The Republicans are going to find it mighty hard to fool the people next year.

That Seattle woman who horse-whipped a judge must believe that a horsewhip is more effective than the recall.

Nothing is more pitiful than a life that is so wrapped up in itself that it gives no thought to the welfare of others.

Moral heroism is often greatest of which the world says the least and which is exercised in the humblest spheres.

Some people are just ignorant enough to realize their ignorance and some are so ignorant that they don't even know it.

Let's see. Wasn't there a 'fake trust buster' by the name of Teddy Roosevelt who use to bluster a good deal. Wonder what has become of him?

Elections take place today in a number of states. We hope the Democracy will not only hold its own, but will make great gains in all of them.

The report that Wall Street is opposed to the re-election of Taft is the most absurd thing imaginable. Big Bill is too pliant a tool of the Trust for Wall Street to fight him.

We hope that the election of Charleston today will result in the elevation of Major Hyde to the mayoralty of the old city. He is by far the best man running for the position.

After today we predict that Col. J. P. Grace, who aspires to the mayoralty of Charleston, will go way back and sit down. Major Hyde will be the choice of the people of the old city.

President Taft will find it hard work to get the endorsement of the Republican National Convention for President again, and he will find it still harder work to get re-elected should he be renominated.

Woodrow Wilson seems to be strong everywhere as the Democratic candidate for President, and if it was not for the two thirds rule in the National Democratic Convention he would be nominated on the first ballot.

All the farmers have to do is to pull together under the plan proposed by the Farmers' Union and the price of cotton will go up as if by magic. The whole matter is in the hands of the men who make the cotton.

Bryan is for Woodrow Wilson as the Democratic candidate for President. At least we infer so from reading the Commoner, which reflects Bryan's views on the matter. Bryan can always be counted on to support the best man.

That spirit which says let the next generation look out for itself and we will look after number one savors strongly of selfishness. If our ancestors had pursued that policy we would today be minus many of the blessings we enjoy.

The Times and Democrat is with the farmers first, last and all the time for a fair price for cotton. It is ready to cooperate with the Farmers Union to that end. The present price of cotton is not much if any more than the cost of production, and it should be pushed up.

By prosecuting the Steel Trust President Taft and Attorney General Wickersham hope to head the committee appointed by the Democratic House to investigate that biggest of all trusts. They are afraid that the Democratic committee's real investigation would expose the unlawful acts of that huge corporation, while their fake prosecution will shield it from exposure.

There was a time when if a man pleaded that he was intoxicated when he committed a crime he was usually acquitted or got off with a nominal sentence. It is getting to be different now. For a man to show that he was drunk is no longer accepted as a palliation, rather it is regarded as an aggravation of the offense. All of which goes to show both the growth of temperance sentiment and a saner view of justice.

What may be the result of the government suit against the Steel Trust no one can tell. But it is significant and not altogether convincing that no criminal action has been taken against the members of the trust, which probably explains the fact that no one attempted to evade service. It is safe to say that if a criminal suit had been instituted there would have been some scurrying to get out of the way of deputies.

Taft Given the Cold Hand.

That despairing wall at Chicago was a clear indication that President Taft was not pleased with the result of his trip out west, from which he had just returned when he admitted in a speech at Chicago that the Republican party might be defeated in the next presidential election. As a matter of fact the President had been given the cold hand wherever he went, and he felt bad about it. Take California for instance. It is admitted by Republicans themselves that in her recent election California administered the most impressive rebuke ever received by a Republican President from a Republican State, when that State voted as it did on the initiative, referendum and recall, the latter including the judiciary.

Vice President Sherman in commenting on the President and the California incident, is quoted as saying that he felt that the adoption by California of the newer ideas, such as the recall, at the very moment the President was out on the coast, indicated that the Republicans may look for trouble in the next campaign. "We have felt and hoped," said he, "that California was solidly for President Taft and all of his ideas, and this recent election gives us a new light. President Taft's message upon the recall will be found to be one of the great state papers of our government. It will stand as a masterpiece in statesmanship, and the principles enunciated therein will be found as time passes on, to be as sound as any ever given to the people. That his ideas were not accepted by the people of California shows marked disaffection, which I think all regular Republicans will deeply regret.

Governor Johnson, of California, took direct issue with Mr. Taft, who alluded to the recall of judges as the law of the mob. In his speeches Johnson asked "who are the mob? That's the question I've been asking all along the line, and that's what I can't find out. Mob indeed; we are all the mob. As used by our President it means a great division of the electorate that is not fit to govern; that is fit to be ruled by another smaller class, a governing class. If we've reached that condition we've reached a crisis in the history of free government. But we've not reached it and that sort of talk arises from individual egotism and is a survival of traditions from the old days when you had to crawl before power. The very first requisite of the recall is that it touches not only the governor and the legislator but the judiciary as well and makes this judiciary responsive to the people.

"I reverence and respect the courts just so long as they deserve respect and reverence, and no longer, and that's the only kind of respect that can be paid any man in our government. When you create a class to govern in this country just that instant you violate a fundamental principle on which we founded this government and you strike a blow at liberty itself. It's a survival of the old worship of power. The rabble and the mob! We're all the rabble and the mob in this country, and the present design of the government of this state is that you shall all participate in it." That is the way the Republican Governor of California talked with the Republican President in the State feeling the political pulse. That was not all. As soon as the people of California got a chance at the ballot box they endorsed what their governor had said by adopting the recall by a vote of over three to one. After this direct slap in the face by the Republican State of California, do you wonder that the President feels shaky on his political legs and sees defeat staring him in the face?

The Recall Works Well. It is claimed by some that the adoption of the recall would have a most disastrous effect on the judges and the stability of the courts. We do not see it that way. As the San Francisco Bulletin says this amendment would give the people power to revoke the commissions of elective judges who had proved themselves incompetent or corrupt. The special interests object to the people assuming such power. When they get a tool or a prejudiced friend on the bench they would have such judges insured against removal. The people want a square deal. The experience of Oregon, where the recall has been in operation four years, but has never been invoked against a judicial officer demonstrates that only a widespread belief in a judge's dishonesty would bring about the summary revocation of his commission, but the special interests and the slaves of tradition who are helping them in their fight still profess to believe that the people are not to be instructed with the responsibility of deciding whether elective judicial officers are fit or unfit to wield the power which has been entrusted to them by the votes of their fellow-citizens. Plainly the special interests want more than a square deal.

One Day Long Enough.

The suggestion that presidential inauguration ceremonies should last a week is likely to meet with scant favor. The motives for the suggestion are either mercenary or unpatriotic. With the business men of Washington the idea is financial as they would doubtless reap a big pecuniary harvest by its adoption. Then, there is a class in this country that is generally attracted by the old world pomp and pageantry and to that class an aping of coronation and court ceremonies, as such an inauguration as proposed would surely be, would be very gratifying. But fortunately, the suggestion is never likely to be seriously considered. As a matter of fact, instead of introducing more ceremonies at great public functions like inaugurations of presidents and governors there is probably a general feeling that there has already been too great a departure from that democratic simplicity which should always mark republican institutions. And in truth there is far more dignity and impressiveness in a fitting simplicity than in an overloaded pomp and costuming of elaborate functions such as an old world coronation.

WHAT SAVED HER LIFE

Mrs. Martin Tells About a Painful Experience that Might Have Ended Seriously.

Rivesville, W. Va.—Mrs. Dora Martin, in a letter from Rivesville, writes: "For three years, I suffered with womanly troubles, and had pains in my back and side. I was nervous and could not sleep at night.

The doctor could not help me. He said I would have to be operated on before I could get better. I thought I would try using Cardul.

Now, I am entirely well. I am sure Cardul saved my life. I will never be without Cardul in my home. I recommend it to my friends."

For fifty years, Cardul has been relieving pain and distress caused by womanly trouble. It will surely help you. It goes to the spot—relieves the trouble—relieves the symptoms, and drives away the cause.

If you suffer from any symptoms of womanly trouble, take Cardul. Your druggist sells and recommends it. Get a bottle from him today.
