pointed J. A. DARGAN, Esq., as his counsel; afterwards J. A. INGLIS and J. T. Colt, Esqrs., volunteered their aid in his behalf, nducted the trial with great skill and singular ability.

The jury, after the able arguments both of the counsel and the State, and a most impressive charge from his Honor, returned in the course of a few minutes the verdict of manslaughter. The only evidence in the case was the confession of the boy before the jury of inquest, who being examined before the magistrate, acting as coroner, confessed to the following facts: That he and the deceased had gone out the morning of the murder with a gun that had been given them by a young man by the name of George to carry home; that instead of going home they went to shoot a rabbit that the prisoner had confined in a hole the day before; that on their return home, the deceased who had the gun threw a lightwood knot at the prisoner and hit him, and the prisoner re-turned it at the deceased; that the deceased then levelled the gun at him and threatened to shoot him; afterwards he asked the deceased for the gun, and getting it into his possession, he told the deceased he would shoot him, and that he placed his finger upon the trigger, but did not think the gun would fire; that the throwing of the lightwood knots he thought was fun."

Southern Literature.

JOHN MITCHELL, in his Citizen, writes the following words. The views are sound and like everything from his pen, are forcibly

"It has been to us a species of puzzle when we heard it boasted, or else complained of, (as the case might be,) that the reading public of the Southern States are in a great measure dependant for their periodical literature upon the North. Yet up to this present writing the circumstances may be easily accounted for. There are, perhaps, more men of literary leisure and of high education in the South, proportionately to population, than at the North; but there is no such numerous class who live by their literature and education. In the north there is, apparently, more business enterprise, having for its great aim and end to supply that which is demanded at the lowest possible penny, be it a rocking chair or a review—a magazine or a threshing machine. Now everything in this causity is done upon constant. this country is done upon commercial principles, and stands upon the basis of cents .-Southrens, too, are more indolent; they have been content to get everything made for them, whether in England or New England; and, until of late, they lazily adopted the very habits of thought and phraseology which were moulded in the forms of British society and Anglo Saxon civilization. They did not sufficiently advert to the circumstances that the element was bitterly hostile to and addressed her in these words: them and their institutions; and that if they, in their languid insouciance, allowed it to with that nice hoss what's got on store operate long uncheeked, it would end in the clothes." destruction of their social economy, in the forfeiture of their property, in the casting them forth from the family of "civilized com-

It can no an Arkansas "break-down." longer spare its men of genius to minister to the Harpers and Putnams, like poor Edgar Poe, a sweet singer and cunning essayist, of whom the Virginian University was once proud, but whom New York and Philadel-phia drove and starved. Neither can the South safely take any longer for its monthly reading the platitudes of the abolitionists, who quote the Bible for the "unity of the human race," (which the Bible does not assert,) but contemn the same Bible as an authority for slavery, (upon which the Bible is clear,)—who have the face to appeal to Christianity, yet are ready to call the Apostle Paul a "doughface," because he returned a fugitive slave. Who take British opinion as their standard, and find excellence or utter alomination in everything American, precisely as it approaches or recedes from that sublime example. There were great nations before the English; there a greater nations than they ever will be. There hare been moralities unknown to Exeter Hall, and wisdom will not die with the writers of the sert,) but contemn the same Bible as an audom will not die with the writers of the Edinburg Review."

Vive la Humbug.

BARNUM, the prince of Humbugs, ha Barrum, the prince of Humbugs, has written his autobiograpy, and, it is said sold the manuscript to Redfled, a New York publisher, for seventy thousand dollars!—a number of other publishers having entered the list as competitors for the honors and profits! Is not this whole story trumped up for the occasion, just to make the book sell? Such a trick is worthy of Barrum, and very much after his manner of doing business.

If, however, the story be true, is it not a little remarkable that the autobiography of a man who unblushingly acknowledges that he has lived by humbug should sell for moss than Beuton's great work, or Calhoun's, or Webster's? It only proves that the american people are fond of humbug and deception.

"The boy being in legal contemplation without parents, and exceedingly poor, the court announced that from the poverty of the family, and the peculiar character of the case, it felt it a duty to assign able counsel for the defence. #### Arkansas Girls.

The Memphis Express tells the following story of a friend of the editor's who went over into Arkansas recently, to attend a "break-down," that is, a dance:

"The ladies, upon the occasion, were arrayed in their best, with all the gay colors that an uncultivated taste could suggest .-The gentlemen were dressed in homespun cloths, and none but my friend had broade oth upon his back. During theevening, sweet potatoes of an enormous size, roasted in the ashes, were handed round to the company, together with a handful of salt for each guest. A beautiful young lady soon became smitten with our friend (perhaps with his magnifi-cent moustaches,) and resolved to dance with him. She thereupon turned to a friend,

"Sal hold my tater while I trot round

"Our friend was clinched accordingly; he could not extricate himself from the grip of the rustic beauty, and was obliged to "trot throats. Nothing short of this.

The South will not be able to endure He made his escape the first opportunity, resolving that he would never again go to

> DEXTERITY OF LOVE.-A young lady of Namur, of good family, having a gallant, was at a loss in conducting their currespon-dence, which was to fix their repeated assignations. A hair-dresser, not an unusual messenger in love, was chosen as a agent but how to escape the vigilance of her father a widower, who had a perpetual eye on her conduct? Singular as it may appear, the gentleman's wig was chosen as the letter box. He wore a bag, which his daughter used to take off every evening when he called for his night cap, and sure to find a billet from her lover, which the hair dresser had placed there in the morning when he fixed the bag, and which the old gentleman had unsuspect ingly carried about all the day. She had sufficient time to peruse it, and replace her answer, which the hair dresser withdrew in the morning, to deliver to her lover > LIEE AND NOT LIEE.—A lawyer at Pough-keepsie was applied to, during his lifetime by an indignant neighbor, for his opinion on a question of law in which the interests of the latter were materially involved. The lawyer gave his advice and charged the poor-fellow three dollars for it. fellow three dollars for it.

"There is the money," said his client; "it is all I have in the world, and my family has been a long time without pork."

"Thank God 1" replied the lawyer, "my wife never know the want of pork since we were married.

"Nor never' will," the countryman rejoin ed, "so long as she has such a hog as you."

The lawyer was so pressed with the smartness of his repartee that he forgave the poor fellow and returned him his money.

We'believe all but the last part.

FEMALE SOLDIERS .- The "Fairy Light Guard," it is stated, has ectually made its appearance in the streets of New York. Twenty well dressed young wemen marched through the street, two abreast, in military order, proceeded by a male drummer, who beat time vigorously. They giggled like so many girls just at loose from school, and were followed by a large crowd.

PROCLAMATION.

mder-in-Chief in and over the State of South Carolina.

WHEREAS, it is a duty incumbent upon ev ery people at all times to neknowledge their dependence upon an all-wise and merciful God; to praise him for his glory and benefac-tions, and to express in contrition and humilia-tion a submission to His dispensations, and de-tion a submission to His dispensations, and dependance upon his power;

And whereas it is eminently becoming in the people of this State, in view of the great benefits which have been bestowed upon them during the past year, and also in view of the mortality and other calamities which in some places have befallen them, to make public demonstrations of their gratitude, and humiliation and resignation:

Now, therefore I, JOHN LAURENCE MAN-NING, Governor and Commander-in-Chief in and over the State of South Carolina, do hereby set apart THURSDAY, the twenty-third day of November, as a day of Thauksgiving, Fasting, Huvember, as a day of Thankeriving, Fasting, Hu-miliation and Prayer; and I hereby invite the ministers and teachers of all religious denominations throughout the State, upon that day to open their several places of public worship, and re-turn thanks to Almighty God for the manifestations of His mercy; to acknowledge the sins of the people; and, by huniliation and prayer, to entrest His forgiveness of them, and implore the extension over the commonwealth of His love 121

And I further invite all persons engaged in secular pursuits to close, for the day above men-tioned, their places of business, and forsake their usual avocations, and to promote, as far as possi-ble, a proper observance of the rites and solemnities of the occasion.

Given under my hand and the seal of the
