THE CRISIS HAS COME.

The crisis has come, shall we longer submit, To injustice, oppression and wrong; Must we still further yield—and prove we're not fit, For the State to which freemen belong?

We have asked for no right that was not our own, By the compact we solemnly framed.— And in place of the bread we've gotten a stone, Whenever those rights we have claimed.

Must we live in a Union—only in name— To be treated with scorn and disdain; Shall they reap the glory, the profit and fame, In divisions of national gain?

We've built up their cities—and deserts now bloom, By Southern industry and toil,— And all that we gained from these lords of the loom, Is language degrading and vile.

Then let us prepare for the change in our state, If we dream of resistance at all— For sooner or later it will be our fate To rise or ingloriously fall.

The Clergy of Mexico.—A pamphlet published in Mexico, states that the income of the clergy of that country amounts to $20,000,000 per annum. They are also in possession of landed property representing an enormous capital. The revenues of the General Government itself are stated not to exceed $5,000,000.

An English paper makes the following observations: "The United States sends us four-fifths of the raw material, which this immense population works on, and without which this immense population seems doomed to be thrown out of employ. Our supply of cotton from other quarters has been steadily decreasing, and in fact America is substantially the source by which, and by which alone, our cotton manufacturers can be kept in healthy activity."

Melons in January.—On New Year's day the editor of the Alabama State Guard was presented with a large and excellently flavored water melon, weighing twenty-four pounds, raised by Mr. Spigner, twelve miles north-east of Wetumpka. The seed were planted in July; the melons matured by the first frost, and were pulled and placed, like potatoes in a dry house, where it is said they will keep all winter. Mr. Spigner carried a number to Wetumpka, on Christmas, and sold them for fair prices.

Damages for killing a Man's Wife.—In the Supreme Court on Saturday, the jury returned a verdict in the case of Ernest Shafman and wife vs. the Boston and Worcester Railroad Co; and in another action tried simultaneously of Ernest Shafman vs. the same defendants, for plaintiff's and assessed damages in the first case of $2,400; and in the second $1,600—making $4,000 the legal price of killing a man's wife on the railroad.

There are many people who think to educate a child is to crowd into his head a given amount of knowledge; to teach the mechanism of reading and writing; to load the memory with words; to prepare a boy for the routine of trade. No wonder then that they consider almost every body fit to teach. The true end of education is to unfold and direct our whole nature aright. Its office is to call forth powers of thought, affection, will, and outward actions; power to observe, to reason, to judge, to conceive; power to adopt good courses and pursue them efficiently; power to govern ourselves and influence others; power to gain and spread happiness. Reading is but an instrument; education is to teach its proper use. The intellect was created not to receive passively a few words, dates and facts but to be active for the acquisition of truth—Accordingly, education should inspire a profound love of truth, and teach the process of investigation. A sound logic, by which we mean the science of art which instructs us in the laws of reasoning and evidence, in the method of inquiry, and in the sources of false judgment, is an essential part of a good education.

Faith and Doubt.—Faith in God reflects the very image of all the virtues of heaven upon the heart, just as the smooth expanse of waters, by reflection, bears the image of surrounding trees and of the skies above; but if doubt is cast into the mind, the image of God is broken up, and all the confusion of unbelief disturbs the soul, just as a stone thrown into the glassy lake spoils all the reflections of surrounding beauties. Reader, keep your faith in God clear, and this shall impress the divine image upon all your affections.

A PRAIRIE INCIDENT.

At a place called Yellow Creek, about half way between Salt Lake and the junction of the Oregon and California road, where we were the unwilling witnesses to an Indian massacre. On the evening previous, we had crossed the creek and encamped about a mile beyond. Near the creek some Snake Indians, thirteen in all, had erected their wigwags. Before dark I had endeavored, but in vain, to trade with the chief, for a pony, but "no swap," was the word, though all the while some one of the party kept exhibiting the good qualities and speed of the different animals. The young squaws excelled their lords in horsemanship or horsemanship. One young creature assumed every attitude of the best circus rider. She would pick her whip from the ground under full speed; check her pony in his mad career, as if he had been shot; wheel him at full speed, by an inclination of her body—throw the lasso successfully at whatever object she pleased. She rode like the men, yet,

"An antelope,

In the suspended impulse of its lightness, Were less etherially light." She was an Indian beauty, too, and somewhat of a coquette in the bargain. She would arch her own and horse's neck at any praise bestowed on either her beauty or her horsemanship, and laugh most heartily at our attempts to make ourselves understood. She was all life and buoyancy—but alas! she was a cold corpse ere the morning sun shone upon the valley in which she had been so active and happy.

Just as the day was breaking, we heard the ominous war-hoop and immediately followed the sharp crack of a rifle. We aroused ourselves from our slumber and hastened towards the scene of action. A horrid sight met our view. There lay the dead forms of those who had lived and breathed the evening before; nearly all had two or three bullets in their bodies. Our heroine of the night previous had not escaped. She lay outside her wigwag a bleeding corpse. No respect had been paid to her jet-black locks, the scalping knife had passed round them; and they now doubtless grace the girdle of some graceless Utah. Twelve Snakes lay dead upon the ground, nine of whom had been scalped, two old Indians and a boy having escaped the knife; one squaw had escaped by flight. The perpetrators of this horrid scene were about fifty Utah Indians, whom we saw near the camp of an emigrating party, about a mile from the scene of action. With horror and disgust we turned from the sight, and pursued our way.—St. Louis Intelligencer.

Heroism of Sailors.—The Richmond Republican speaking of punishments in the navy, and remarking that at present it can see no substitute for flogging, although it would rejoice to see this disgraceful mode of punishment abolished, if any other mode can be suggested which will preserve the discipline and the efficiency of the service, says:

"We must concede, that degraded as the habits of sailors often are, there are redeeming traits about them such as no other class of men in the world possess. We doubt, for example, whether the pages of the history of the world present a parallel to the sublime magnanimity and self-sacrifice of the crew of the United States brig Somers. When that vessel was wrecked and about to sink, it was found that only a portion of the crew could be taken off in boats. Those who were commanded to remain obeyed without a murmur. Some offered their places in the boats to others, though it was evident that no human help could reach those who remained. A large, heavy man, who had taken a seat in one of the boats, was ordered to return to the vessel, as thereby two men of smaller size could be saved. He did so without complaint. The boats sailed off; the Somers went down amid the boiling waves, and with her those self-sacrificing heroes, whose glorious courage and greatness of spirit have never been equalled in ancient or modern times.

"We confess that we do not like to see the lash held over men capable of such deeds, and that we most earnestly hope to see a thorough reform, and a plan substituted by which discipline can be preserved without this degrading mode of punishment."

DESTITUTION IN NORTHERN CITIES.—Death from Starvation and Cold.—Yesterday afternoon, says the Boston Times, Coroner Pratt was informed that a circumstance, calling for his interference, had taken place in a room in the rear of 216 Ann street; he repaired to the spot, and found a scene of misery, destitution, suffering and death, almost too severe for belief. Two women were lying in a bed, with no clothing excepting the rags on their backs, and no fire in the room. They had nothing to eat during three days, neither had there been any fire in the room during that period. One of the women was quite dead; she had perished from want of food and fire. The other was partially restored by means of proper appliances, and measures have been made to preserve her from a similar strait, should she recover, which at present is doubtful.

MANSION HOUSE.
CAMDEN, S. C.

THE subscriber respectfully announces to his friends and the TRAVELLING PUBLIC generally, that he has opened, as a HOTEL, that large and commodious house in Log Town, formerly the private residence of B. Perkins, esq. The building is admirably adapted for that purpose, being situated in the most healthy and pleasant part of Camden, combining all the advantages of the town with the balmy atmosphere of the country, and within a few minutes' walk of any part of Camden. The rooms are large and airy, his Servants respectful and attentive, and he pledges himself to spare no pains in keeping up an attractive and well supplied TABLE, and to use every exertion to please those who may call upon him.

His STABLES will be found commodious, and always fully supplied with Provender, and the House being conducted on Temperance Principles, he flatters himself that those who favor him with a call will find the MANSION HOUSE not only the comforts and attention of a well regulated Hotel, but the quiet retirement of a Home. Charges moderate. All the Stages arriving in the place, and the Omnibuses running to the Depot, will call at the House when desired.
