

AN EXCITING GAME.

After Thirteen Innings Newberry Scores One Against Laurens on West End Diamond.

One of the most exciting games of baseball seen in Newberry in a good many days was played on the West End diamond on last Saturday between West End and Watts mill. After 13 hotly contested innings, Newberry managed to make a score and thus bring the game to a close. The game is given in detail herewith.

First Inning.

Laurens: Nesbit came up and hit to Boozier, out at first. Irby flew out to Wicker. Mills drove a pretty one into right field, but was thrown out trying to stretch it into a double at second. 1 hit, no runs.

Newberry: Havird came up and was passed to first. Smith hit to Mills, out to first. Havird going to second. Johnson out, Mills to Baldwin, Havird going to third. Ruff grounded to Nesbit and was out at first. Hits 0, runs 0.

Thirteenth Inning.

Laurens: McMims went to first on Jones error. Bobo hit to Ruff, who threw wild to second both runners safe. A moment later, Bobo thinking the pitcher held the ball, danced off of first and was touched out by Smith. Nesbit fanned. Hits 0, runs 0.

Newberry: Johnson singled to centre. Ruff drove one in the same place, Johnson going to second. McCol singled to left, Johnson going to third, Havird, running for Ruff, going to second. Jones flew out to left. Wicker came to the rescue with a clean drive to centre, Johnson and Havird crossing the plate, winning the hottest contested game seen here for years.

AN IMPOSTOR'S TRICK.

The Cheerful Liar That Made a Fool of the Grand Monarch.

Louis XIV was taken in once in a most humiliating way and by an impostor whose only art was lying. In 1667, just after he had returned from one of his most dazzling military successes against the duke, Louis le Grand received word that an embassy from Persia had just landed at Marseilles en route to the French court to bring salutations and presents from the shah. Pleased that his fame should actually have run around the world, he sent word that all the towns on the way from Marseilles to Paris should fete the ambassador.

As a result the journey to Paris was a march of triumph. Children sang and flowers were strewn along the way. Arrived at Paris, several regiments of the Swiss guard met the shah's representative and escorted him to a magnificent suit in the old palace of the Tuileries. Louis sent no less a person than the Duc de Richelieu to welcome the potentate and invite him out to Versailles to a special reception in the hall of mirrors.

The ambassador presented himself as Riza Bey of the Persian court and after showing his credentials advanced to kiss the hand of Louis le Grand and give him the shah's congratulations on his recent victories. A caravan of presents from his imperial sovereign were on their way and would arrive in Paris in a few days, said the ambassador.

Festivals followed at Versailles. The bey received magnificent presents from Louis and royal entertainment. He lounged gracefully on divans at the French court and smoked in Persian languor. He gave the grand monarch a few fragments of onal and turquoise, saying that they came from a Persian district bordering on the Caspian sea. The woods there were full of them, he explained, and he offered to divide with France—had planted the French flag there already, as it were!

At last the day came for the formal presentation of the shah's gifts, and on that morning early Riza Bey melted into space. He was never seen or heard of again. He had, as some one said, "gone glimmering through the dream of things that were." The gems that he had left were worth, if anything, about 15 cents apiece, being glass.—New York Tribune.

Unseemly Haste.

Walter J. Knight, who has a fund of good darky stories, surrendered this one yesterday:

"Jason, black as the ace of spades, was tried for murder in Mississippi, and found guilty. He was led before the judge on a sultry day late in July for sentence.

"Jason," said the court, "you have been found guilty of murder by a jury of your peers. Have you anything to say before sentence is imposed upon you?"

"Jason had nothing to say. There was a pause, and the judge proceeded. "It therefore becomes my painful duty to sentence you to be hanged by the neck until you are dead on the 13th day of August."

"There was another pause, and Jason, shifting from one foot to the other, looked up.

"'Sho'ly you don't mean this comin' August, does ye', judge?" he asked."—Newark Star.

Circuses in Old Rome.

The Romans had great circuses, Historians declare; it's hard to see how this could be— They had no peanuts there.
