A Bottle of Tears
I believed him. The peach came back to my cheek; a girl's lustre kindled in my eye; a wife's and mother's pride began to lay plans for life and home—but they were soon dashed and broken, for before I was up from that bed he came back home drunk again. My sun went out in sudden, irretrievable midnight my heavens they could be called, became starless; I grew old; my heart petrified. But, sir, you will find it all, and much more, in the bottle of tears. I need not tell you of the next few sorrow-laden years, and the coming of the second girl; of the flight of luxury; of the desertion of friends of the absence of visitors; of the curtailing of expenses and enforced economy; in order to meet your liquor claims: of the loss of my health; other efforts to keep the wolf from the door; of the times I have fled, by night with frightened children, from a rum-crazed husband and father; of a cheerless hearth-stone; of a bare table, and the birth of a third child in the midst of the squallor to which only a drunkard's home is familiar; of my vain effort to keep the children clothed and fed; of the deeper depths into which you pulled my now helpless husband. One night there was such a pain in my heart that I cried out. It awoke Mary, who came to me and asked what the matter was. I told her that I was in so much pain that I must be dying, that she would have to take mamma's place and care for papa and little sisters, that papa was a hopeless drunkard, and that she would soon be the only bread winner. You will find in the bottle of tears how we spent that night, Mary and I in praying and planning. How little Mary took her seat at dawn in the doorway and watched for papa's return; how, with the rising of the sun, he came staggering up the once flower-bordered, now weed-infested road; how Mary ran down and threw her arms about her father and said, "O my papa! Our my precious husband home me, at the break of day, and him dead on the floor, and ried back, I suppose to the bling table, over which victim had just been shot. found some friendly negroes dig the grave in what I thought was my garden, and we laid down under his favorite apple tree. I thought to put flowers there this summer and shells in winter, and teach my girls of how noble he was before he fell into your clutches. But it seems I buried him in your garden and under your apple tree! Indeed, he was laid on your floor. It is marked with your victim's blood. After some kind colored friends helped me to shroud him and while sitting up with his precious remains that night, I tried to wash out the stain of blood, thinking I could not bear to look at it and walk over it. But it turns out that it is your floor, on which he who gave you his vast property, his manhood, his family, his very soul, found a cooling board. You will find it all, sir, in the bottle of tears. You order me to vacate. I obey. When you read this I will be on my way down the road east. I take this route only because it leads me away from you and your den of destructions. I don't know where I, with my three little girls, will spend the night. But one thing I promise you, whatever there is in a widow's wail, or an orphan's cry, if there really be a God, we will meet you at His judgement bar, there to tell and the truth to say, as to how you came by this home which we now leave. You will find it all, sir, in the bottle of tears."—South Carolina Anti-Saloon League.
