

LAST AND FINAL CALL

This is absolutely the last chance you will have to buy reasonable and staple merchandise at about 55 and 60 cents on the dollar. This stock must either be moved or turned into cash by the first of March, as we have been notified to vacate (get out) the room we now occupy by that date. It costs something to move. Now rather than go to this expense and trouble we will endeavor to leave the bulk of it here, not as a special favor to any one, neither do we wish to demoralize the trade by selling merchandise at less than cost of the raw material. When we say it must go at Cost we don't mean what it cost E. L. Bailor Co., or what it will cost you, neither do we mean manufacturers cost to make; we bought the majority of this stock at 50 and 60 cents on the dollar, and THIS IS THE COST WE MEAN WHEN WE SAY A COST SALE

ONLY 15 DAYS

More. If you don't take advantage of this it will be TOO LATE as we will Absolutely Close our Doors on the 27th and prepare to ship what we have left to our main Store in Anderson, South Carolina.

We mention a few of the many values that are here that will go to your neighbors unless you get wise and help share them.

We will consider a proposition to sell the stock in lump. Merchants wishing to buy must call not later than 11 A. M. or after 3:30 o'clock P. M.

NOTHING RESERVED.—We don't want to pay freight on any of it. You can buy goods here for less than same stuff can be bought in New York City.

We close Saturday night, February 27th, to prepare to move. Nothing Sold after Saturday the 27th.

All parties owing us will please call at once and settle. All parties holding claims against THE BEE HIVE will by presenting the same on or before March the first be paid.

FOUNDERS' DAY.

Appropriate Exercises at Newberry College on Anniversary of Birth of Dr. Bachman.

On Thursday night, the anniversary of the birth of the Rev. John Bachman, D. D., LL. D., exercises were held at Newberry college commemorative to Founders' day. This was the first time in the history of this institution of learning that exercises of this character have been held, and it was indeed a very pleasant and profitable occasion.

The night was simply ideal as there was a full moon in our Southern skies and the air was almost springlike, hence the large auditorium at Holland Hall was comfortably filled, some chairs having to be used in the aisles.

Before the exercises proper began the audience was most delightfully entertained with music by the college orchestra and the Glee club.

Rev. J. D. Bowles, of Coronaca, opened the exercises with prayer, after which President J. H. Harms in a few well chosen words explained the reason the day had been set apart as a holiday at Newberry college. He stated that by a very wise enactment under a very wise statute of Newberry college the fourth of February had been set apart to be known as Founders' Day by that institution, and that this day has been selected because it was the anniversary of the birthday of one who perhaps more than any other one person had exercised an influence over the establishment and early years of the infant college away back in the early fifties. He further stated that in the beginning of these exercises it was fully appropriate that a sketch of this noble man, Dr. John Bachman, should be read.

Rev. G. P. Voigt, one of the professors of the college, then read a well prepared and entertaining sketch of the life of Dr. Bachman. On account of this sketch being so well read and so interestingly written it was listened to most attentively. The following is a brief outline of the life of the distinguished scholar, minister, scientist, and philanthropist:

"It was Dr. John Bachman who, in 1818, recommended the founding of the theological and classical institution at Lexington which in time grew to be Newberry college. It was he who was so actively interested in the establishment of the college at Newberry in 1855, and his name heads the list of incorporators in the charter granted the institution by the State legislature in 1856. It is, therefore, eminently fitting that, on this his birthday, we should review briefly the life and character of this eminent man who during his lifetime played such an important part in the history of our church and college.

"John Bachman was born in the little town of Rheinbeck, N. Y., on the 4th of February, 1790. His parents were plain German people, noted, however, for their sturdiness and deep piety. Little is known of his early life except that, while yet a mere boy, he showed a most unusual fondness for natural history. He would spend hours upon hours in roaming through the mountains which surrounded his home. Being very anxious to possess some books on natural history, and having no means wherewith to purchase them, he set to work to earn the necessary money by catching beaver and other fur-bearing animals, and selling their skins. With the assistance of his brother he in time happily secured sufficient funds to purchase the coveted books. As a boy he was strong in body, buoyant of spirit, hopeful in temperament, and very fond of outdoor games. This buoyancy and hopefulness he retained throughout his life. In the course of a few years he entered William College, at Williamston, Mass. Here he buckled down to his studies with exceptional assiduity; so much so that even his iron constitution gave way, and to his great disappointment, he was forced to leave college without his degrees, and to seek his lost health in the mountain air of his home. It was a bitter trial for the ambitious youth, but his spirit was not broken. After a period of rest and recuperation, he again took up his studies, this time privately, and soon afterwards decided to prepare himself for the Christian ministry. He spent several years of study under his pastor and in Philadelphia, and in 1813 became the pastor of his home church. It was in 1815 that he received an urgent call from St. John's congregation, Charleston, to become its pastor. After careful consideration, he decided to accept the call and go South, and this same year commenced his remarkable pastorate at St. John's, which continued for a period of 50 years, and ended only with his death in 1875. Not long after his arrival in Charleston he was united in marriage to Miss Harriet Martin, daughter of Rev. John M. Martin, and their union was blessed with a large family of devoted children. The young minister plunged into his new work with a zeal and a tact that led to an abundant prosperity in the affairs of his church, and which attracted the attention of his fellow ministers in the city and State. He was elected president of the newly born South Carolina Synod for eight successive terms, and, to use the words of a contemporary, was 'the leading spirit of the body.' In 1835 the degree of D. D. was conferred upon him by Pennsylvania college. It was in the fall of 1831, that Dr. Bachman formed an acquaintanceship which influenced greatly his whole future. The great ornithologist, Audubon, visited Charleston at that time, and before he left the city he and Dr. Bachman were fast friends. From this time on Dr. Bachman pursued his studies in natural history with increasing interest, and together with Audubon commenced to labor on that monumental work which bears the name of the latter, 'Audubon's Birds of America,' but in the preparation of which the former had no mean part. On account of failing health Dr. Bachman was compelled to go to Europe in 1836. Here he met many distinguished scientists, among them the great Humboldt, and was everywhere kindly received. After his return to America, he, in 1838, received the honorary degree of Doctor of Philosophy from the University of Berlin in recognition of his scientific labors, and in the years that followed he was elected member of almost every scientific association in America and Europe. In 1847 another great scientific work, prepared by Audubon and himself, appeared. This time it was the 'Quadrupeds of Audubon.' About this time he met Louis Agassiz, then professor at Harvard University, whose scientific views he later attacked in a celebrated work: 'The Unity of the Human Race.'

"Dr. Bachman, with his church and scientific work, was already a very busy man, but in 1848, he accepted the chair of Natural History in the college of Charleston, at the end of which he was forced by the pressure of church duties to give up this position. For some years the stream of his life flowed smoothly and rapidly on until in 1853 a notable religious controversy broke out in the city of Charleston. A Roman Catholic alderman published what he denominated, 'awful disclosures' professing to convict Martin Luther of immoral teaching. Dr. Bachman felt it to be his duty to take up the gauntlet thus thrown down, and he did so with a telling vigor, much to the delight of his friends and the discomfiture of his foes. From that time on his public life was not particularly eventful. During the dark days of the Civil War and of Reconstruction, he remained faithfully at his post except when he was on the battlefield ministering to the wants of the wounded soldiers. Towards the end of the sixties he began to show signs of feebleness, and he grew gradually weaker and weaker until in 1875 he breathed his last. Amid the lamentations of a whole city he was laid to rest in a vault beneath the altar of the church he had so faithfully served."

At the close of this sketch the Glee Club sang, "I'm gwine back to Dixie." This piece was encored so much that they reappeared and sang, "All on a Sunday morning."

President Harms then introduced Dr. W. H. Greever, the distinguished editor of the Lutheran Church Visitor, who made a scholarly address on the value of an educational institution and more especially on a Christian educational institution, a church and denominational institution. He paid a glowing tribute to Dr. Bachman and his work, also to what the Lutherans had done in the State, and what Newberry college had been able to rise to through these past fifty years. He said that the college was founded first by the Lord, then through the church, and particularly through those heroes of faith and sacrifice chief among whom was Dr. John Bachman. He said: "He stands before us as the representation of the best of those who were associated with him, and of those who have followed him with honor." He further said that Newberry college had been founded "Primarily to prepare men for the gospel ministry and later under the Providence of God to do the larger work of preparing young men for the most intelligent and effective Christian service of which they are capable, in whatever sphere of life they may act." He closed with reminding the faculty and students of the glorious future which was open to the church college.

Music was then furnished by the orchestra, after which Prof. Derrick awarded the banner which President Harms had offered to the class in physical culture making the highest score. This banner was given to the Senior class, their score being 33 points. At the suggestion of President Harms the college yells were given, and harmonious, sweetly, and patriotically the boys sang to the honor of the "Scarlet and the silver gray." This was joined in by many of the men of the audience whose hair is now gray but whose hearts are ever young when the college yell is proposed, and their gray hairs did not keep them from enjoying a yell of by-gone days of the "scarlet and the silver gray."

The benediction was pronounced by Rev. Mr. Kinard.
