One could use a whole pile of stones by throwing at every dog that barks at him.

Suffering from hunger in order that his mother and sisters might eat, a New York boy staggered into a police station and fainted. That is heroism of the very highest type.

A man named S. R. Nicks, of Tenaha, Texas, is advertising for opportunity to make a trip in an airplane. Next thing you know, his relatives will be advertising for friends to attend his funeral.

Church and club circles at Rome, Ga., are excited over the action of the Eloy Baptist association in denouncing locker clubs as "haunts of vice and lawlessness," and advising churches to expel all members who belong to such clubs.

The Spartanburg Journal says Governor Blease, in handing out all this bull about being sure to be re-elected, forgets that he was elected by a duke; also that it was one of Senator Irby's political maxims that "a Lulu hand wins only once."

Gov. Woodrow Wilson, one of the profoundest and most philosophical students of history and statescraft, says "If you are ever tempted to let a government reform itself, I ask you to look back in the pages of history and find me a government that reformed itself."

The County Record very truly says "if the cotton farmers of the South had reduced their acreage this year one-half they would not need a cotton picking machine and every one would be prosperous and contented. Why make two bales of cotton to sell for the price of one?" Who can answer this?

It is reported that the revolutionary hordes at Hankow, China, and other revolting centers have issued proclamations rejecting the throne's proffer of a constitutional monarchy and have decided to fight to the end to found a republic. The success of such an aim would doom the Manchu dynasty to extinction.

Hamilton Wright, Federal option commissioner, says that the United States uses 500,000 pounds of opium annually, which is several hundredfold the amount prescribed by physicians. Mr. Wright also charges that one druggist in ten of those established in cities exists by means of profits derived from the sale of habit-forming drugs.

You can begin to teach a child to take pride in his or her home town very early in life. Explain to them how it detracts from the beauty and value of a town to disfigure its side walks by piling dirt on them or marking them up with Crayon. Yet them feel that they have a great responsibility in keeping up the pride of their town. Children like to feel that they are important.

One of the best and brightest thing we can give, is kind words. They have well likened to the bright flowers of earth's existence. Use them everywhere, but especially around the fireside; they will make a paradise out of a hovel. Nothing can heal a wounded heart, or cheer a crushed spirit like kind words. Let us not be so careful how we use them, for they are the greatest blessing earth can give.

It is true, as the Spartanburg Herald says, "no newspaper, worthy of the name, has ever been intimidated by threats of personal violence or the execution of these same threats. The whipping of editors and reporters has no effect whatever upon a newspaper's policy. If that newspaper has been conducted along lines of honesty in handling the news no man can change it by attacking members of its staff."

If there were no women, men would have no object in life; their mustaches would cease to interest them; they would not care a Chinaman whether their collars were ironed or not; they would have nobody to nurse them when they had the toothache, or to keep them from believing they were going to die when an old-fashioned cold got a grip upon them. There would be nobody to fight against being kissed and then take it as natural as the tick does to water.

Major J. C. Hemphill assumed the editorial management of the Charlotte Observer on last Wednesday. We are glad that he has gotten so near the border of his old home State, where he has done so much good and valuable work on the press. The Observer is to be congratulated on securing such an able, genial, pleasant gentleman as he is to preside over its editorial department. It needs no introduction to the people of North Carolina, as the Major is known all over this country.

The Steel Corporation Suit.

The government's suit to dissolve the United States Steel corporation marks another and a crucial test of the Sherman anti-trust law. Whether this statute, as now written and as recently construed by the supreme court, sets a just standard for honest business and provides adequate protection for the country's common interests will be made much clearer than now through the development and outcome of the present litigation.

The Standard Oil case and that of the American Tobacco company were vitally important. But, as the Atlanta Journal says, there is a prevalent and well-grounded impression that in each of those instances the so-called trust problem was left in rather a nebulous stage and that the final word on the great issues involved yet remains to be said. The sooner and the more definitely it is said the better will it be for the business and the people of this nation.

Under the "rule of reason" advanced by the supreme court in those two cases there may be good trusts and bad trusts, combinations in restraint of trade that are reasonable and others that are unreasonable despite the fact that the Sherman anti-trust act as passed by Congress prohibits all such combinations or monopolies. And so the law stands in a dubious twilight through which big business must grope and stumble and in which general interests must remain uncertain until principles more definite and trustworthy can be established.

It is to be hoped that the suit begun against the United States Steel corporation will at least open a way to the setting up of some such guiding standard. The legal battle that is to ensue will doubtless be long-drawn and will cover every inch of the now doubtful territory. Of all the alleged trusts, this concern is the most gigantic, consisting, as is claimed, of thirty-seven interlocking corporations, all of them subject to one central control, and exerting vast industrial power. It is important and urgent that the question involved in this suit be settled clearly in order that present uncertainty may end.

There is little ground for alarm that the suit against the steel corporation will greatly disturb the country's business for any considerable length of time. It was foreseen months ago and preparations were made accordingly. After Friday's gust of excitement the stock market has shown a firmer tone. The real property of the company will continue to exist, whatever may happen, and business will move onward.

People Are More Tolerant.

People are getting a great deal more tolerant than they use to be about religion as well as politics, but still there are people whose partisanship is so intensely narrow that they never make allowance for the convictions of others and they are, often-times puzzled at the friendly personal relations that exist between men of radically opposing political views. They have the idea that political or legal differences must necessarily include personal hostility.

Read of Dickens will recall how Pickwick gave way to angry passions when in the famous trial of Bardie vs. Pickwick he saw his lawyer and that of the widow laughing together in most friendly fashion at dinner and after having attacked each other in court. So the recent pleasant amenity displayed by President Taft and Mr. Bryan at a recent banquet may have caused some to shake their heads disapprovingly, and doubt that there is really any difference between these two distinguished citizens.

Yet a little reflection ought to convince any one that political, religious or other differences ought not to interfere with personal friendship. That frequently it used to in former days is true, but in this age of broader views and enlightenment bigotry and narrowness are fast disappearing, and people are becoming more tolerant of one another's views on all subjects. This will be come more universal as the world advances in education and come to understand Christian principles better.

A Word of Advice.

One often hears the advice given, jocularly sometimes, and in dead earnest at others, to young people to marry this or that young man or this young woman because they may have money or have good looks. No young man or young woman ever made a greater mistake than to base their choice of a life partner, on such considerations as these. There is nothing in the moral, spiritual or physical universe that makes marriage respectable, but love. Without it there can be no marriage, only a wretched, miserable form, that rapidly degenerates into a loathsome, demoralizing burden. The time to marry is when love demands it and not simply because the kitchen needs a cook, the dining table a figure-head in muslin or silk, or the cucumber vines somebody to kill the bugs on them. The one to marry is the woman or man you love, and no other one. That, and that alone should decide. Riches may take wings and flee away; beauty may fade; good health is a very excellent and desirable thing in man or woman, but the circumstances of an hour or a moment may ruin the best of health. A man who marries form such considerations, usually gets what he deserves—its full equivalent in unhappiness. A man who marries for beauty, learns, as no other man can learn, how hideous and loathsome it may become. So, young man, or young woman, take love for your guidance in this matter, remembering that it demands the best and noblest in you—that is is sacred and holy, and divine, for it is of God.

He Knew Where to Go.

A thin, sickly man entered one of the stores in one of our small towns recently and quietly seated himself on a convenient chair. One of the clerks approached and asked if he wished to purchase anything. "On, no," said the man, "I just dropped in for a few minutes." After half an hour had passed, the manager of the store, becoming curious, approached him and asked what could be done for him. "Why nothing that I know of," said the man, "You see I have nervous prostration and the doctor told me to stay in a quiet place. Noticing that you do not advertise I thought this would be about the quietest place I could find." Let me tell you it was anything but quiet there for five minutes. The poor little man found himself in the street wishing that he had landed on a feather bed. But the next week the store surprised itself with a big display "ad" in the home paper.

THIS LADY'S GOOD APPETITE

Mrs. Hansen, in a Letter From Mobile, Tells How She Gained It.

Mobile, Ala.—"I suffered for seven years, with womanly trouble," writes Mrs. Sigurd Hansen in a letter from this city. "I felt weak and always had a headache and was always going to the doctor. At last I was operated on, and felt better, but soon I had the same trouble. My husband asked me to try Cardul. I felt better after the first bottle, and now, I have a good appetite and sleep well. I feel fine, and the doctor tells me I am looking better than he ever saw me."

If you are sick and miserable, and suffer from any of the pains due to womanly trouble—try Cardul. Cardul is successful because it is composed of ingredients that have been found to act curatively on the womanly constitution.

For more than fifty years, it has been used by women of all ages, with great success. Try it. Your druggist sells it.

ARE YOU MIXED On Buying a Suit and Overcoat for Yourself or Boy?

It's pretty hard to know what to do, isn't it, when every clothier in town has "the best at the lowest price" and all "give satisfaction" and "money back" and all beat the tailor to pieces, and "save you a half to a third," and all that. It comes down to the question of faith in somebody. Is there

ONE STORE in Orangeturg that has been conspicuously faithful for many years, whether it sold you a Collar Button, a Hat, Suit of Clothes, or whatever it was? Is there

ONE STORE in town that usually does more than it says? Is there

ONE STORE in town whose buyers want and demand the best? Is there?

ONE STORE in town that has made prices lower? Is there

ONE STORE in town that has built up standards all through its business? When you name the store you have named this store; and you can get your Suit and Overcoat here and take no risk.
