NERVOUS DEBILITY,

However obscure the cause may be which contribute to render nervous debility a disease so prevalent, affecting, as it does, nearly one-half of our adult population, it is a melancholy fact that day by day, and year by year, we witness a most frightful inereass of nervous affections from the slight est neuralgia to the more grave and extreme forms of

NERVOUS PROSTRATION,

[FOR THE NEWS AND TIMES.]

Nil Desperandum.

BY JOANNES

Though malice with its poisned tongue, Should try to drive me mad; Though cowards should me daily wrong, My spirit must be glad.

For in this troublous hour of mine,-This hour when friends are few, There are some hopes which on mo shine, Lome hearts I know are true.

The skulking sneak, the perjured soul, The lips that love to lie,
These jewels, rare, they'll not control!—
On these, my hopes rely.

The craven heart may beat with life, And moun that I'm not dead; But what care I for idle strife When by such friendships led?

So I shall take my even course, And still pursue the right; And spurn the filthy, wicked source That would my spirit blight. October 30th, 1875.

Good Common Sense.

Connected with improper food, imoure air is the greatest cause of the excessive infant mortality in our American cities.

The importance of free ventilation of nurseries and the sleeping apartments of children is not sufficiently appreciated.

Considering the defective food and clothing of the children of the poor, and the condition of their dwellings, it is evident that much of the health which they possess is owing to their spending much of their time during the day in the open air.

The organs of respiration will continue healthy or become diseased, in accordance with the nature of the atmosphere, or in plain language, as the air is pure or impure; and as they become deranged, the blood becomes vitiated, just in proportion as the air is impure. Air that has been frequently breathed is deprived of its oxygen, and becomes charged with carbon, and is thus rendered unfit for breathing. This should always be attended to, taking care to admit fresh air at purify it in those apartments which are inhabited by children. Children evince ancasiness by crying or fretfulness, and a constant recurrence or irritating causes renders them habitu ally fretful. They are, therefore, injured morally as well as physically, by breathing an impure atmosphere.

Pure air is the great promoter of healthy action in all the body, but especially in the liver, lungs and skin, and, therefore, is more conducive to the vigorous performance of the digestive functions and also those of the

To show the importance of a fresh supply of air, we breathenbout twenty times a minute. A healthy man spoils, by breathing, about fifty-seven hogshends of fresh air every day. All living bodies must breathe oxygen or

All the animal functions are maintained by the incessant play of affinities between the atmosphere and the organs, and all are conveyed directly to the blood.

We breathe twenty distinct and separate inspirations in one minute; 1,200 times in one hour, and 28,800 times in every twenty-four hours. See the effect this must have in breathing foul or confined air, and how much health and life depend on a copious supply of fresh air. How, then, can people overlook this fact, that to live, we must have a full supply of it.

In proportion to the vitiation of the air by the breath and by exhalations from the body, it becomes capable of receiving and conveying the infectious seeds of disease. Thus the disease, typhoid fever, is ofter produced and communicated wherever the ventilation is deficient; thus has ignorance often prepared a soil for the growth of pestilence in every age and clime.

"Georgy" said a benevolent old gentleman to the youthful son of a family he was visiting, "what are you

Flinging Shadows.

We have no more right to fling an unnecessary shadow over the spirit of those with whom we have to do, than we have to fling a stone and injure fair grounds. them. Yet this flinging shadows is a very common sin, and one to which women are particularly addicted. Oh, what a blessing is a merry, cheerful woman in a household! One whose spirits are not affected by we' days, or little disappointments, or whose milk of human kindness does not sour in the sunshine of prosperity. Such a woman in the darkest hours brightens the house like a little piece of sunshiny weather. The magnetism of her smile, the electrical brightness of her looks and movements, infect every one. The children go to school with a sense of something great to be achieved; her husband goes into the world in a conqueror's spirit. No matter how people worry and annoy him all day, far off her presence shines, and he whispers to himself. "At home I shall find rest." So day by day she literally renews his strength and energy; and if you know a man with a beaming face, a kind heart and a prosperous business, in nine cases out of ten you will find he has a wife of this kind; for nothing is more certain than that the man who who is married must ask his wife for permission to be happy and wealthy.

Some farmers make it a practice to keep the poultry in the orchards from early spring till cold weather sets in. and they find that it pays for so doing. A picket fence should be buil: around the orchard high enough to prevent their flying over, with suit able buildings placed in one corner of the yard to shelter them at night. Thus situated the poultry will thrive and prosper, keeping themselves in good condition, and the increase of eggs will be greatly augmented and their usefulness enhanced to their owners at least on account of the myriads of insects and worms they destroy, and which will more than repay the cost of building the fence. By keeping them enclosed in this manner a larger number of fowls may be retained in the orchard, and the continual scratching which is done by them will prove advantageous both to the soil and the trees themselves.

Victory.-She was an elderly lady, and as she scated herself on onof the stools in Wallach's store and asked to be shown some "caliker," she remarked that when she was a "gal" she thought she was powerful lucky if she got sixteen yards in a dress, and she thought it a "sinful" waste of stuff to put in more; but she had just "heorn" that Mrs. X. was goin' to have forty-two yards in her new caliker, and she hoped that there might be a cloud burst in seventcen minutes if that air woman should stare round at her and make remarks about her clothes. "You kin just cut me off forty-three yards, and I'll have it made pinback fashion, with an over dress and a square mainsail and a flyin' jib and a backaction; then I'd jist like to see that stuck up Mrs. X. put on airs over me,"

HINTS ON PRESERVATION OF THE PIANO -The piano should no be placed in a damp room, or left open in a draft. Dampness is it most dangerous enemy. Do not place the piano near the stove, open grate fire, hot air furnace. Place a lump of camphor, wrapped in soft paper, in one of the corners inside, for the prevention of moths. An India rubber or cloth cover should in every case protect the piano. A new piano should be tuned at least every four months during the first year, and the greatest importance is to have your pianos tuned by only competent tun-

A clergymen, meeting a little boy of his acquaintance said, "This is quite a stormy day my son?" "Yes, sir." answered, the boy, "this is quite a wet rain." The clergyman, thinking to rebuke such hyperboleasked if he ever knew of any other than a wet rain. "I never knew personally of any other," returned the boy; "but I have read in a vertain book of a time when it rained fire and brimstone and I guess that was not a very wet rain."
