

Louisiana.

The Louisiana compromise has not lasted long. The democratic majority in the house has violated the letter and spirit of the Wheeler compact by expelling four republicans and seating four democrats, thus securing a majority on joint ballot.

Parker in Jail.

This gentleman was arrested in Columbia on the 21st inst, upon the affidavits of Gov. Chamberlain, T. C. Dunn, S. W. Melton, W. D. Nash and Paris Simkins, as commissioners of the Sinking fund, for embezzling money of that fund while State Treasurer to the amount of $28,100.

The Tax Bill.

The Columbia Phoenix, in an editorial upon the Supply bill quotes from our article of last week, and endorses our suggestion that in the event of the Governor's veto of said bill, that meetings be held and resolutions of thanks be forwarded to Gov. Chamberlain from every county in the State.

The great duty of our people is to come up to the aid of the Governor in demanding that only a reasonable and just tax shall be imposed upon them. They should strengthen his hands and the hands of all in his party who in the party, are making a stand against heavy taxation, legislative frauds and convenient processes by which their money is taken so sparingly out of their pockets.

All Dog.—Noticing a local on dogs in the Herald last week, the Greenville News says that all the dogs that have emigrated from that town lately have been "stuffed."

Dog-on-it—we lunched on a little of that Greenville Bologna the other day. We saw it.

The editor of the Merchant and Farmer got poetical this week. His paper is full of poetry. When are you going to court the muse again, brother Mc?

The Lexington Centennial.

The celebration on Monday of the hundredth anniversary of the battles of Concord and Lexington was a fitting introduction to the centennial of independence, which is still one year distant. The patriotism of New England was never more deeply stirred by any local event, and two well equipped railroads leading from Boston to Concord, only twenty miles distant, could not transport the immense crowds of enthusiastic citizens desiring to participate in the ceremonies.

At Lexington, after the orations, dinner was served in an immense tent to a large number of distinguished guests. Mr. Stetson, president of the occasion, occupied a seat in the centre.

The President of the United States, responded to in the usual manner by his excellency.

"The dead of Lexington." Responded to by Gen. Banks. The orator of the day, Mr. Richard H. Dana, jr., replied in a witty and happy speech.

"The State of South Carolina. Never will Massachusetts forget the proud response of South Carolina the very night she heard the war note from Lexington. Gov. Chamberlain may veto everything he wishes, but he must not veto our earnest respect for a voice from the Palmetto State to the pine." Gov. Chamberlain, who responded, was received with much applause, as were also his sentiments of earnest desire for the complete and early restoration of true fraternal feelings between the two great commonwealths.

"The Commonwealth of Massachusetts." Gov. Gaston believed that on the 19th of April, and on the historic grounds of Concord and Lexington, Massachusetts needed none to speak for her.

"England and the United States." No regular response was given to this toast, but in lieu of it a letter was read from Mr. Gladstone, ex-premier of England.

"The Bench and Bar" was responded to by Chief Justice Gray, of Massachusetts.

"The Colleges and Universities," to which General Joshua L. Chamberlain responded.

"The Commerce of the United States." Responded to by Elliott C. Cowder, of New York.

"The North and South." In response to a complimentary call of the President, Gen. Wm. F. Bartlett, of Massachusetts, made a remarkable and beautiful speech. Referring to southern soldiers, he said:

In conclusion, "as an American, I am as proud of the men who charged so bravely with Pickett's division on our lines at Gettysburg as I am of the men who bravely met and repulsed them there. Men cannot always choose the right cause, but when, having chosen that which their consciences dictated, they are ready to die for it, if they justify not their cause, they at least ennoble themselves, and the men who for conscience sake fought their government at Gettysburg ought easily to be forgiven by the sons of men who for conscience sake fought against their government at Lexington and Bunker Hill. Oh, sir, as Massachusetts was first in war, so let her be first in peace, and she shall forever be first in the hearts of her countrymen."

In his testimony, on the 9th, inst., Mr. Boecher related this affecting scene, illustrating clerical life in Brooklyn:

"I turned a little toward her and said: 'Emma Moulton, I am a good man; you may be sure of that; I am a good man!' And with that she put her hand around my neck gently, so as to bring my head up a little, and kissed me on my forehead; and it was certainly a kiss of inspiration; still I thought it prudent not to return it. In a little while Mr. Moulton came in."

We think H. W. B. was wrong in this matter. By his own statement, Frank did not come in until "after a little while," and there was plenty of time for Emma to be well kissed. We don't like prudence in such matters. With that "kiss of inspiration" dancing through his veins, Henry should not have disappointed Emma; lips apt and time agreeing Emma ought to have had that kiss returned. What luck the preachers have! If Joan of

Are or any other woman wished to soften some of the asperities of South Carolina journalism by giving us a "kiss of inspiration," we should return it instantly, and defer the question of prudence until a more convenient season.

A CARD. JOHN OGRÉN SUCCESSOR OF ROBERT JENNY.

I have come here to make my home among you, the citizens of Orangeburg county, and to be one among you, with the hope of sharing a portion of your patronage. I shall make it my effort to do justice to all mankind.

I will keep constantly on hand ready made Harness and Saddles.

Repairing promptly attended to during the regular business hours of the day, and will make my charges as reasonable as possible, with the hope of inducing trade, and keeping our money among us, to our mutual advantage.
