to the potatoes, and Mr. Wingate says a "little superior." The apples were sweet and both they and the potatoes were nearly all quite ripe. That sweet apples fed raw are preferable to sour ones, seems to be a reasonable conclusion, and it is one, I believe which is demonstrated by experience, to be perfectly correct; but in some very accurate experiments made by the gentleman above referred to for the purpose of the relative value of sweet and sour apples when cooked, it was ascertained that when boiled and mixed with an equal quantity of meal, from the same bag the sweet apples no longer hold their claim to preference.

We have known apples fed raw to horses, cows, sheep, and other stock, during the winter, with very favorable results. No doubt where large quantities are to be fed, sweet apples would be found superior to sour ones, fed in this way. A peck of apples, per day, fed to a cow, has been known to add more than a quart to the daily supply of milk, besides increasing its richness, and the condition of the animal in regard to flesh.

Such facts are not without their value to the farmer. In many cases where apples are raised for the market, there are many small and wormy ones which are unsaleable; and the same is the case not unfrequently, where the same is the case not unfrequently, where the manufacture of prime eider is carried on. The imperfect portion of fruit the orchard produces it is often found difficult to dispose of economic the reception of Boarders and Travellers between 25th it is often found difficult to dispose of economically, as the refuse apples are not saleable, and should be rejected at the mill. By cook ing and feeding them to animals, mixed with a little meal, or a few handfulls of shorts, they may be turned to a good advantage on every farm.—Cor. Germantown Telegraph.

PLOWING AND MANURING - At the recent Agricultural fair at Hampstend, Long Island, Professor Manes said:

it is deep plowing and increased manuring. This is what pays the greatest profit. Who ever heard of a crop suffering from drought in a field well drained and sub soiled; say two feet deep? The atmosphere gives out its moisture in sub-soiled lands, and keeps the crops growing. Look at such land and see the results, compared with shallow plowing. Many men have a better farm under the one they plow, than that on the surface Oats never lodge on land where they can get soluble si ex to make strong straw. They cannot get it in shallow plowed land that has been long ix use. Two dollars an acre will give him plenty of soluble silex. No matter what the sub-soil is it will be benefitted if it dry by sub soiling. Hill tops are benefitted if it dry by subsoiling and draining, for it lets in the air. It makes crops early, and thus they escape the frost. The most gravelly land is benefitted. A sub soil meadow never 'runs out.' There is no fear of deep plowing gravelly lands; manures do not reach downward; that notion is a fallacy. To prove it, dig in your barn yard, and you will find it has not made the hard subsoil rich. Root crops are not appreciated as they should be. Cattle may be fattened on roots cheaper than you can feed them on hay in the winter. One bushel of carrots fed with oats, are worth more than oats for horses. You from all corrupt humors, restoring energy and vigor health and strength to every Organ and Member of the Body. LETTERS FROM HIGH AUTHORITY Hon. J. J. MIDDLETON, of Waccamaw S. C, writes us under date of May 2d, 1853, that Radway's Renovating Resolvent cured one of his negroes, on his Plantation at Beauford, of a Scrofulous complaint, of many years standing. The poor fellow was a disgusting object of pity; he was a moving mass of sores. The other negroes could not remain in the same place with him. He was entirely cured by Radway's Renovating Resolvent, and is now at work upon the plantation. To the people of S, C. Mr. Middleton is well known, and to the political world Mr. Middleton is no stranger. Sold in Camden by Z, J. DeHAY and T. & E.
