in my last, most of the sattlers fled. But nere und there a straggler returned from the mountain of wilderness, and in the course of three or four months, cabins were going up over the ashes of their former homes, and quite a little neighborhood was collect-ed. But the Indians kept prowling around on the mountains, now descending here and now there, killing this family, scalping that or making it captive. At a little distance from the present Court house at Wilksbarre lived a family by the name of Sciocum, upon whom the visitations of the ladians' crucities were awfully severe. The men were one day away in the fields, and in an instant the house was surrounded by Indians. There was in it, the mother, a daughter about nine years of age, a son aged thirteen, innother daughter aged five. and a little boy aged two and a balf. A young man, and a boy by the name of Kingsley were present grinding a knife.—
The first thing the Indians did was to shoot door to get to the fort. The Indians chased ber just enough to see her fright, and having a hearty bugh as she ran and clung to and lifted her chubby little brother. They then took the Kingsley boy and young Sclocum, aged thirteen, and little Frances aged five, and prepared to depart. But finding young Schoom lame, at the earnest en reaties of the mother, they set him down and left him. Their captives were then young Kingsley and the little girl .-The mother's heart swelled unuterably, and for years she could not describe the some without tears. She saw an Indian throw her child over his shoulder, and as her hair fell over her face, with one hand she brushed it aside, while the tears fell from her distended eye, and stretching out her other hand towards her mother, she called for her aid. The Indian turned into the bushes, and this was the last seen of little Frances. The image, probably, the conversations, what were the hopes and ces, I will not attempt to describe. Probably the children saw that all after life, the heart of the stricken mother was yearning for the latle one whose fate was so uncertain, and whose face she could never see again.

As the boys grew up and became men. they were very anx ous to know the fare! of their little fair-haired sister. They that nothing can break its links! wrote letters, they sent inquiries, they made journeys through all the west and in the Canadas, if peradventure they might learn probability certainly is that he is not living. any thing respecting her fate. Four of these long journeys were made in vain. A I had from the lips of Mr. Sclocum, the silence deep as the deepest forest through brother, and the same who was two and a which they wandered, hung over her fate, and that sixty years.

My reader will now pass over 58 years from the time of this captivity, and suppose make the good part of an interesting volume. bimself far in the wilderness, in the fur herest part of Indiana. A very respectable agent of the United States is travelling ere, and weary and belated, with a tired horse, he stops at an Indian Wigwam for the night. He can speak the Indian language. The family are rich for Indians, have horses and skins in abundance. In the course of the evening, he notices that the hair of the woman is light, and her skin, under her dress, is also white. This led to a conversation. She told him she was a white child, but had been carried away when a very small girl.

She could only remember that her name was Sclocum, that she lived in a little house on the banks of the Susquehanna, and how many there were in her father's family, and the order of their ages! But the name of the town she could not remember. On reaching his home, the agent mentioned the story to his mother. She urged him to write and print the account. Accordingly he wro e it, and sent it to Lancaster of this State, requesting that it might be published. By some, to me, unaccountable blunder, it lay in the office two years before It was printed. But last summer it was published. In a few days it fell into the hands of Mr. Sclorum, of Wilkesbarre, who was the little two and a half year old boy, when Frances was taken. In a few days he was off to seek his sister, taking with him his oldest sister, (the one who aided him to escape,) and writing to a broth. er who now lives in Ohio, and who I believe was born after the captivi y, to meet him and go with him.

The two brothers and sister are now (1836,) on their way to seek little Frances just sixty years after her captivity. After travelling more than 300 miles through the wilderness they reached the Indian country the home of the Miami Indian. Nine miles from the pearest white, they find the little wigwern. "I shall know my sister," said the civilized sister, "because she lost the nuil of her first finger. You brother hamered it off in the blacksmith shop when she was four year old." They go into the cabin and find an Indian woman having the appearance of seventy-five. She is painted and jewelled off, and dressed like an Indian in all respects. Nothing but her heir and covered skin could indicate her origin.—

They get an interpreter and begin to converse. She tells them where she was born, ther name, &c., with the order of her fath, er's family. "How came your nail gone?" death is to him the gate to life, the gate to gain the oldest sister. "My older brother and them is, "I would not live alway;" for the bought in any of the Southern towns.

But what a picture for a painter would he inside of that cabin have afforded .-Here were the children of civilization, respeciable, temperate, intelligent, and weatthy, able to overcome mountains to recover their sister. He either died or run away, and she hen married a Miami Indian, a chief as I believe. She has two daughters, both of whom are married, and who live in all the glory of an Indian cabin, deer-skin clothes, and cow-skin head dresses. No one of the family can spenk a word of English. They have iorses in abundance, and when the Indian sister wanted to accompany her new relaives, she whipped out and bridled her horse, and then, a la Turk, mounted astride and was off. At night she could throw a blanket around her, down upon the floor, and at once by asleep.

The brothers and sister tried to persuade heir lost eister to return with them, and i she desired it, bring her children. They would transplant her again to the banks of the Susquehanna, and of their wealth make her home happy. But no. > THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN AN IRRELIGIOUS

It is a sad thing, to see up old man, that is a sinner ; -one, who has, all his life, been quench ng the Spirit of God, and doing de the morus multicautis and making silk. spite to it ; -one, who has been, all his life, shutting up his heart against the quiet inhonoured and alone; a thing, on which the gen le dew of heaven now never I ghts; ble to the Farmer of domestic habits who wishsad thing, to see such an one, waiting for its ripeness, but like a withered and blasted tree tottering to its fell. It is a piteous thing. too, to see a worldly old man, come to that senson, when there is no pleasure even in his poor and only pleasures ; when the fee. ble and palsied limbs can ply no more in less ards their wonted tasks, their toil, their hurry, turions. their business; when he is past all the uses of earth, and has not made himself fit for any of er or better.

And fthis is sail to behold, what is it to be felt? What shall be the thoughts of the sinful and the worldly old man, as, day after day, bout after hour, brings him nearer to he sid house appointed for all living ? What shall soot e his wearied spirits, what streng. then him to bear the feebleness of body, the pangs of infirmity, the decay of nature, the st uggle of death ? What shall employ his long vacant hours? What busy interest to oncer his recent thoughts? Pear must come to one ; but hope, that comes to all, comes not to either.

But this is not so with the Christian old man. Broken, worn, feeble, fast sinking to the grave in body ; bru's 4, it might seem, with all the wrath of God without, he has all the peace of God within. Desires, fears, passions, have all died away ; and in the deep recesses of his soul, he hears the voice of the Lord God speaking to him. He hath known in part only yet; as yet he hath seen only "through a glass darkly." And he desires the day, when he shall know hich shall be from the full enjoyment of shich shall be from the full enjoyment of that rest which remaineth for the people of God. And so he pass a the short time of his sojourang here in each hope; and possesses his soul in patience. That Saviour who bath cheered and conforted him for so many years, leaves him not, neather forsakes him, in the day of his decline, and the hour of his death; but leads him, by quiet and easy steps, in the sense of God's comforing presence, to his end. Once again when presence, to his end. Once again, when he departs, he desires to partake of that high communion of his Saviour's body and blood a which hath been his best comfort. and best strength, below; and here indeed, he teels God manifesting Himself to his soul; renewing all his promises, now, near at hand to be fulfilled; s rengthening him against the hour of Jeath; and freeing him from the fear of judgment. "I have waited, O Lord," he says as he expires, "for thy salvation! I fear no evil now, for Thou art with me ! TRY rod and TRY staff they comfort me."-- Rev. Hugh James Rose.

THE FORCE OF TRUTH.

A gentleman was ouce asked in company nat led him to embrace the fruits of the Gosp I, which formerly he was known to have neglected and despised! He said, My call and conversion to God my St. viour, were produced by very singular means; a person put into my hands "Pame's Age of Reason." I read it with attention, and was much struck with the rong and ridiculous representation be made of many passages in the Bible. I confess to my shame, I had never read the Bible through; but from what I remember to have heard at Church, and accidentally on other occasions. I could not persuade myself that Paine's report was quite exact, or that the Bible was quite so absurd as he represented it. I resolved, therefore, that I would read the Bible regularly through, and compare the passages when I had done so. that I might give the Bible fair play. I accordingly set mys if to the task, and as I advanced, I was struck with the majesty which spoke, the awfulness of the tru his ts d vine origin, which increased with every page, so that I flats and my inquiry with the tultest satisfaction of the truth as it is in Jesus, and my heart was penetrated with a sense of obligati n I had never felt before. resolved hence orth to ake the sacred word for my guile, and to be a faithful follower of the Son of God.

CHERAW ADVERTISER. The Editor of the Cheraw Gazette has dermmed, at the suggestion of the Pee Dee Agricultural Society, to devote more space than formerly to Agriculture, and matters pertaining specially to its interests. About nine columns, or a page and a half weekly, will be occupied with this subject, excep when it shall be necessary to make room for Executive Messages, and a few other political papers such as every intelligent citizen ought to read. A large proportion of what shall appear under the Agricultural head must, of course, be selected. But the numerous Agricultural periodicals now published in this country afford abundant and excellent materials for selection; and, after a short time, the reports, and other papers of teh Pee Dee Agricultural Society will of themselves, torm no meone deration body of original matter, all of it adapted particularly to this part of the country. And it is hoped, also, that among the numerous intelligent and enterprising plante s of the surrounding districts and counties some may be found who will, occasionally, take the trouble of contributing to the columns of the paper the result of their experience.
