GEORGIA OFFICE. SAVANNAH, April 17, 12 M. The Santee, Capt. Brooks, arrived this morning from Picalata, Black Creek, &c., via Jacksonville, &c. We learn from an officer of the Army, a passenger in the Santee, that when the boat left the above places, not the slightest intelligence had been received of the movements of Gen. Scott and the forces under his command.

This engagement is doubtless the same as that already noticed as having occurred at Volusia on the 23d ult. in which the loss of whites was stated at three killed, and the Indians five (among them Billy Hicks or Eusbey Billy.) Gen. Eustis states that he has with a large number of famishing horses. Information has reached Black Creek, that five hundred Creeks, under General Woodward had passed through Tallahassee on their way to Tampa.

From the American Monthly Magazine. A PLAN OF LIFE. [The fate of the late Mrs. Theodosia Burr Alston, daughter of Col. A. Burr, has excited a deep interest in the public mind. From a variety of manuscripts, in her own hand-writing, now in my possession I have selected the following scrap. If you think with me, that it is not unworthy a place in the American Monthly Magazine, you will be pleased to insert it in your next number. I transmit you a literal copy of what bears evident marks of being the original, and perhaps the only copy ever made. These who had the happiness to know her, will acknowledge this effusion as descriptive of her feelings.]

How charmingly does Rousseau describe his MAMON CHAMPETRE. How fascinating does he render a country life. But I differ from him. I would have a commodious house, surrounded by a large garden, in the midst of a considerable city. I should prefer to be wealthy, that abundance unattended, comforts and elegancies, might surround me;—that I might frequently give agreeable parties without long premeditation or studied preparations—that my friends might be sometimes pleased with those trifling, but delicate proofs of a attention which sweetens the intercourse of life;—that they might sometimes receive more useful marks of my attachment, if overtake n by the storms of adversity, and that I might relieve the sufferings of my fellow-creatures.

Nothing about me should be very costly. My expenses should be so regulated that no article, by approaching the verge of my utmost income, should put it in the power of any one to distress me by a momentary accident. My furniture should never be rich; I would rather change it frequently, to preserve that air of freshness which so enlivens an apartment distinguished rather by taste than fashion. My dress should be characterized in the same way. My parties should never be crowded or expensive. I should not care that any one on leaving my house burst forth in admiration of my bill-room or my supper table; but that all should say—"I hope Mrs. A. will soon give us another party." There should be but few servants in my house, but high wages and some indulgences should procure the best.

I would have only a small library consisting of a few favorite authors; but by subscribing to the best public collection, secure a larger choice than any private fortune could aspire to; and thus preserve myself from the chagrin incurred by the constant loss of lent books, or the ill will which is produced by refusing them. The whole morning should be devoted to domestic affairs—such as are incumbent on every woman to study, or to the intercourse of the heart in the exclusive society of those I love. At dinner frequently a few friends;—always room for one or two. In the evening my house should be open; my musical visitors should find the best instruments, and all should share in good cheer without the appearance of exertion from any one. Frequent small select parties at supper would render my house attractive to the sprightly. My father and my husband would be sought by men of literature and talents. To render my conversation worthy of them should be a part of the morning's business; and though unable to strengthen or illuminate, I might chance sometimes to throw in an airy ornament, and hang now and then a wreath of violets in the temple of Minerva. Large assemblies I would never enter. The necessary preparations; the loss of time so disproportionate to its object; the bustle and the crowd, all render them detestable. I would have, too, a small country residence—a cottage near a town, where every thing should be rustic. A wild exuberance of sweets and flowers; multitudes of singing birds attracted by security; a deep grove, where Eolian harps should sigh thro' trees; a bathing house; some books, musical instruments, and pure air should render my cottage delightful. I would sometimes retire to taste solitude. Thither my friends might ride with us, to partake of a rural meal distinguished by simplicity and ease—not prescribed by any particular place, in set regularity; in the dining or breakfast room; the piazza, or on a rock overhanging a river, or among the old trees richly adorned with garlands exhaling perfumes.

My great rule should be never to aim at competition in things extrinsic and really trivial. I would seek the honey cup, and let those who choose prefer the coral. DRIVING BUSINESS.—The Bangor commercial advertiser says that, according to a statement of the city clerk, intentions of marriage have been published by him of two hundred and twenty-one couple! and he thinks, if it had not been for fear of a French war, he should have had fifty more.

THE JOURNAL: CAMDEN, A. RIL 23, 1836.

UNITED STATES BANK.—The Treasurer of the State of Georgia has given notice that the Notes of the Bank of the United States will not be received in payment for debts due to the State.

We are indebted to the politeness of Col. Maximo, and Gen. Rogers, for several valuable Congressional documents, among others, to the latter, for a copy of a very interesting letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, on the growth and manufacture of Cotton.

THE LADY'S BOUL.—We are under obligations to the publisher, for the April number of this elegant work. It is handsomely embellished with an engraving, "the Pacific Toilet," and a continuation of the Gallery of Portraits, together with a piece of Music. Its literary character is inferior to no publication of the day, devoted to its particular objects. The Editor in his remarks observes that the March number has been highly spoken of, and indeed pronounced to be the best of this however, we are not able to judge, not having been favored with one, if it be better than the one before us, the Editor would oblige us by letting it come this way yet. We like a good thing none the less, because it happens to be long coming.

BEST BOOT SHOES.—The manufacture of sugar from Beets is likely to become a matter of importance in this country. In France it is carried on profitably and to a very considerable extent, and can, no doubt be as successfully prosecuted here. A company of gentlemen in Boston were formed in association for the purpose of smocking in the enterprise, and have sent a person to France for the purpose of collecting all the information on the subject, necessary to the manufacture.

It is stated that the sugar manufactured from the Beet, is equal if not superior to that extracted from the cane, and that it can be bought in France at about nine cents per pound. If this be true and there is no doubt but the fact is so, what benefits may we not expect from its introduction to this country?

We wish the gentlemen who have engaged in this laudable enterprise, the most complete success, in their subsequent endeavors to promoting the permanent interests of the whole country.

SCARCITY OF PROVISIONS.—The Charleston Courier, says, "beef, of inferior quality is selling at 25 cents per pound, and other articles of the most kind in proportion, and some times difficult to be obtained, even at this exorbitant price."

We can very well sympathize with our Charleston friends, for we have been well nigh the point of starvation ourselves, for sometime past. We are to be sure, tolerably supplied with beef and bacon, but then we are out of Butter and poultry, and can obtain neither, for love or money. Will not our country friends supply our Charleston brethren with a beef of two, and in the mean time bring a little poultry and butter to Camden. They can't tell how much we should be obliged to them.

MAGNETOENCE.—It is a pity that such a beautiful property as the following should be lost, and we shall therefore endeavor to add a word or so, to its immortality. The Editor, in his anxiety to eulogize the beauties of Spring, has anticipated her coming by some weeks if we may judge by the temperature and character of the weather for the last week. It attests to our mind any thing else rather than a "vivifying influence," for the last week has been one of the most lugubrious that it has fallen in our lot to experience for sometime past, and if there be aid in the somber hue of the present season any un-developed germs of future beauty, we can only say that the season, thus far has taken, in our opinion, an extremely awkward and disagreeable way of showing it. We shall however give the increase, a place in our columns, with the hope that it may at no distant day be in season.

From the Raleigh Register. The Season.—Every thing attests the vivifying influence of the Season. Universal Nature is awakening from her long sleep, opening her eyes in the shape of innumerable flowers, and preparing for a joyous change. A poetical fancy may imagine that the un-developed germs of future beauty and enjoyment are anticipating the vernal delights in store for them,—but the flowers in the blossom are dreaming of sunshine and rich odors; that the leaves in the bud are thrilling with pleasure, as they wave to and fro in the soft breeze, longing to leap out of their close prisons into the sparkling air; and that the roots in the ground stretch themselves upwards, proud, beforehand, of the superb colours and graceful forms which will arrest the eye of the passenger when they rise up out of their temporary graves, in all their renovated loveliness.

BENJAMIN RAWLS, Esq. has been appointed Post Master at Columbia, S. C.

WYATT W. SPARKS, Esq. has been elected President, and HIRSH HERRINGSON, Esq. Cashier of the Bank of Hamburg, S. C. The latter gentleman has been heretofore Cashier of the Commercial Bank, Columbia, and the Merchants Bank, Cheraw.

CONGRESS.—Our readers are aware that the Senate have fixed on the 23d May for adjournment, but it is likely that they will hardly do so at that time, as the House have not yet taken the subject up for consideration. At all events if they should do so, much of the business must remain unfinished; the National Intelligencer says that Congress have before them at least seven hundred Bills, and many of them of great public importance.

However desirous the majority in Congress may be to make progress in the business of legislation, they will hardly be able to effect much, so long as the minority, regardless of the public good, and of every thing else, save their opposition to the administration, are straining every nerve to prevent the accomplishment of any thing. Every effort is made by them to cause delay, if they cannot defeat a measure, by making and repeating motions and asking for the yeas and nays on them, and if pronounced out of order, appealing from the decision of the Chair, and hanging long speeches on these appeals, and in fact, on the most trifling subjects. It is thus that the public interest is made to suffer, to serve the vindictive feelings of the enemies of the administration. The people will reward them for their labor of love.

FLORIDA. We are without any satisfactory advices from this Territory. The latest date from the Kershaw Volunteers is 28th March; since that time nothing has been heard of their movements. We hope they will ere long give a good account of themselves.

DIED.—In this town on Monday last, the 19th instant, of a lingering and protracted pulmonary affection, Mr. PEARCE CARPENTER, aged 23 years. He was the last of three sons, of which this fatal disease had, thus in the morning of their days, deprived a widowed parent, and on whom the burden centred all the affections of a mother.

Mr. CARPENTER was a native of Sea Fork, Massachusetts, but for several years past, a resident of this town. He led by his amiable and unassuming manners, gained the esteem of all who had the pleasure of his acquaintance, and by his upright and integrity, in the transaction of business, secured the confidence of a large circle of friends. He had never attached himself to any particular church, but always sustained a high moral character, and was constant in his attentions at the house of God. During his last illness, which we have said was protracted, he manifested great regret that he had not before paid more attention to the subject of religion, acknowledged its truths, and desired that its importance should be impressed in all, and particularly his relatives. He survived long enough after this, to give ample evidence of the consolations which is to be derived under the deepest affliction, from a firm reliance on the goodness and mercy of God, through the merits of a crucified Saviour, and died, leaving his friends and relatives the happy consolation of believing that he has left a world of pain and care, for one, where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest.

THE BANK OF CAMDEN, S. C. (INCORPORATED) Several questions of importance to those who may become subscribers for the Stock of "THE BANK OF CAMDEN, S. C." having arisen in relation to the construction of the charter, the undersigned commissioners at Camden, have obtained the opinions of several of the most eminent legal gentlemen in the State, and will in appointing the Stock, should there be an excess, place every subscriber for five shares only, and upwards upon an equal footing to the extent of five shares. Should it then appear that the subscriptions so fixed at five shares each, together with those for less than five shares, exceed the capital authorized, they will be reduced pro rata. Should they however not amount to the capital authorized, then the balance will be divided between the subscribers proportionally to their shares. This mode of apportionment will accord with the obvious intention of the Legislature, whereby that which would protect the original subscribers of five shares only, would manifestly (there being 500 or more of them) exclude not only those for more than five shares, but even those for one, two, three and four shares. In relation to the question whether a partnership, in its character as such, and the individuals composing it, can subscribe for 200 shares on each day the Books are to be open, we have no legal advice; but it is manifest that the Legislature did not intend that any individual should either directly or indirectly, obtain more than 200 shares, "on either day that the Books shall be open," in May; now A. B. being the half owner of eight different concerns who subscribe for 200 shares "on either day," will including his individual subscription, obtain 200 shares, instead of 100, which we think it was the intention of the Legislature, to restrict him. With regard to the oath required to be taken, we are persuaded that no man subscribing for himself or for another can conscientiously take it, if the person for whom this subscription is ostensibly made, has by understanding (contract) with another, deprived himself of the control of his stock. You are earnestly desired immediately after your books are closed to transmit them to us, together with the amount received or the certificate of the Cashier of any specie paying Bank, that the amount is deposited to our credit. We make the request in order to effect the apportionment a long before the election of directors as possible, and for other good reasons. C. MATHEWSON, J. BLAIR, W. E. JOHNSON, Commissioners at Camden.

A CARD. THE subscriber avails himself of this opportunity to return his sincere thanks to the inhabitants of Camden and its vicinity, for the liberal patronage and support they have tendered him, during his residence in this place, and also to inform them that having sold his stock of merchandise to Mr. W. J. GERALD, who will continue the same business at his old stand, he solicits for that gentleman a continuance of that patronage and support from his customers, confident that no exertions will be spared by him to merit their confidence and give them entire satisfaction. A. CATONNET. April 9—11-c.

NOTICE. THE subscriber begs leave to inform his friends and customers, that having purchased from Mr. A. CATONNET, his entire stock of merchandise on very liberal terms, and added his own to it—he has removed to that well known stand, corner of Broad and Rutledge Streets, where, preparatory to his laying in an entire new supply he will continue selling DRY GOODS, FOR CASH, AT COST, AND GROCERIES, WINES AND CONFECTIONARY, on very reasonable terms. From his customers, and those of Mr. CATONNET's, he solicits a continuance of their liberal patronage, which he hopes to merit by close attention to business, and a firm determination, to sell GOODS cheap. W. J. GERALD. April 9—11-c.
