MAYOR Rhett, of Columbia, has been renominated for a third term by the Democrats of that city. We congratulate the people of Columbia on their good judgment in this matter. They know a good officer when they get him.

"FORMERLY," says the New York Sun, "when a member of Congress died, his remains were interred in the Congressional Cemetery east of the Capitol, and a plain and inexpensive granite monument was erected over the spot of burial." But that was before the days of parlor cars with a buffet at one end.

Capt. B. R. Tillman says "the farmers' movement in this State is not aimed at the Democratic party; that the farmers who are interested in this movement are Democrats, and will fight their battles inside the party ranks at the primaries and in convention, and that if they are whipped they will vote the Democratic ticket and try to be more successful the next time."

Mrs. Virginia Thompson, who is making a hard fight for a third term in the Louisville post office is a lady with an exceptional gift for politics. She is remarkable not only for being a daughter of Alexander Campbell, the famous preacher, but for strong Republicanism joined to a disposition so provident of the future that she contributed liberally in 1884 to the campaign funds of both parties.

THE New York Star, the only real leading Democratic paper in the great commercial and political centre, has good hope that the President will protect the Constitution and veto the Educational Grab bill if it should pass the House. It will certainly prove Mr. Cleveland's opportunity, but whether he is grounded enough in the bed rock principles of Madison, Jefferson, Jackson, Calhoun and Black to use his power in the endeavor to prevent a great evil we cannot anticipate.

ONE branch of the Signal Service system deserves special encouragement, and Southern people are directly interested. It is the proposed method of predicting and flagging cyclones and tornadoes, and if it can be developed into anything like reasonable certainty new appropriations should be made. The subject is profoundly interesting and valuable, because it is claimed, much property and life may be saved by the service. By all means let us have the tornado signal.

A member of the South Carolina delegation says he has information of a syndicate which is being formed in Washington to purchase all outstanding claims against the Government which come within the scope of bills now pending before Congress, providing for the payment of captured and abandoned property. A corps of agents will be sent through the Southern States with instructions to buy up all cotton and other claims provided for in the bill mentioned. There are three bills of this character, and it is said that favorable action is likely to be reached on one of them during the present session.

IN one of the Norfolk papers is told—and very properly with high commendation—the story of a colored man now living in that city, who has displayed an amount of honor in the highest degree creditable to any man. Previous to the war he agreed with his master to purchase his freedom at the price of $1,300. When unannounced by President Lincoln's proclamation he had paid $800; but feeling bound by his promise, he has labored all these years to earn the remaining $500, and has just succeeded in paying the last instalment which makes him "now a freeman, indeed." In conclusion, the Norfolk paper says: "His name, which deserves to be recorded everywhere, is John Billups."

The war, which has been going on for years in the old countries between labor and capital, has at last, opened up in its most horrid shape at our own doors. Millions of dollars have been locked up, other millions have been criminally destroyed, thousands of laborers have been idle consumers, the law has been openly violated and the courts have been powerless to redress the wrong, perpetrated, the lives of our citizens have been put in jeopardy, the business of whole sections has been paralyzed and further excesses have been threatened which if carried into execution will certainly involve our people in deadly strife. Every good citizen, whether capitalist or laborer, deploras not only the present condition of affairs but looks with horror upon the possibilities of the future; and the adjustment of grievances, whatever they may be, will be hailed with joy throughout the whole country. We, therefore read with more than ordinary interest the address of Mr. Powderly, the chief of the order of Knights of Labor, and hope his better and wiser counsel will prevail among the members of that large and powerful organization. The good his policy of arbitration can accomplish is incalculable, and the evil of pursuing the present excesses is proportionately vast in its results. The tendency in powerful organizations is more in the direction of "brute force than in sober reason, and we fear unless wisdom and temperance control the advice here, every department of industry, including our farming interest, will suffer at the hands of men injudiciously managed. Loss and suffering in this case must result and anarchy and blood-shed may. Such possibilities are reasonable and lead us to believe that the present trouble in the West is no trifling matter and that our people should treat it with the consideration it deserves. Forewarned is forearmed and preparation for a fight is half the battle. Whether arbitration is the proper remedy remains to be seen, it at least argues that wrong exists somewhere, and the finding of that wrong and its proper adjustment constitute the problem of the hour.

Not unexpected, as some think, the contest with President Cleveland ended last week by the passage of Senator Edmunds' resolutions in the Senate by a strict party vote. The salvation of the Republican party has always depended upon a perfect organization and a close adherence to party faith, and wherever weakness manifested itself the party lash has been most vigorously applied to bring the traitors back to duty. In this contest the old method was the final resort and all such men as Senator Hoar and a half-dozen others, who have been silent and by that silence led the public to believe that they were opposed to the contest, have been made to realize that greater power rests in a party mandate than in the law, the constitution or the welfare of the country at large. They have been literally driven at the end of the lash to vote for a measure their better judgment could not approve. There was not enough of patriotism or manhood in their composition to make a firm stand for right and honor a possible thing. While we pity this exhibition of human weakness, we dispise the corrupting influences which made the degradation a humiliating reality. This vote, however, decides no question, gives advantage ground to nobody and does not change the position of the President in the smallest particular. He will continue to suspend, remove and appoint officers as he thinks best for the public service; the Senate will, we suppose, continue to reject and confirm as the majority think best for the Republican party, and thus we shall go on to the end. Mr. Edmunds will hold the party reins and drive the faithful steeds to the journey's end, applying the whip when they are jaded and coaxing when restive. Mr. Blaine, perhaps, may be induced to play the role of attendant in order that he may be in close proximity and to keep himself acquainted with the methods necessary for an expert manager. In the mean time the Democrats will hold the offices and see that the country suffers no detriment while the Senate's Majority under Mr. Edmunds carries the party to deeper depths of shame.

The meeting of the corporators of the Orangeburg and Lewicdale Railroad at this place last Tuesday was quite enthusiastic, and encourages the friends of this enterprise to hope that at no distant day work will be commenced on the proposed road. The building of this road is a matter of vital importance to the town of Orangeburg and our citizens should take a lively interest in it. Blackville is moving for a road in the direction of Lewicdale, and if Orangeburg does not do her duty, we have no doubt but that our Lexington friends will find a terminus for their road at that place, as we learn that our Blackville neighbors are willing to raise quite a sum for the purpose of securing the connection, so Orangeburg must wake up and go to work, if she wants to retain the trade of one of the richest sections of the County. The Philadelphia Times believes that Mr. Edmunds now knows how the hen felt that sat for a month on china eggs.

To Correct a Wrong Impression. "The Orangeburg Agricultural Society, by a vote of sixteen to twelve, adopted a resolution favoring the holding of a county convention to send delegates to the proposed State convention of farmers. A resolution 'that this society does not favor or sympathize with Mr. Tillman's proposed Farmer's Convention,' was adopted by a vote of seventeen to three."—ORANGEBURG TIMES AND DEMOCRAT. From the Edgefield Advertiser we clip the following: "The above extract has gone the rounds of the press, and to correct the same and the false impression that may be, or may have been already, created as to public opinion in Orangeburg County, we publish the following letter addressed to Capt. Ben Tillman, from a prominent gentleman of that County, who was himself a member of the Agricultural Society: ORANGEBURG, March 6, 1886. Mr. B. R. Tillman, Hamburg. DEAR SIR:—Your favor of 2d is at hand, together with pamphlets advised for which I thank you, a description of Gen. Lee's College being what I most desired to read. On receipt of your previous letter, I promptly visited some of our leading planters, (several of whom heard your speech at Bennettsville) and after a careful review of all your published articles, taken in conjunction with that speech, we were forced to the conclusion that your position was in antagonism with the entire State Administration and could not be endorsed by a conservative spirit. Under these circumstances we decided to lay the matter before our Agricultural Society without comment and the reported discussion that ensued is an unreliable and feeble version of the sentiments expressed. The fact was plainly developed that such a college was earnestly desired, but many like myself were skeptical of the plan by which it was to be secured. Since our meeting the sentiment of the mass of producers outside of the society has been freely expressed, and if a county convention was held to-morrow it would enthusiastically endorse your plan. Call your convention and this county will come. Yours truly,

We have no idea who wrote the above letter, but we hardly think that the members of the Agricultural Society will bear out the assertion it contains that "the reported discussion that ensued is an unreliable and feeble version of the sentiments expressed." Our reporter tried to report the meeting as fully as the space at his command would permit, and that he did his duty fairly and truthfully, we have no doubt. Our columns are open to this correspondent to show wherein "the reported discussion that ensued is an unreliable and feeble version of the sentiments expressed." The action of the Society may not have been what this correspondent desired, but the cold facts are that it did exactly what is reported above, and this correspondent or no one else cannot deny it or disprove it.

The revival meetings, conducted by Messrs. Moody and Sankey at the Agricultural Hall in Charleston steadily grew in interest until they left that city for Columbia on Monday morning last. We were fortunate in being able to attend these services on Saturday and Sunday, and we bear testimony to the great work done by these earnest and consecrated gentlemen in the few days appointed for them. There was a deep current of religious feeling pervading the entire congregation assembled on each occasion and particularly was this noticeable among the younger portion, especially the students of schools and cadets of the Military Academy. There was no excitement such as is often objected to on such occasion, but the gospel, presented as only Mr. Moody and others of his character can present it, was doing a great work by appealing to the honest convictions and sober reason of the people. Ministers and laymen from every portion of this State and Georgia were in attendance and we do hope that these persons imbibed much of the spirit and sentiment of this meeting, so that they may scatter their influence in every portion of the State. The preaching of Mr. Moody and the singing of Mr. Sankey cannot fail to reach the hearts and consciences of their audience and result in blessings to every one.

JAY Gould was asked last week if the Missouri Pacific company might submit to a compromise, rather than prolong the contest. He replied: "There can be no compromise; I am bound to fight this question to the bitter end. I have asked the opinion of Judge Dillon as to our legal rights. He says: 'The company has a legal remedy against the Knights of Labor in suits for damages.' We shall sue members of the organization, and the papers in the case are being prepared. We propose to recover damages from every member who has any property."

The victims of the lottery habit ought to get an eye opener from the fact brought out by the death at New Orleans of an eight millionaire who owned $600,000 of the stock of the Louisiana lottery, which paid him $50,000 annually. The officers and stockholders of these concerns never take any chances.

"RICHLAND," in the Augusta Chronicle, has got things rather mixed. He says that Mr. Jennings W. Perry will oppose Mr. Dibble for Congress. Mr. Perry is not the solicitor of that circuit, but Col. Perry Murphy is, and we suppose, "Richland" got the two gentlemen mixed up.

The fund for Mrs. Hancock has now reached about $50,000.

Trip to Orangeburg. KOGER TOWNSHIP, S. C., March 23, 1886. Verily we live in a fast age. Your correspondent left home on yesterday at 5 a. m., reached George's in time to mount the 8 o'clock train after obtaining a return ticket for Orangeburg from the faithful agent, Mr. C. Gavin. The cars make much better time than formerly. No stopping at stations and fooling on the way, to detain the way-worn travelers. Made the trip to Orangeburg in about two hours. Great improvement! Upon descending from the cars heard the cry: Edisto House? Orangeburg Hotel? "What is the fare?" Nothing, sir; get in, sir, said the cabman. Improvement again, thought I. Entered the cab, enjoyed a free ride up to the Orangeburg Hotel, kept by Mr. Fahey and his kind wife, a daughter of Uncle Billy Dukes; and, in brief, I may say that whoever stops here will soon be convinced by the good living that there is improvement in the hotel business also.

Went to the office of that Prince of attorneys, Gen. James Izlar, told him that I had come to seek his counsel, not to get the advantage of somebody, but to help me to do unto others as I would be done by. This announcement seemed to put new life in the attorney, and we went to work in earnest, searching for papers, &c. And, as always, when men go to work in the fear of God, found our records and some money where we did not expect it.

Repaired to the office of Judge Probate Izlar, satisfied his mind and was delighted to meet his venerable father, the friend of my own father of former years.

Made a short visit to the grave of my father and brother, across the street from the Court House, in rear of the church, and oh! how memories of boyhood days crowded upon my mind and heart.

"Yet there is mercy in every place, And mercy's encouraging thought Gives even affliction a grace, And reconciles man to his lot."

It was a cheering comfort as I wended my way from this mournful spot to meet, at every step, the descendants of my father's cotemporaries, and the bosom friends of my brother. Here were the Saleys, McMichaels, Izlars, Dantzers, Glovers, Dibbles, Andrews, Fredericks, Dukes, and when I returned to the depot, who should I find as agent but one of the ancient chivalry of S. C., Postell, a grandson of the silver-tongued orator, James Postell, of precious memory with our fathers.—W. M. S. in St. George's News.

An Unknown Snag. We seem to have been steered against an unknown snag, by an unknown person and in an unknown way. In the last number of THE ORANGEBURG TIMES AND DEMOCRAT there is a string of questions in the shape of a communication signed "Paysan." As well as we can understand these questions, they are intended to show that everybody in this State except the interlocutor is profoundly ignorant of the tariff. To our great astonishment and bewilderment we find the last two to be—"Can 'level headed brother Williams of the Greenville News' define free trade?"

"Does 'level headed brother Williams of the Greenville News' know that when seventy staunch free traders tackle the average Congressman they are not tackling a very 'big potato'?"

We do not know what we have done to "Paysan," neither do we understand the why or whereof of his allusions to the editor of the News, or exactly the meaning of the adjective—supposed to be descriptive—applied to that individual. But we suppose he wants answers, and therefore venture:

Question 1.—Yes. Question 2.—Depends a good deal on who the seventy staunch free traders are; likewise on what an average Congressman is. We should think any seventy staunch free traders could go down into the black district and tackle Smalls very successfully and creditably.—Greenville News.

"Thoughtful" People. The News and Courier, in speaking of the passage of the Blair bill by the Senate, says:

"This will be gratifying news to the thoughtful people of the entire country, and particularly to the people of the Southern States."

It is to be inferred, therefore, that those who are opposed to the Blair bill, including Senators Butler, Cockrell, Coke, Maxey, Harris and Representatives Aiken, Tillman and Dargan, are not "thoughtful" people. It strikes us that if our esteemed cotemporary were more "thoughtful" himself, he would be less intolerant. Did it ever occur to him that "thoughtful" people do not all think alike?

By the News and Courier's standard, Congressman Smalls is a more thoughtful person than Senator Butler.—Newberry Observer.

A Miserable Fate. On Monday morning Mr. J. Burton Smith brought his grown son, to Spartanburg to have him committed to the lunatic asylum. In last September an earwig entered his ear; he suffered excruciating torture. His head became so swollen that it burst at the temple. Twelve days ago pressure upon his neck forced the putrid little viper from his ear. But his sufferings have been so intense that his intellect is gone—his mind is a blank.—Spartanburg Herald.

Mr. Joseph Pulitzer, editor of the New York World, has sent to the governors of the New York hospital a check for $5,000—the amount of his first year's salary as representative in Congress from the ninth district. This donation is to be used in endowing a permanent bed in the hospital for sick and disabled newspaper workers.

The Congressional Committee on Agriculture will make a small appropriation for continuing the tea farm at Summerville. Commissioner Coleman was opposed to any appropriation for the purpose, but friends of the tea farm urged the matter before the committee so earnestly that a small sum will be recommended.

Local option is creating a great deal of excitement in Richmond, Va. A petition with 5,000 signatures was gotten up on Monday petitioning the Judge of the Hustings court to order an election on the question. It is expected that an election will be called at an early day.

D. H. Silcox, a prominent furniture dealer of Charleston, has failed. Liabilities, $25,000; assets about the same.

Tribute of Respect. Whereas it has pleased the Supreme Arbiter of the Universe, in his inscrutable wisdom to remove from our midst our beloved companion, Fred W. Pittham, a young man who was universally loved and respected for his exemplary character, and who as a fellow member of our Society, especially endeared himself to us, his sorrowing comrades, by his genial friendship, manly deportment and many sterling virtues.

Resolved, That in the death of our comrade, Fred W. Pittham, the Philomatheo Literary Society of Mellicamp's High School has sustained a deplorable loss which has cast a deep and solemn gloom over our entire organization.

Resolved, That our heartfelt sympathies are hereby extended to the father and other bereaved relatives of our lamented friend.

Resolved, That, though the recollection of the admirable life of our departed comrade will always be green in our hearts, in further respect, we inscribe and dedicate a page in our minute book to his memory.

Resolved, That a copy of this humble tribute be sent to the family of the deceased, and, also to THE TIMES AND DEMOCRAT for publication. W. R. LOWMAN, President Philomatheo Literary Society. FRED WANNAMAKER, Secretary.
