From Jerrold's Magazine. MAN WAS NOT MADE TO MOURN.

There is a voice which haunts me still, Where'er on earth I be; In lonely vale, on lofty hill, And on the distant sea-I hear it in the silent night, And at the break of morn ; And aye it crieth-dark or light-Man was not made to mourn l

In eviry stream that seaward flows, That voice solutes mine ear; In every wind that round me blows, Its thrilling notes I hear ;

In ev'ry sound of Nature's heart, The cheerful or forlorn, This ever bears the better part-

Man was not made to mourn !

The sun that glads the summer noon. The light that blesseth all, The myriad stars, the quiet moon,

The showers from Heaven that fall, The flowers which in our meadows Our mountain paths adorn- Igrow, All, all, in their own fashion, show Man was not made to mourn !

All Nature cries aloud-but man Regards not Nature's voice ; Perverteth her benignant plan, Her workmanship destroys-From her fair book the brightest page With impious hand has torn--Yet still she cries, from age to age, Man was not made to mourn !

O gentlest mother ! may thy child Ere long thy lesson read ; Embrace thy precepts, loving, mild, Thy fraternizing creed :

Then shall the blessed end be known For which he has been born ; And all shall feel, from zone to zone, Man was not made to mourn !

MARSHAL SOULT.

Born of humble parents, entering the army as a private soldier, musket in hand, he rose to be Marshal of the Empire, Duke of Dalmatia, and Peer of France. He early exhibited his wonderful coolness in the hour of danger.

At the battle of Fleurus, General Marceau commanding the right wing under Lefebvre, was routed and forced to fall back. In his agony he sent to Soult for four battalions, that he might regain his lost position.

Soult refused.

"Give them to me," exclaimed the mortified and indignant Marceau, " or I will blow my brains out."

Soult coclly replied that to do it would endanger the whole division. Being then only a mere aid decamp, and un-known, his refusal astonished Marceau, who asked in a rage.---

"Who are you?"

"Who ever I am," replied the imperturbable soldier, "I am calm, which you are not, do not kill yourself, but lead on your men to the charge, and you shall have the four battalions as soon as we can spare them."

His advice had scarcely been given, before the enemy were upon them, and side by side these two men raged through the battle like lions. After the battle was over Marceau held out his hand to Soult saying, "Colonel, forgive the past, you have this day given me a lesson, which I shall never forget. You have in fact 138 acres. I will sell altogether cr sepagained the battle."

ON DANDIES. There are few preachers in the land whose sermons are so full of pith, point, pepper, and pungent sarcasm as those of "Dow Jr." See how he "dresses down' a certain class of lazy, loaferish, waspish dandies :

"Now you that was cut out for a man, but was so villainously spoiled in making up, I'll attend to your case. For what end did you burst open the world's door; and rush in uncalled, like a man chased by a mad bull? What good do you expect to bestow on your fellow men ? Some useful invention, some great discovery, or even one solitary remark? No! those that look for any thing good from you, will be just as badly fooled as the woman who made greens of gunpowder tea. You know where the neatest, tightest pants, with the strongest straps, can be had "on tick." but you don't know where the next lecture will be delivered. You know the color of a vest, but never studied the gorgeous hues of the rainbow, unless it was to wish for a piece to make a cravat of; you know how a silly fellow feels in full dress, but you don't know how a man feels when he eats the bread earned by the sweat of his brow you know how a monkey looks, for you see one every day twenty times in your landlay's looking glass, but you don't know how a man feels after doing a good action ; you don't go where that sight is to be seen. Oh! you waspwaisted catfish mouthed, baboon-shouldered, clipper-legged bewhiskered drone in the world's bee-hive ! What are you good for? Nothing, but to cheat your tailor, neatly to lisp by note a line from some milk and cider poetaster, sentimentally talk love, eat oysters, and act the fooi shamefully. I say, does your mother know you're out? I am afraid you have no mother, nor never had !

You are no more use in this world than a time-piece in a beaver dam. You fill no larger space in this world's eye than the toe nail of a musquito would in a market house; you are as little thought of as the fellow who knocked his grand-mother's last tooth down her throat; and as for your brains, ten thousand such could be preserved in a drop of brandy, and have as much sea room as a tadpole in Lake Superior-and as for your ideas you have but one, (and that is stamped on your leaden skull an inch deep,) that tailors and females were made to be guiled by you and that you think decent people envy your appearance! Poor useless worm? You are a decidedly hard case!

day for ague and Fever, or Chill and Fe-ver, none seem to meet with such rapidity of sale and give so much general satisfac-tion, as Dr Hull's celebrated Pills. Wherever they have been introduced, all tonics in whatever shape, all mixtures and Pills and preparations of every character, designed for this disease, have been discarded, and Dr. Hull's Ague Pills have been received as the only permanent cure.

They stop the Chills and Fever the first day, and do not sicken the stomach or operate on the bowels. Young children and persons of all ages sexes, and conditions may use these Pills, not only with safety, but with the certainty of success.

Judge Forrest of Jonesboro, Ala, was cured of a severe and obstinate case of Chills, with only half a box, after two physicians had exhausted all their skill.

Ma Lewis Covin, of Abbeville Dis. S. C., says he has sold several boxes of Hull's Pills, and never knew them to fail curing the chills and fever in a single instance. Mr Wm S Mills, of Abbeville Dis, S.

This is a fine illustration of Soult's character.

"Cool, collected, and self reliant, the tumult of battle and chaos of defeat, never disturbed his perception or confused his judgment. At Austerlitz, he did the same thing to Napoleon. As Bonaparte gave him command of the centre, that day, he simply said :-

"As for you Soult, I have only to say, act as you always do"

In the heat and terror of battle, an aid-de-camp burst in head-long gallop into the presence of Soult, bearing orders that he should immediately carry the heights of Pratzen.

"I will obey the Emperor's orders as soon as I can," replied the chieftain, "but this is not the proper time."

Bonaparte was in a perfect fury at his answer, and sent another aid-de-camp with peremptory orders, but before he could diliver them, "the proper time had arrived," and the awful column of Soult was in motion, and the next moment his head was enveloped in the smoke of cannon, and in a few minutes afterward, torn and mangled, appeared upon the crest of the hill where it struggled for victory, and won it. Soult had delayed the charge because the enemy were extending their lines and weakning their centre. Bonaparte saw at once the reason of the delay, and struck with admiration at his behavior, soon after rode up to him, and in presence of the whole staff, exclaimed,

"Marshal, I acount you the ablest tactitioner in the empire."
