experience admonishes us, that we have not done all, and probably not as much as more energetic and individual exertions might have accomplished that we are suffering from the very apathy which success induces, and if this is true, we may not complain, for it rests with ounceves whether we shall shake off the lethargy which has overtaken us, and burnish anew our armour for the fight. Ours is a cause promising so much for the good of humanity, that we should neither recognise a backward step, or tolerate that spirit which often promps to let well done alone.

We can never flatter ourselves that We can never flatter ourselves that we have carned the tribute accorded to the faithful servant, who is greeted with the cheering commendation of "well done," until we have driven from the land every vestige of the pernicious vice, against which we have been so long contending. While sorrow and affliction desolate a once happy people by the influence of spirituous liquors, our work is not done, and we must not imitate the faltering and erring sentinel by sleeping at our post.

I know no better means of attaining the object of our union than by constant appeals to the people through talented speakers. In every District solicitations be made through the subordinate Divisions to those qualified for the task, to address the public. The argument is so strongly on our side, that the appeals must have a beneficial effect.

I therefore suggest to the Grand Division to recommend to subordinate Divisiona, their carnest co-operation in the great work, and the necessity of calling public meetings to discuss the License and Prohibitory questions and thus follow out the recommendation of the Central Committee appointed by the convention of citizens opposed to the

I am aware that moral sussions has done much. It has however failed to accomplish the ends we desire. If it be our aim, as most assuredly it is, to free our beloved State from the degradation which has enslaved her, and that her sons should become pure and for want of a constitutial majority. virtuous citizens, we must resort to those measures best calculated to effect so glorious a consummation.

The masses must be moved-strong and self to this important work, and thus armed, go forth to battle in the good cause.

It affords me much pleasure to state that the wish I expressed at our last meeting, that at this session I might be privileged to report a further increase of Divisions has been realized. Since the last quarter, two new Divisions have been organized, and a trict, called St. George's Division No. 10, attendance. and the third when organized, by Bro. I am highly gratified with the action of the National Division, at its last session, by which youths of sixteen years of age may be eligible to membership in subordinate Diviings and to unite with us in our work of love, they will not only escape the temptations which may be offered elsewhere, but will take pride in being of, and among us.—

Our example cannot fail to exercise a salntary influence, and prepare them to become virtuous and moral men. At the meeting of the National Division at Chicago, I voted for want of a constitutal majority.

I respectfully recommend to all subordinate Divisions, to follow the example of Greenville Division No. 19. They have lately passed resolutions "inviting ministers powerful appeals must be made to exhibit in all its deformity, the master vice, and the accursed evils of the Liquor traffic; and to point out the only remedy left to put them forever to death. Every Son of Temperance, every lover of humanity should qualify himself to this investment of the master transfer to the means and ends to be attained." CONSUL-GENERAL DELEON AND THE GREEKS.—The Athens Panhellenion speaks in the highest terms of Mr. DeLeon's efforts for the amelioration of the Greeks in Egypt.

"Mr. Edwin DeLeon, Consul-General for the United States of America, touched by the sight of the sufferings and the persecu-tions of which the Greeks were the victims, hastened, of his own accord, and without or-ders from his government, to address an ap-peal to Abbas Pasha, by which he invoked the government, not only to be more merciful and more just towards the Greeks, but by touching the amour propie of the Pasha at the same time, to secure or them the privilege of remaining in Egypa. MATRIMONIAL COMPULSION.-A rumor in circulation in Philadelphia that the relatives of an accomplished young lady are daily practising upon her the most harsh and cruel treatment, depriving her of the society of her friends, incacerating her in a close apartment, without nourishment, and otherwise maltreating her, in order to force her to take an eath that she will not marry the young man to whom she has already plighted her faith. The young man is said to be of excellent character. in circulation in Philadelphia that the relaten in such a style as to be made attract to have uttered thefollowing language; at program to have made during the past aspective, from his well known energy and litty, we may expect he has effected much.

There is a story estant about a five min-utes' courtship between a thriving and busy merchant of a watering place in England, and a lady for whom, in conjunction with a deceased friend, he was trustee. The lady called at his counting house, and said that her business was to consult him on the pro-priety or otherwise of her accepting an offer of marriage which she had received. Now, for the first time, accurred to the Bristol was of marriage which she had received. Now, for the first time, occurred to the Bristol merchant the idea of this holy estate is his own case. "Marriage," said he, listlessly turning over some West Indian correspondence, "Well, I suppose everybody ought to marry, though such a thing never occurred to me before. Have you given this gentleman an affirmative answer?" "No." "Are your feelings particularly engaged in the matter?" "Not particularly." "Well, then, madam," said he turning round his office stool "if they said he turning round his office stool, "if that be the case, and if you could dispense with courtship, for which I have no time, and think you could be comfortable with me, I am your humble servant to command." There were people who thought that the lady had a purpose in going there, but, if so, she prudently disguised it. She said she would consider the matter. The Bristol merchant saw her out with the same coolness as if she was merely and of his correspondents, and when she was gone five minutes, was once more inmersed in his letters and ledgers. A day or two after, he had a communication from the lady, accepting to his offer, very considerably excusing him from any elaborate courtship, and leaving him to name the "most convenient day." They were married.

NEW YORK POLITICS.—The New York Times says that the Hard section of the Democratic party will be compelled to make another nomination for Governor, as Judge Bronson peremotorily refuses to allow his name to be used. Cooley, Vanderbilt, and David Seymour, of Troy, are mentioned as likely to be selected in his place. The Hards sions. This is a very important change, will not, in any case, abandon their organizand will prove highly beneficial to our ation. The Whigs, the Times thinks, are almost certain to carry the State, unless divimost certain to carry the State, unless divi-ded by tickets nominated on new issues. The general feeling among the Whigs seems to be in favor of a western candidate for Gov-ernor—if he would accept the nomination, Ex-Governor Hunt would probably be selected with the general acquiescence of the whole party. A great number of other candidates are also named.

STEALING, WHIPPING AND PURING .- A negro at the Western and Atlantic Hotel, being suspicioned of stealing a one hundred dollar bill from Col. W. K. Moore, was taken up and whipped, but denied stealing it for a long time; at last she confessed the theft, and said that she chewed it up and spit it out; a few more lashes, however, changed that tune, and she then most positively de-clared that she had swallowed it, and to use her own words, it 'was in her.' Taking her at her word, an ometic was administered, which, after a little gagging caused her bump of benevolence to predominate, whereupon she unloosed her purse strings, and came the cash, much to the satisfaction of cramped up Bill .- Dalton Times.

The subject of this our order and finances, I refer you to the brief notice was a young man of very rare reports of the Grand Scribe, and Grand talents, possessed of the most noble traits of character in every respect. He graduated about five years ago (at the youthful age of 18) in the best Medical college in Philadelphia, with much honor to himself, and satisfaction to his friends, after which he returned home more than welcome by his father's family, cornections and neighbors generally, when he low ted himself for the purpose of practicing his profession, which he did with much success, and to the full satisfaction of the entire community, uniting at the same time for himself an unsullied reputation and high standing as a physician, until within a short time previous to his sickness, his practice increased to such an extent and the eat of the weather was so severe that his continued exposure from his great desire to render assistance to an afflicted community, brought congestive chills upon him that soon with severe suffering, brot' his life to a close, notwithstanding the best medical aid was in attendence. He will not only be missed and mourned for by his kind, affectionate parents brothers, sisters and friends, but the whole community in which he lived will deeply deplore his loss on account of the bright future they had in anticipation from his past sucthey had in anticipation from his past suc-cess. But withstanding the loss of such a noble son is almost death to his parenta, and a severe trial to his friends, yet well might they give him up when they have all reason, from his conduct long before his illness, and his expressions during his sickness, that his home was in heaven. Much be said with home was in heaven. Much be said with credit to him as it respects both his public and private character; but the many friends who visited him during his sickness, and the large assembly that attended his funeral, are sufficient testimony of his good deportment while living—Let all, and especially the young, by this afflictive dispensation, receive the admonition, "Be ye also ready."
