W. W. PERRYMAN,

W. W. PERRYMAN, their degenerate sons, have hallowed their names for their firmness, but in the jubilee of names for their firmness, but in the jubilee of glory have lost sight of the maxim which inspired our adoration. "In the course of events" I find it has become necessary togo back to "first principles," and either "stand or fall" by the result. The prevailing idea that a merchant has money because he has a store full of goods is a great mistake; it is one of the proofs of his being just out of money, and the people must be made to understand that he is not a thing to twist just any way, and convert himself into money, or out of it, just as he pleases, for he must have money in order to have it, just like any of the rest of in order to have it, just like any of the rest of
