BLANK INDENTURES,

For sale at this Office.

The recent arrivals at New-York from Liverpool, bring nothing of importance. The elections were all over, and there was nothing but feasting and junketing among the people.—The London Courier of the 17th of July, says, that the friends of Sir MURRAY MAXWELL, and the friends of those principles which were involved in his cause, dined together at Willis' Rooms, and as the company had no reformers amongst them, the evening passed over in the mutual display of liberal, refined and gentlemanly feelings.—There was no fighting for plates, no scrambling for joints of meat, no abuse from the guests, and no apologies from the landlord.
