"Maine doesn't seem to be either very wet or very dry," exclaims The Newberry Observer.

The race for the Democratic Presidential nomination lays between Willson and Hannon. Both good men.

The talk of impeaching Governor Blease is all nonsense, and will never be seriously considered by the Legislature.

Col. Talbert has just about as much chance of being elected to the United States Senate as he has of flying to the moon.

It takes about as long to find out how the wet and dry election went in Maine as it does to elect a parliament over in England.

The Greenville Daily Piedmont says that "probably Col. Jasper Talbert just wanted to tour the state and decided to run for the Senate as an excuse for doing it."

We know that it is the almost universal wish of the people of Orangeburg County that Senator Tillman remain in the Senate, and we believe this is the wish of the people of the State.

Just about one month from now the hunters of the leaves and fishes will begin to "cuss" out Mayor Sain because he can't create a good, fat job for each of them. His honor, may as well get ready for the "cussing" because it is coming.

Senator Tillman should be given another term without opposition, but, of course, if Tolbert, wishes to test his ability to come back by leading a horron hope in the senatorial race as he once did in the governor's race, there is no power to prevent him from doing so.

We hear a good deal of talk of reclamation work among the vicious poor, and certainly there is need of such work. But there is quite as much need that similar work be done among the vicious rich. Of the two classes the rich are the more dangerous to society because in the power which wealth, social position, and education give them their facilities for wrong doing are greater and their example and influence more potent.

If one half we read and hear about the social doings of Newport the so-called four hundred have little or no morals to speak of. A disregard for moral law and sacred institutions, depraved moral tastes, idleness and a selfish misuse of wealth seem to be the main characteristic of Newport society as a whole. Its life shows the demoralization caused by the possessor of great wealth when the character is not governed by right principles.

The many recent fatal railroad accidents remind us of the saying of Charles Lamb when in the early days of England railroading accidents were so numerous. He said there would be no betterment until a railroad director or two were killed in a railroad wreck. Perhaps if some drastic experience were to befall a few American railroad magnates traveling might be safer on American lines. Certainly there is need for much improvement.

In a letter to the New York Times Gov. Blease in denying that he is a hater of the negro, asks: "It is said that I hate 'free negroes'; if so, why is it that I have paroled or pardoned more of them in seven months than any governor we have had since he has done in his four years of office?" Governor Blease will have to answer his own question to the Democratic voters of this State next summer. He will have to explain to them why he has used the pardoning power so freely.

A disregard for decency was never more wantonly displayed than it was recently by a company of midnight revelers who turned a cemetery into a midnight ball. People who dance upon their ancestors' graves, convert monuments into chandeliers by hanging lanterns upon them, and the roof of a vault into a platform for the orchestra must be lost to all sense of reverence and shame. They belong to the class that laughs at the instruction of fathers, mocks the prayers of mothers, and breaks all the commandments of impunity.

If it was not for the country the large cities would be a great deal worse than they are. The virility and moral stamina of their population is kept up through the stream that flows steadily from the country to the city of strong, healthy young men and women, who carry with them their brawn, moral power and mental robustness. But for this constant renewal of forces the strenuous and often artificial and vitiating character of city life would ultimately result in an utter deterioration of urban population.

Prophecy Being Fulfilled.

In June, 1873, according to the Philadelphia North American, Edward J. Ryan, chief justice of the supreme court of Wisconsin, gave this prophetic warning to the graduating class of the University of Wisconsin: "There is looming up a new and dark power. I can not dwell upon the signs and shocking omens of its advent. The accumulation of individual wealth seems to be greater than it ever has been since the downfall of the Roman empire. The enterprises of the country are aggregating vast corporate combinations of unexampled capital, boldly marching, not for economic conquests only, but for political power. We see their colors, we hear their trumpets, we distinguish the sound of preparation in their camps.

For the first time in our politics, money is taking the field as an organized power. It is unscrupulous, arrogant and overbearing. Already here at home, one great corporation has trifled with the sovereign power and insulted the state. There is grave fear that it and its great rival have confederated to make partition of the state and share it as spoils. "Wealth has its rights. Industrious wealth has its honors. This it is the duty of the law to assert and protect, though wealth has great power of self-protection and influence beyond the limits of integrity. But money as a political influence is essentially corrupt; it is one of the most dangerous to free institutions; by far the most dangerous to the free and just administration of the law. It is entitled to fear if not to respect.

"The question will arise, and arise in your day, though perhaps not fully in mine: Which shall rule, wealth or man; which shall lead, money or intellect; who shall fill public station, educated and patriotic freemen or the feudal serfs of corporate capital?"

The prophecy of Judge Ryan is being rapidly fulfilled almost to the letter. He certainly knew what he was talking about when he made it. It took the people a long time to catch on, but we believe they have their eyes open at last, and it begins to look as if the thieving trusts will be called to account.

Recall of Judges.

In an address before the Bar Association of Minnesota, following several speeches denouncing the threatened destruction of the independence of the judiciary, Mr. James Manahan, a Minneapolis lawyer, said:

"It is urged that the recall of the judges would subject the judiciary to the clamor of the mob. The man who believes the people are a mob does not believe in a republican form of government. He should leave this country. He has no place here; his spirit is treasonable. Respect the judges, of course; the same as we respect men in other offices who do their duty; no more, no less. We can not respect them if they are arrogant or tyrannical or despotic. And if they are not held responsible they become to a greater or less degree arrogant, tyrannical and despotic. They are entitled to the respect earned by the justice and wisdom of their judgment, and this should be measured not by them, but by that sovereignty that creates them. Let their work be done in the light of the power they serve. The more direct and severe the light, the greater will shine the glory of their work well done."

What Mr. Manahan says is unanswerable, and his words ought to be posted where all can read them. Respect the judges, of course, but "let their work be done in the light of the power they serve. The more direct and severe the light, the greater will shine the glory of their work well done." As Mr. Manahan says the man who believes that the people are a mob does not believe in a republican form of government like ours. Those men who fear to let the people hold the judge responsible evidently believe that the people are a mob.

Must Be True Blue.

While some people are trying to read Mr. Bryan out of the Democratic party, it becomes more apparent every day that the campaign of 1912 will be a plain, unmistakable, clear-cut discussion, and decision between two lines of national policy, involving radical differences upon fundamental points not alone of national legislation, but of the attitude and temperament of the federal executive and federal judiciary as well.

The national conscience, not less than national intelligence, demand a thorough change, a reversal as well as a revision of the national policy in many important particulars, says the Denver News. The Democratic candidate for president next year must be distinctively democratic. He must not be merely non-republican, but he must be positively anti-republican. He must stand for the things that Taft does not stand for.

He must represent individually and personally, without chance of question or doubt, all the principles and policies of progressive democracy, as taught by Mr. Bryan. The success of 1912, now seemingly assured, can only be consumed along the lines of progressive democracy, which is true democracy, and with a candidate who shall be in all essential particulars the apostle and representative of those progressive principles.

Cost Him Money.

An exchange says "it cost a country newspaper money every time it takes a stand on any question. Almost any citizen besides a newspaper man can do it without injuring his business. If the editor advocates improvements the soreheads go after him and sometimes stop their paper. If he opposed improvements the progressive sort get on him and call him a back number and a knocker. If he publishes politics the opposition gets into his hair, and if he does not stand out for his opinion, if he condemns mail order houses, there are some people who ask him to attend to his own business, as they have a right to trade where they please." This is all true as this paper knows from experience. Some little three for a quarter fellows think because they take the paper the editor should consult them before expressing an opinion on any subject. Such narrow minded people never worry us. They can take the paper or not as they please, but we go on hewing to the line and let the chips fall where they will. We have lost some dollars, but we have preserved our self-respect and manhood.
