The Cordial Balm of Syricum and Tonic Pills.

NERVOUS DEBILITY,

However obscure the cause may be which contribute to render nervous debility a disease so prevalent, affecting, as it does, nearly one-half of our adult population, it is a melancholy fact that day by day, and year by year, we witness a most frightful increase of nervous affections from the slightest neuralgia to the more grave and extreme forms of

NERVOUS PROSTRATION,

Is characterized by a general languor or weakness of the whole organism, especially of the nervous system, obstructing and preventing the ordinary functions of nature; hence there is a disordered state of the secretions; constipation, scanty and high-colored urine, with an excess of earthy or lime sediment, indicative of waste of brain and nerve substance; frequent palpitations of the heart, loss of memory and marked irresolution of purpose, and inability to carry into action any well-defined business enterprise, or to fix the mind upon any one thing at a time. There is great sensitiveness to impress, though retained but a short time, with a flickering and fluttering condition of the mental faculties, rendering an individual what is commonly called a "whiffle-minded" or "fickle-minded" man.

THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND LOTHROP'S TONIC PILLS,

Medicines unrivaled for their wonderful properties and remarkable cures of all Nervous Complaints. Their efficacy is equally great in the treatment and cure of Cancers, Nodes, Ulcers, Pustules, Pimples, Tetter, Fever, Sores, Ringworm, Erysipelas, Scald-head, Barbers' Itch, Scoury, Salt Rheum, Copper-Colored Blisters, Glandular Swellings, Worms and Black Spots in the Flesh, Discolorations, Ulcers in the Throat, Mouth and Nose, Sore Legs, and Sores of every character, because these medicines are the very best.

BLOOD MEDICINE

Ever placed before the people, and are warranted to be the most powerful Alternative ever originated by man, removing Morbid Sensibility, Depression of Spirits, Deaferia and Melancholia.

Sold by all Druggists, and will be sent by express to all parts of the country by addressing the proprietor, G. EDGAR LOTHROP, M. D., 143 Court Street, Boston, Mass., who may be consulted free of charge either personally or by mail. Send 25 cents and get a copy of his Book on Nervous Diseases.

How Mary Jane was Won.

HOW HER FATHER HELPED THE BASHFUL LOVERS AT THE RIGHT TIME.

There is no foolishness about some of the fathers of Dubuque county, Iowa, who have marriageable daughters, and they know how to precipitate business when the fruit is ripe. Matters were brought to a climax with a rush at a certain farmer's residence in Vernon township, recently. A young tiller of the soil had for months been paying most assiduous attentions to one of his daughters, but he was such a bashful, modest chap, never having been much in the company of girls, except this one, that he had never been able to raise his courage sufficiently high to pop the all-important question.

He had gone to the house in which his admirer lived, upon at least twenty different occasions, resolved to know his fate; but when ushered into the presence of his fair one, into whose keeping he had placed his heart, his courage would invariably "go back on him," and he would return to his lonely room in greater suspense than before. Upon the evening in question he had determined that, come what would, he would tell his Mary that he loved her. He would once for all decide the matter. But, as upon each former occasion, he could get the proposal no further than his throat. There it stuck, and he had just determined to gulp it down and give up the siege when the door opened and in stalked the girl's father, who advanced to where they were sitting and addressed them:

"I came in to put a stop to this infernal foolishness. It ain't the courtin' expenses that I'm looking at, for coal oil's cheap an' wood can be had for the haulin'; but I'm sick and tired of this billin' and cooin' like a pair of sick doves, keepin' me awake of nights, and it's got to be stoped right here. Mary Jane, look up here. Do you love John Henry well enough to marry him?"

"Why, father, I—I—you must"—
"Stop that darn foolishin'," yelled the old man. "Answer 'yes' or 'no,' mighty quick, too. It's got to be settled now or never."

"Answer 'yes' or 'no.' Speak!" roared the old gent.

"Well, yes, then. There, now," and Mary again hid her face.

"That's business; that's the way to talk. Now, John, look here—look up here, or I'll shake you all to pieces. Do you want that gal o' mine for a wife? Speak out like a man, now."

"Why, Mr. ———, ain't this rather a—I mean, can't you?"

"Speak it out, or out of this house you'll go head-foremost. I won't wait a minute longer. There's the gal, and a likelier gal ain't in the State, and you just heard her say she wanted you. Now, John, I won't stand a bit o' foolin'; once for all, 'yes' or 'no'?"

"Well, yes, sir; I have been presumptuous enough to hope that I—"

"Oh, confound your soft talk; the thing's settled now. You two blasted fools would have been six months more at that job that I've done in five minutes. I never saw such foolin' as there is among young people nowadays. Ain't like it was when I was young—an' so good night. You can talk the thing over, an' you an' me John, I'll go to town an' get the license to-morrow. Soon be time to go to plowin'—no time for love-makin' then. Good night, good night; hope I wasn't too rough, but I was determined to fix the thing up one way or 'other,' and the old man went back to bed.

Now that the ice was broken, the young people laid off their plans for the future, and John felt just a little bad at the comfort he had lost, when Mary looked up at him shyly, and said:

"This would have been all right four months ago, John, if you hadn't been so skeery. I know'd all the time that you wanted to ask me, but wasn't my place to say anything, you know."

No curds.

Once More United.

The return to the Republican ranks of the better class of Liberal Republicans, is a gratifying fact. It indicates a unity of purpose among intelligent citizens to keep Democracy out of power. In Ohio, Iowa, and Nebraska, former Liberals worked earnestly for the Republican party. They have good reason, therefore, to share in the thanks due to all good citizens, for the splendid achievements of October 12th.

This return to the party of those who left it in 1872 was to be expected. In that year personal grievances led to a rupture of party relations. The Democrats, taking advantage of this, thought to defeat the Republican party by accepting a life-long Republican as their standard bearer. The popular verdict rendered by the people, was not against Mr. Greeley, as an individual, but against the party at his back. Mr. Greeley might be trusted; the Democracy, despite its promises, could not be. Those Republicans who voted for Mr. Greeley did so out of respect for his long service in the cause of human freedom.

Their admiration for the man led them to overlook or disregard the dangerous political elements which would have neutralized his good intentions had he been elected. In addition to this personal devotion to an old leader, many joined the Liberal ranks, believing that a new party was to be formed, that would draw from the two great parties their very best material. Thus the Republican party had been created, and it was thought that thus a great Liberal party could be formed. They had no desire to join the Democratic party. Between the two, they preferred the Republican party, but they wanted something better than either. They failed in their design. The people were not ready to accept a third party; the majority had confidence in the one in power; and the Democrats refused to go out of their organization. So the Liberal movement failed, and the majority of those who favored it, have re-united in good faith with the Republican party. What has been done in Ohio, Iowa, and Nebraska, will be done in New York and Pennsylvania.

Advices from the last named States, indicate that nearly intelligent Liberal has returned to the Republican ranks. A few designing men have endeavored to transfer them to the Democratic party, but they could not be bought or sold. They have opened their eyes to the fact, that the issue is between the two great parties of the day, and that every vote cast for side issues is half a vote for the Democratic party. Knowing this, they will not be parties to placing in power a party that they know to be corrupt and unworthy of public support. These facts all point to a united party in 1875, and through this unity to a brilliant Republican victory.

A Smuggler's Wooden Leg.

Perhaps the most ingenious method of deceiving the Custom House officers that has come to light lately was the device of a man with a wooden leg. His name was Ernest Bohman, and he was a native of Saxony. He was usually dressed very shabbily, and traveled as a poor emigrant. He was a skillful story teller, and betrayed himself by telling a very humorous story the second time within the hearing of the same detective, who was on board one of the White Star steamer with him. The climax was brought out in such an inimitable manner in broken English, that the officer readily recalled the voice and manner of another one legged emigrant who had come over in a ship of another line only two weeks before.

The fact of a poorly dressed man making two trips to America within so short a period excited his suspicion. He accordingly reported the circumstances when the vessel arrived in port, and unusual diligence was used in searching his baggage and person, and nothing was found until his wooden leg was removed. It was fastened to the natural leg at the knee, and armed with a ferrule at the bottom. When it was taken off it seemed unusually light, and, on careful examination was found to be hollow, and to contain about five thousand dollars' worth of laces and precious stones. He had been a diamond merchant, but had become poor, and subsequently entered the Prussian army in the French war as a non-commissioned officer. He lost his leg in battle, and when he recovered he thought of this method of retrieving his fallen fortunes.—St. Catherine's News.

A Bloodless Combat.

A fairer face than that possessed by Eudocia von Amburg is seldom seen. Beside being beautiful, she was very wealthy, having inherited the vast possessions of her deceased parents. Since her orphanage, she had been the ward of Joseph II., Emperor of Germany.

Of course there were many suitors for her hand; but among them all were only two upon whom the fair Eudocia looked with any degree of favor. These two were barons comparatively young, who had served with her father in the war against the Turks. They were the Baron von Oberndorf, and the Baron von Frobach. The emperor, entertaining equal respect for both these suitors knew not how to decide between them, and the maiden could not give him the benefit of her decision. In this dilemma, Joseph told the two barons that they stood upon equal terms in his confidence and esteem, he could give neither the preference over the other, and they must decide the matter by their own prowess; but as he did not wish this matter to be the cause of bloodshed, and perhaps of death, as might be the case if offensive weapons were used, he had ordered a large sack to be provided, and he who should be successful enough to put his rival into it should have his fair ward for a wife.

The suitor agreed, and this ludicrous combat took place in presence of the imperial court. It lasted almost an hour. At length, Frobach was compelled to yield, and the triumphant Oberndorf, having forced him into the sack, took him upon his back, and laid him at the feet of the emperor. Within a week the fair Eudocia became Baroness von Oberndorf.

THE SOUTHERN CULTIVATOR.—This old and reliable friend of the farmer pursues the even tenor of its way, striving earnestly and honestly to assist him during these hard and trying times. It advocates progress only when it pays. There is nothing of the fancy or sensational about it. Solid, practical, suggestive, it is just what real working farmers need. The very large number of inquiries presented by them each month, to be answered by the editor or his correspondents, show plainly their confidence in it. If you have never seen a copy, call at this office and examine one, or send a stamp to W. L. Jones, Athens, Ga., and get a specimen. Price $2.10, postage paid. Clubs at reduced rates. Every Grange ought to get up a large club.

Eight suits have been instituted in New York against persons who resisted the census-takers. Of these six were women who rebelled at the insinuating inquiry. "Are you male or female, and if so, how long?"

"It's horrible to be economical," said a pretty woman to Quiz, with the utmost pliancy. "There's no use of living if you can't dress well. What is a woman, anyhow, without her clothes?" And Quiz laughed a little, and choked himself, and blushed, and didn't answer.

A tramp who attended a fire got around just as a keg of beer was tapped. He grabbed a mug and filled it, unmindful of some ashes, three flies, two shingle-nails and a piece of shaving soap already in the mug. When he finished his drink none of these articles were visible, and later in the day he complained of being bilious.

"You're always off at nights, Leander," said Mrs. Spilkins, reproachfully, the other evening. "Yes, my dear," replied Spilkins. "You'll remember even when I first proposed you considered me a pretty good off-er."

Little Julia, just five years old, being cautioned by her little brother against eating too much for supper, and being told she would have night mare, wanted to know where the night mare stayed in the daytime.

She was one of those sentimental young creatures who linger at the doorway to bid you good-by in the starlight, and after she parted from him the other night, she went up to her room murmuring: "es, I would know it was hard times, by the kind of hair oil he uses now."
