The Best of All Economy is the Economy of Securing the Best.

It is not economy to take your child to a cheap and inefficient teacher when an experienced and well trained one may be secured for a slightly greater fee. If you must have a cheap teacher, it would be better to reserve the cheap teacher for some later period, as the most important period of all is when your child is commencing the study of music. A poor teacher has wrecked many a promising career. The best of all economy is the economy of securing the best. If you put up with cheap things at the start, you will find that you will go through all your musical life, seeking for bargains,—bargains that are far more expensive than you have any means of determining. Music tuition in the North and West is far in excess of that in the South. In the South, it runs from six to ten dollars per month for first class instruction.

Prof. T. L. Tinsley and Mrs. Della Gilbert, who will have charge of the Departments of Piano and Voice, respectively, in Orangeburg College during the coming year, have both studied with some of the very best American as well as European trained teachers, and have had wide experience in their profession. Students from the city and surrounding country solicited. Students from the city taken in the afternoons from three to five. Rates $5 per calendar month. Session opens September 20th. Send applications to President W. S. Peterson, Orangeburg, S. C.

The Best Buggy on Earth.

is what we claim ours is. We don't care what you pay you cannot get a handsomer, easier riding, better built carriage. Take a look at it. The more you know about buggies and their values, the more you will appreciate the moderation of our prices. We have just received a car load of Buggies. Also another lot of Batteries. Call and get your supply before they are gone.

THE HEALTH OF THE CITY OF ORANGEBURG

The health of a community is its most valuable asset. This fact becomes better recognized, and is more regarded as the world grows in civilization. Prehistoric man roamed the world, thinking that all sickness was caused by some unfortunate anger of the gods, and sought to appease the gods in the hopes that the bodily disease with which he suffered would be cured—not knowing that disease was caused by himself in his ignorance. Even our own forefathers never knew that there was such thing as germs, inhabiting the human body by the millions. If you had told one of them that there were a million germs in a single drop of water, he would have called you a fool.

But with the increase of knowledge the health of a community has been regarded with greater care, and now the process is going on by which methods of cure will be cast aside for methods of prevention. Our forefathers believed in bleeding a patient, and many times took away the very strength which the sufferer needed to go through his sickness. Now in the modern scientific treatment of disease they do not bleed a patient, but in many instances, infuse more blood into him. The discovery that typhoid fever was carried by a mosquito, that flies were the carriers of much sickness, and that small pox could be prevented by vaccination are all forerunners of an Era of Health.

Our country, as a nation, is behind none in the progress of medical skill. The splendid example set the world by our physicians at Cuba and Panama, have shown that these tropical countries can be freed from typhoid, malaria, and other tropical diseases when the proper care is taken. The wonderful sanitary results at Panama have made the canal a possibility. At each station where travellers from foreign countries seek to enter our country there is a United States quarantine station, where the entire ship is inspected and all persons suspected of disease debarred entrance.

When we consider the question locally we find that Orangeburg has been for the longest, entirely free from all epidemics. Charleston has had her yellow fever, Spartanburg her small-pox, but Orangeburg has had her peace and health. The methods of prevention have had a lot to do in this. For instance when the tramp last winter was about to pass through our town, he was met by officers who halted him, erected a tent, put guards over him to see that no one approached him and that he was kept in quarantine. As a result our city was probably saved from a small-pox epidemic. Mr. Merchant, consider how much trade you would have lost had it become generally known that small pox was raging in Orangeburg.

From viewing the question in the respect of communities, we come to that of private individuals. When you begin looking for a home for yourself and family, you want a healthy place; where the little children can run and jump and play with red blood in their veins and plenty of fresh air and sunshine. You want a place where you can work without being harassed by the constant phantom of death, and the presence of the trained nurse in your home. So, we say, if you are looking for that sort of a place, come to Orangeburg.

Orangeburg is not a health resort. It is not put down in books as in that class. It makes no claim for its medicinal waters on the one hand, nor does it look disdainfully from a lofty perch to the sea. We are plain Orangeburg, S. C., but we are healthy just the same.

Fortunately Orangeburg was built healthy in the beginning. It is about a mile from the banks of the Edisto and has a splendid natural drainage ditch on the North and South sides of the city emptying into the river on the West. It is situated on a high point, it is always dry, with a top soil of sand.

The water used in the greater part of the city is furnished by the city from deep wells and the law requiring that an analysis be made every sixty days is strictly complied with. The city has a sewerage system covering the business portion and leading residential section, the outlet being the swift flowing Edisto, one mile away. The box system is used in closets and removed by the city and disposed of outside the city limits.

Orangeburg dwellings are not congested. We keep room for fresh air, sunshine, green trees and a green lawn in front for the health of the young generation. We do not sacrifice health necessities for dollars. We build our houses with a driveway on the side, a garden in the rear and away from the dust in front.

Another thing: Orangeburg practices preventive medicine. An active board of health and health officers, with a sympathetic city council, give to the people free and unlimited use of disinfectants in the Spring and summer months, using perhaps more than any other city of like size in the State. Intelligent people use it gladly and freely around stables and closets, and the ignorant and careless are forced to use it by the health officer, who has police power, over the health of the community.

There is a health map of the city of Orangeburg. Every house where there is an infectious disease is marked and kept under supervision and made to follow the requirements of the health laws. In some negro houses where patient has died from consumption the owner at the request of the board of health, has had the house thoroughly white-washed and scoured. The health officer makes it his special duty to localize any point of infection and prevent its spread by all approved methods of disinfection and isolation.

These are some of the things that

A COUNTY FAIR FOR ORANGEBURG

Not since the days long gone by has Orangeburg had a regular County Fair. Where people can look at good stock, meet their friends from all over the country, and at the same time break the monotony of daily toil. But beginning with Nov. 14 the Orangeburg County Fair Association will begin to hold its annual fair, which will last four days—14 to 17 inclusive.

The fair this November will be the first one, and every effort will be made to make it a huge success. The capital stock for this fair has already been taken, amounting to $20,000 by farmers and merchants all over Orangeburg county. Grounds have been purchased and the necessary buildings will be erected by November.

A premium list of 1,000 premiums has been arranged and in a short time will be distributed. These premiums will cover everything of interest to both men and women. Secure one of these lists and enter for the premiums. The lists are open to anybody that cares to enter and the more the merrier.

The county fair will be worth the time it takes for any farmer to attend. The various instruments he will see demonstrated, the many interesting points about the farm he will be able to pick up from seeing the other exhibits, and congenial mixture of friends all go to make the fair a very enjoyable occasion.

A corn show will be held in connection with the fair, and this feature will be in the hands of experts. The Girls' Tomato Club will also be given a conspicuous place in the general arrangements, and so on. It is too early yet to make any definite announcements, but watch the papers for news about the Orangeburg County Fair, November 14 to 17, and don't fail to be there.

At the first meeting of the directors the Fair was placed in the care of the following gentlemen as officers: Capt. J. H. Claffy, president; T. R. McCants, first vice president; J. W. Smoak, second vice-president and A. H. Marchant, secretary and treasurer. Under the efficient management of these men the Fair is certainly bound to be a success.

WHO PAYS THE BILLS?

Good Advertising Should Sustain Itself by New Business.

When you advertise in the local paper, what's your theory of payment? Do you figure that you will pay for the ad out of the profits of the business it brings in, or out of your normal, every day cash receipts?

It's a poor advertisement that can not pull its own weight in the boat. The biggest advertisers in the country aim to make their advertising sustain itself. They pay for it out of increased business. A manufacturer or popular candies says: "Neither the dealers nor his customers pay for our advertising. It is paid by the growth of our business through advertising which enables us to save enough in cost of salesmen, superintendence, rents, interest and use of the plant to cover most, if not all of our advertising bills."

In other words advertising makes it possible to get the most out of your investment. It makes your store and your fixed charges bring in the biggest possible results to the square inch. The bigger your volume of advertising grows the bigger should be your business, and the more efficient work you should be able to get out of every dollar you have invested.

Advertising should not merely make enough to pay for itself out of the profits, but it should increase the "square inch" earning capacity of your clerks and your store front, and your delivery wagons and your nice and expensive fixtures, so that the profits on the goods sold would be all profit, and the economies in management and efficiency would pay for the advertising.

It takes good advertising to figure out that way, but if you are keen to take advantage of the help being offered you from various sources, you can get out the right kind of advertising.

contribute to Orangeburg's remarkable health record. For the immunity from epidemics of infectious and contagious diseases has been up to the present time very fortunate considering the great transient traveling public and daily visitors to Orangeburg. If any disease seeds are left in Orangeburg, the board of health strives to germinate them out of existence. Through the assistance of the State board of health and the State health officer, with the aid of the columns of newspapers, editorially and otherwise. Orangeburg is up in the front of this era of health movement and we ask you to register Orangeburg as already up and doing and awake to the needs of the hour. We are richly endowed in many respects but we prize our temple of health sacredly. Orangeburg invites companionship with all who are healthy in mind and purpose.

When it is good and hot I like a glass of iced-tea better than I like lemonade because there is tea in it. I like the color and the tea taste. Lemon helps it too. I am warm right now because I have just come from the grocery with a package of tea and a sack of lemons. We drink Mikado tea, 60 cents a pound and get a set of Japanese dishes free.
