Unless Senator Tillman's health improves he will hardly be a candldate to succeed himself. Should the Senator retire, there will be a most lively scramble for his toga, and it would be a hard matter to say who would get it.

A correspondent writes us that in his opinion it is about time for a clean sweep from mayor to cart driver in the city government. He certainly must have been billious when he wrote his effusion, and, as he forgot to sign his name to it, we decline to publish it.

Next year will be an eventful one politically. It is an off-year in State politics, but it will be an important one nationally, as the president and congress are both to be elected. We hope the Democrats will get together and elect their candidate for president and a majority of congress.
