

[From the Darling Southerner.]
Maxims.

BY MRS. WILLIAMS.

God made man in his own image; he has transformed himself into the image of his Satanic Majesty.

The more that a woman concedes to a man the less he honors her. If you wish his reverence keep him at a distance.

If you wish a man to admire you flatter him.

There is not one man in ten thousand worthy of the love of a pure woman.

When a man is not a tyrant it is because he is a coward.

Men break the commandments because they believe that God intended them for women only.

One man has as much conceit as one hundred women.

Men are always jealous of women who have eclipsed them in literature and art.

There are one hundred thousand bad husbands to one good.

The more you know of a man the less apt you are to admire him.

The happiest women in the world are those who have kept the clearest of the men and given them no opportunity of robbing them either of their affections or their money.

Oh! hold that man up somebody if he is alive, for she writes herself "Mrs." "Man has transformed himself into the image of his Satanic Majesty," he must be a good looking old fellow, for some of us men are very passable "images." "When he is not a tyrant, &c." Oh deserted Moses! help! help! help! take her off! enough, we give up, don't hit again. Except that "Mrs." that is too thin. Only some old "Miss" could get off such "Maxims." But there, you stop now, don't you come again, we ain't "troubling of you," you just let us alone. We bet no man ever went bothering around you.
