The Ideal and the Actual.

My boat is on the bounding tide,
Away, away from surge and shore;
A waif upon the wave I ride,
Without a rudder or an oar.

Blow as ye list, ye breezes, blow—
The compass now is nought to me;
Flow as ye will, ye billows, flow,
If but ye bear me out to sea.

Yon waving line of dusty blue,
Where care and toil oppress the heart—
To thee I bid a long adieu,
And smile to feel that thus we part.

There let the sweating ploughman toil,
The yearning miser court his gain,
The fevered scholar waste his oil,
But I am bounding o'er the main!

How fresh these breezes to the brow—
How dear this freedom to the soil;
Bright ocean, I am with thee now,
So let thy golden billows roll!

But stay—what means this throbbing brain—
This heaving chest—these pulses quick?
Oh, take me to the land again,
For I am very, very sick.

From the Pickens (Ala.) Republican.
A CALIFORNIA LETTER.

We have been presented with the subjoined letter for publication. It is written by an emigrant from this country as will appear on perusal, it speaks of several who left about the same time, will be interesting to at least the numerous friends and acquaintances. We have taken the liberty to omit those portions which were of an entirely domestic character, such as could not interest the good reader. We cannot make room for the other letter from the same source this week.

North Fork of the American River,
July 14th 1850.

Dear Brother:

Gladly would I shun the task that I am compelled to perform in writing you this letter, did not a sense of duty urge the necessity of dispelling the delusion that you may still yet, be under. After writing you the letter, dated June 10th, in which I stated that I had heard nothing from William, I, with the other boys, left the city and came to where we now are, I then set out alone in search of William. Traversed hills, mountains, and rivers, until I became convinced that I would have to leave it to time to reveal his whereabouts and it was not until the 8th of this month that I found any person that could give me any information. I happened to inquire of a young man, who proved to be a son of Ben Williams, from S. C., that met William in Memphis, Miss., and traveled with him until he died. He was able, also, to inform me where I could find David Summerville, from whom I could learn all particulars. I immediately set out to find him and after several days travel reached his camp. David wrote two letters, one to his brother and one to me, stating the facts, which were these. William after traveling five hundred and fifty miles across the plains in the most healthy and lively manner, he was taken with the cholera, and died in ten hours. He was lieutenant of the company to which he belonged. He was looked upon as the life of the whole train, he was the esteem of his associates and his death was regretted by all who knew him. During the few moments that were left him for reflection, he remained conscious of his situation and from the first symptoms of the attack, seemed to know that his earthly career was at an end. The only thing he said about his relations was that he wished them to hear that he met his death without the least fear, and towards the last prayed that his suffering might quickly terminate in death. He requested Summerville to take charge of his effects and manage them as best he could, until they were delivered into our hands. This duty David Summerville has discharged in a manner that deserves, not only our gratitude, but in a manner that should ensure him a welcome to the hearts of every one bearing the name of Goodwin, or every one that feels that death in robing us of a beloved brother, has severed a tie that bound them to the dearest. Samy, were it possible for me to give you an idea of my feelings when I found that death, in its ravages, had shut out forever from my sight the beacon light that shone so brightly in the firmament of all my hopes, I would refrain from giving you the picture so that I might screen you from the pang that your sympathy would naturally give you. Similar trials have I met, but under different circumstances. Through the instrumentality of the death our hearts have been made familiar with sorrow's pangs from our infancy, but we always had those around that would sustain and console us and seem to bear part of our burthen by the exercising of their sympathies, but now, with me, it is different, with no one, to whom I can pour out the feelings of an almost broken heart, and receive the consolation of sympathy in return, I am compelled to sustain the shock under the most desolate circumstances. But I find, in the Philosophy of nature, provisions made for all men, and under almost all circumstances it is required one that should call our aid, reason, sound sense and Philosophy to point out our course and shape our ends, and derive from them the consolation that they were designed to furnish. Entertaining, as I hope I do, liberal views upon the workings of providence, I wish you to look upon our loss not in a disponding light, but view it as the accomplishment of some great good, some wise purpose in the sight of omnipotence that our finite minds are not able to comprehend. I cannot advise you to come to this country, neither can I advise you to stay there, for in the first place, there is too much risk to encounter, in coming to this place, for me to advise any one to venture, and in the second place, that country affords too little encouragement to the young beginner in life, for me to say stay at home. Though I am not disappointed in the least as regards the mineral wealth of this country and the chances for making money, yet, there are nine tenths of the men that come here will forever repent the day they left home, not because they can do nothing, but because they become disheartened and will do nothing. You must do the best you can, until I determine what is best for you to do, I will try and let you know by next March whether it is best for you to come here or not.

Your brother,

J. D. GOODWIN.

Boston Philanthropy.—One Margaret Moran, an Irish girl, but seventeen years old, died last week in Boston, from cold and starvation. The Boston Transcript says that scenes of destitution and misery, such as were detailed in this case before the coroner, are by no means uncommon in that city. Meantime the pious and Christi n people of Boston, are wasting all their humanity and religion on a few runaway negroes, to whom the best boon that could be given, would be a restoration to the whole some food and comfortable quarters they would find on their master's plantations, and here they have no time to bestow a thought on the wants and sufferings of their own race. But such is abolition philanthropy.

THE MAGNOLIA CEMETERY.—This attractive rural resort continues to be the scene of ever-varying architectural improvement, and gathering place for the votaries of afternoon recreation—and its serpentine walks and rides, or evening meditation among the tombs, and solitary places, within its ample enclosures. The rustic chapel near the entrance, now nearly completed, and dedicated to impressive funeral rites, and as a temporary resting place for the dead, during their performance, rears its substantial roof imposingly, through the trees and foliage, while about and around its vicinity, are tastefully laid out, squares for burial lots, miniature islands, as if erst up by magic hands from the depths of the lakelets that glide around them for the abode of fairies and naiads; green bowers and shady groves diversify the scene, and offer food both for the eye and mind. No labor or liberality has been spared, to render the Magnolia Cemetery an ornament to our suburbs, and a monument of the public spirit of its founders.

Applicants for Lots in the Cemetery, are referred to Edward C. Jones, Esq., Architect, office corner of Broad and Church-streets, for all information required.—Courier.

KING'S MOUNTAIN RAILROAD.—We learn that the King's Mountain Railroad, (says the Yorkville Miscellany,) is progressing as rapidly as can reasonably be hoped for. The grading contracts are all let with the exception of about a mile and a third. Many of the timber contracts are also made, and persons are almost daily applying for those sections not under contract. The iron has been contracted for and is expected to arrive in all during the Spring. These facts will explain the rapid calls, that have been made on the Stockholders. It is certainly the interest of the Stockholders when once the expenditure of their money is commenced, to have the whole road completed as early as possible. Interest will in this manner be saved, and they will enjoy the benefits of their undertaking.

ANOTHER DEATH ON THE RAILROAD.—A young man, by the name of Page, a fireman on the Railroad, came to his death yesterday morning, under the following distressing circumstances: He was on a freight train, which had stopped at Louisville, (a station on the Columbia branch of the South Carolina Railroad,) and was backing on the side track for the purpose of allowing the passenger train to pass.— Whilst so doing, Mr. Page climbed to the top of the box cars, to see if the passenger train was in sight, and slipping, fell between two cars on the road, and the train passed over his breast, killing him instantaneously. His body was brought to the city yesterday in the Columbia train for interment.—Chas. Sun.

Postage Stamp Frauds.—It has been ascertained that the Government is largely defrauded by the use of postage stamps. They have been used two or three times over. Stamped envelopes are proposed to obviate the difficulty.

HARDWARE.

THE subscribers have now completed, and offer for sale, one of the most extensive and best selected stocks of HARDWARE ever brought to this market, embracing every article which, from a long experience, they have found was wanted here, and also such new inventions as they think would be likely to be wanted. In almost all instances, they have bought direct from the English and American manufacturers, and can consequently sell as low as Goods of the same quality can be had elsewhere. As they cannot, through the medium of an advertisement, give any idea of the extent and variety of their stock, they would solicit a call, when purchasers can judge for themselves.

When the Hardware for a building, or whole sets of Tools are wanted, a liberal discount will be made.

MANSION HOUSE.

CAMDEN, S. C.

THE subscriber respectfully announces to his friends and the TRAVELLING PUBLIC generally, that he has opened, as a HOTEL, that large and commodious house in Log Town, formerly the private residence of B. Perkins, esq.

The building is admirably adapted for that purpose, being situated in the most healthy and pleasant part of Camden, combining all the advantages of the town with the balmy atmosphere of the country, and within a few minutes' walk of any part of Camden. The rooms are large and airy, his Servants respectful and attentive, and he pledges himself to spare no pains in keeping up an attractive and well supplied TABLE, and to use every exertion to please those who may call upon him.

His STABLES will be found commodious, and always fully supplied with Provender, and The House being conducted on Temperance Principles, he flatters himself that those who favor him with a call will find the MANSION HOUSE not only the comforts and attention of a well regulated Hotel, but the quiet retirement of a Home. Charges moderate.

All the Stages arriving in the place, and the Omnibuses running to the Depot, will call at the House when desired.
