Planting .- Should the ground remain open this month many fruit trees can be set and at a less cost than when the work is done in the spring. Now labor is plenty, and many a man at this season will accept a job at smaller wages than would be demanded in the spring. Do not, however, set trees in a wet or partly frozen soil; they will be likely to perish. Better occupy the time in cutting drains and preparing the soil properly. Trees not set out this fall must be heeled-in on a dry sandy soil where there is no danger of water settling during the winter.

Fruit.—Any remaining ungathered should be harvested at once and placed where the temperature is as low as possible without danger of frost. Apples gathered late, stored in barrels and placed in a low temperature, will keep a long time.

Cider.-Continue to make cider from the late varieties of apples, using only those which are free from rot. Gider made at this season, strained through sand to remove all pomace and impurities, may be barreled at once, and little or no fermentation will take place if kept cool. This makes a very fine quality of cider for use during the winter, as it remains sweet a long time. The barrel should be bunged up as soon as the cider is put into it.

Vinegar.-All cider from inferior fruit should be made into vinegar. Keep the vinegar barrels open, and from time to time add cider, and in a few months or years, according to the tem-perature, good vinegar will be the re-

Recipe for Curing Meat.

The editor of the Germantown Telegraph gives the following as his recipe for curing meat: To one gallon of water take 1½ lbs. of salt, ½ lb. of sugar, ½ oz. of saltpetre, ½ oz. potash. In this ratio the pickle can be increased to any quantity desired. Let these be boiled together until all the dirt from the sugar rises to the top and is skimmed off. Then throw into a tub to cool, and when cool pour it over your beef or pork, to remain the usual time—say four or five weeks. The meat must be well covered with pickle, and should not be put down for at least two days after killing, during which time it should be slightly sprink-led with powdered saltpetre, which re-moves all the surface blood, &c., leaving the meat fresh and clean. omit boiling the pickle, and find it to answer well, though the operation of boiling purifies the pickle by throwing off the dirt always to be found in salt and sugar.

I send my mode of canning grapes, which we find an excellent addition to the table all winter. Rich, ripe grapes are the best, having so much more juice when fully ripe. We use Concord grapes, having them in abundance, and doubt if any other variety answer better. Pulp them, and boil the pulps for a sufficient time to separate the seed from the other part. While these are boiling, place the skins in another ket- F. Smith, came at once to Shreveport tle, with some water, and boil them un- with nurses and physicians. til the skins seem tender. Suicide in the United States.

The statistics of 1870 show an increasing tendency to suicide throughout the country. The per-centage was 3.06 per 100,000. In 1860 it was 3.02, and in 1850 2.01. As usual, the male sex greatly predominates, more field, looks like a battle field with its than three-fourths being men. Suicide is rare among women who have reached maturity, the majority of the cases being confined to the romantic period of girlhood. Men, on the contrary, resort to it in numbers increasing with age. Ten suicides occur among the whites to one among the blacks; the cheerful, contented disposition of the latter shows where lies the exciting cause of suicide. It is the product, not of mental rust, but of wear and tear. The rate is higher in the bustling communities of the North than in the more quiet South. But the German and French minds, of all others, appear to be particularly prone to suicide. These nationalities stand nearly as three to one as compared with the Irish, and four to one compared with the native

The Fate of French Marshals.

Let me add, says a Paris letter, that the fever, and prior to going to Shreve-the history of previous trials of Marshals of France is not calculated to flatter the hopes of Bazaine.

The office of Marshal was instituted in the reign of Francois I., and since then and when partly cooked, pour over it five Marshals have been tried, found guilty, and all of them executed. 1. Marshal de Retz was hanged and burned for rebellion and high treason. 2. Marshal de Biron was decapitated for conspiring with Spain against his friend and benefactor, Henry IV.

3 and 4. Marshals de Marcillac and de Montmorency were sent to the scaffold for conspiring against the red man. 5. Marshal Ney was shot by the Bourbons, in 1815, for going over to his old master, Napoleon, en his return from Bazaine is the first French Marshal

The Domain of Death.

The Terrible Two Months of Life in Mr. William Barnard, formerly of Cincinnati, and now manager of the Western Union Telegraph Company's offices in New Orleans, was at Shreveport during the whole of the epidemic, and gives the following account of the sufferings in that pestilence-ridden

Shreveport lies north and south along the Red River, and, before the days of the pestilence, numbered 11,000 inhabitants. The fever broke out on August 28th. It became an epidemic about Sept. 4th, and 8,000 of the population at once left the city. Since that time Shreveport has been quarantined in every direction. Mails for Texas are lying there which should have gone for-ward two months ago. The lowest mor-tality on any day of twenty-four hours was three and the highest thirty-six. Up to October 25th there had been 720

The cause of the yellow fever epi-demic is not attributable to the Red River raft. Not a single case of fever er any other sicknesss occurred among the 140 men employed by the United States Government in removing this ob-struction to the upper Red River navigation. This fact in itself puts a quietus on the theory of several scientists. The causes of the fearful epidemic, after the appearance of the disease, are to be found in the filthy condition of the city and in the drying up of the swamps and morasses in the suburbs, producing the malaria. The virulence of the contagion is directly attributable to the skinning of 200 carcasses of dead cattle and their subsequent putrefaction on the river banks, about two miles below the city. A steamer loaded with cattle sunk at that place, and the negroes towed the dead animals ashore, where, after being skinned, their carcasses were left to decompose. A southwest wind, wich prevails during much of that season of the year, carried the stench which the burning sun created into the city. This pre-pared the air for taking the infection. The first case of the fever, however, was brought from New Orleans; but, under the influences mentioned, it resolved itself into the most virulent type of Mexican black vomit. The perce age of deaths at the most violent period of the pestilence was 95 out of every 100. Sixty per cent. was about the average, but there were never less than 40 deaths to every 100 persons attacked. The symptoms began with a violent pain in the head and shoulders. Heavy aches and numbness then attacked the bones in the limbs. The fever then set in and the pulse rose to 120 to 140 per minute. The crisis of the disease arrived in about three days, when the fever left the patient; then, if the kidneys could be kept right, the case was a hopeful one. All of the deaths occurred either from black vomit, which is the complete putrefaction of the stomach, or from the entire sequestra-tion of the urinary organs. There was hardly a case of the disease where the catheter did not have to be resorted to. The period of the disease was in each case owing to the constitution of the patient—the strongest did not survive a week.

The treatment was simply a hot mustard bath, with castor oil as a cathartic. Calomel, the old specific in this disease, was entirely discarded. Fear killed great many. Recovery in the best cases was a matter of coolness, constitution and good luck. The shortness of the supply of nurses prompted the organization of the Howard Association in Shreveport, Mr. L. R. Simmons being chosen President. The President of the Association in New Orleans, Mr. E.

There were no hearses to convey the bodies with some show of decorum to their last resting places. No mourners followed the corpse to the grave. Those wno would have wished to go to the funeral of a friend were required at the bedside of a dying wife or child. The sick monopolized the attention of the living; the dead were regarded as beyoud all the help of love or affection. High and low, rich and poor, were buried alike. Whole families were swept out of existence-not a member left. There are 120 little orphans who have lost both father and mother. They will be raised by the State of Lou-

The fever virtually terminated on the 26th of October, when a heavy frost chilled the atmosphere, and by stiffening up the ground stopped the forma-tion of the malaria. Regarding myself I can only say that I never have had case of the disease.

BAKED FRESH FISH .- Bake like meat in a pan, with salt and a little water, half or a whole cup of cream, according to the quantity of fish. It will bake in about an hour; and a thickening gravy should be made in the pan, after the fish is taken up. Cut halibut in thin slices, but other kinds, like haddock, shad, etc., are best baked whole, and may be stuffed, if desired. This is a nice way of cooking, if one cannot eat county summoned a posse of fifty men fish fried, as it preserves the flavor and went in pursuit.

The Murdered Peddler.

An Old Story Reteld.

One of the most striking cases of presence of mind and self-possession of which I have any recollection came to light in a trial which took place some months since in Ireland. The story looks like a fiction, but I have reason to believe it quite true.

A woman was traveling along a road to join her husband, who was engaged as a teamster in the army, and was quartered some twelve miles from Athlone. She had not proceeded far when she was joined by a peddler, who was going the same way.

They entered into a conversation during a walk of some hours, but as the day began to wene they accord that day began to wane they agreed that they should stop for the night at a house of entertainment, and pursue their pedestrian journey the next day.

They reached an humble inn, situated in a lonely spot by the roadside, and, fatigued after a long day's walk, they were glad to find themselves under the shelter of a roof.

Having refreshed themselves with a substantial supper set before them, they expressed a wish to retire.

They were shown into the travelers room and went to rest in their respec-The peddler, before retiring, had called the landlord saide and given into his keeping the pack which he had unstrapped from his back until the morning, telling him that it contained a considerable sum of money and much valuable property.

They were not long in bed hefore the peddler fell into a sound sleep, but the poor woman, perhaps from over-fatigue or from thoughts of meeting her husband next day, lay awake. A couple of hours might have passed, when she saw the door slowly opened and a person enter holding a light, which he screened with his hand. She instantly recog-nized in him one of the young men she had seen below, son to the landlord. He advanced with stealthy steps to the bedside of the peddler and watched the poor victim's throat from ear to ear.

A slight, half audible groan, and all was still, save the cautious movement

Th was still, save the cautious movement of the party engaged in the fatal deed. They had brought in with them a large sack, into which they thrust the unresisting body. The poor woman lay silently in her bed, fearing that her turn would come next. She heard low mutterings among the men, from which she soon gathered that they should murder her too, as they feared she might have it in her power to betray them. One of them said he was sure that she was fast asleep, and there was no occasion to trouble themselves; but to make sure of this being the case one came to her bedside with the candle in his hand and the other with a knife. She kept her eyes closed as if in sleep, and had such com-plete command over herself as not to she was conscious of what was going on. The candle was passed close to her eyes, the knife was drawn close to her throat, she never winked or showed by any movement of her features or of limb that she apprehended danger. So the men whispered that she was so soundly asleep that nothing was to be feared from her, and went out of the room, removing the sack which contained the verge of destruction. They walked by her side, entered into conversation, asked her where she was going, and told her that their road was the same way; they questioned her as to where she had ledged the night before, and made minute inquiries about the family occupying the wayside inn. Her answers were quite unembarrassed, and said the people of the house had appeared to be decent and civil, and had treated her very well. For two hours the men continued by her side conversing and watching her with most scrutinizing glances at any change in her countenance, and asking questions which, had she not been fully self-possessed, might have put her off her guard. It was not till her dreaded companions had left her, and till she saw her husband coming along the road to meet her that she lost her selfcommand which she had so successfully exercised, and throwing herself into his arms, fainted away.

People who once engage in this sort of thing are very apt to stick to it. The reason is the same as that which binds others, often even against their will, to gambling; and that reason is the greater intensity of excitement which such occupation affords as compared with or-dinary business.

And the uncertainties of stock-gam-

Individuals think they can do differ ntly from what any one has ever done before; that they can operate in stocks just long enough to make a fortune, and then quit. Fatal delusion! The fate which awaits stock-gamblers has been distinctly shown during the recent monetary crisis. Men so rich a few weeks ago that it was thought they were sure to remain rich for life, are now insolvent. Others considered wellto-do have been reduced to the verge of

Get Strong Harness and Bits.

Considering the lives of those who sit behind horses often depend on the soundness of a bit or a strap, it is remarkable how little attention is paid to the condition of harness by those who trust themselves, not only in strange carriages, but also in their own vehicles. An English journal, devoted to the harness trade, after observing that scarceplete command over herself as not to betray in her countenance any sign that of an accident arising from a bit breaking while in the horse's mouth, points out that there are three ways of making these bits: One is to forge them throughout of the toughest iron or of soft steel; the other is to use cast cheeks, and forge the mouthpieces; while the third is to cast them throughout. The first is the only method that should be followed, but buyers will not pay the prices asked, and manufacturers body of the murdered man.

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

which can be cured by a timely resort to this standard preparation, as has been proved by the hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors. It is acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most reliable preparation ever introduced for the relief and cure of all Lung complaints, and is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years. When resorted to in season it seldom fails to effect a speedy cure in the most severe cases of Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup, Whooping Cough, Influenza, Asthma, Colds, Sore Throat, Pains or Soreness in the Chest and Side, Liver Complaint, Bleeding at the Lungs, &c. Wistar's Balsam does not dry up a Cough, and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs, and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.
