

CONFIDENCE VOTE

French Government Sustains Position As to Resignations

Paris, Dec. 28.—The Chamber of Deputies early today rejected the resignation of Poincaré and his cabinet by a vote of 312 to 76.

The chamber had been expected to vote since Friday morning on the resignation of Poincaré and his cabinet.

After the premier's resignation, the chamber, without further delay, proceeded to the election of a new president of the republic.

At the resumption of the session, the debate continued on the general policy of the government.

M. Herriot after having indicated the government's position on all subjects declared that the chamber would vote for the government.

The deputies, who were getting more and more restless as the time wore on, took their first opportunity to vote.

The chamber then adjourned until next week with a better outlook than this year did and this year wasn't so bad.

Bob Ruder says: "But until it hurts." That's easy at present.

Mr Long Suit

As the vicissitudes of this changing time and with the consciousness of temporariness that comes with the flight of a year, it is pleasant to think of the enduring character of the best thing in life, unfailing love, as does the writer following verse.

CARDS and the game are ours as time flits by And deals us chances on the uncertain stage, But, while our wisdom may increase with age, We seldom win, however hard we try.

Clubs promise most to our insistent youth, And diamonds glitter to our later gaze, But melancholy spades our hopes amaze And leave them buried after all, forsooth.

We count the riches of the passing days, Our gains, our losses, and our gain withal, Our greatest gain, the one that once so small, Ever increasing, stays with us always.

Joy after joy approaches and departs, But we have kept the fellowship of hearts! —Timothy Barry

Nineteen Twenty-Three (©, 1922, Western Newspaper Union) THY friends are all impotent. That this year may be fortunate. About this year to guard it well. Last year harm should come to thee. Because old time says "Twenty-three." Grace and good cheer attend this year. And rout all shapes of doubt and fear.

Happy, Though Older (©, 1922, Western Newspaper Union) NOT by mourning because life cannot be all springtime. Not by thinking that youth can be powdered, palmed, dressed and affected into renewal. Not by looking backward and living upon reminiscence. Not by counting up our losses. In fourfold beauty life is on the wing. As well try to change the course and succession of seasons as to hold back the progress of our ages. Spring, summer, autumn, winter are not only for nature, but for human nature. No one is deceived by imitation when we are not just as young as we used to be. Fading pictures and a passing show, "slings and arrows of outrageous fortune" are just the differences in life's weather. But every season has its own peculiar beauty. Every day of every year is really a gem on Time's diadem. There is even a majestic and terrible beauty in a storm. In the long monotomy of the dolerams at sea one could hold a cyclone. In the dusty glare of protracted drought a flood could be welcomed. In too much of any season the wish arises for the rest of the program. Change opens up new vistas of the scenery of our histories. The afternoon of life is meant to be a pleasant outlook upon its harvest fields, a gathering in of that wealth of production that requires time and patient toil. The enjoyment of that richness of character that is given only to long experience. Wisdom can never be hastily acquired. Nothing can be done in less time than it takes. Even God must wait until fall for a ripe apple. Age marks progress and gives leisure. To look forward and go on with power of choice hitherto denied, and to have time and opportunity to do as one likes, rather than as he must, these are much. To have acquired new powers of thought and to have time for books, to hobnob with a few cronies to have a little something to do, to sit on the porch and see the world go by, to look beyond the setting sun to a new day, and beyond the coming winter to a new spring—all these and more may mean that age has kept the best wine until now!

Household Resolutions for Father I WILL not sin. Never again will I touch the guest towel, for I have known the error of my ways, and now know that guest towels are to be seen but not used; yea, not even for a newly shaved face. I will reverence the parlor. Verily, verily, no cigar stumps nor ashes shall I leave behind me, nor shall I lay my head upon the sacred embroidered cushion. I will reform. The socks that are taken off at night, even so small they be, shall hold my name, and my desire for porch-hoast shall be no more. I will be thankful. For the cut glass berry bowl and the mahogany sewing table, for the belligerent cigars, for those Christmas gifts, will I show my thanks. I will not answer back. Yea, though the bills of the New Year moon are mighty as the mountains, and I will walk in the shadow of bankruptcy, I will not lift my voice against thee. I will not complain. No, though my lash and croquet be handed to me even unto the third evening, I shall hold my peace, and my desire for porch-hoast shall be no more. I will not struggle. That good will may abide throughout the coming year, I cheerfully resolve to obey all the rules of the institution which harbors me. Amen. NOBLE PURPOSES COUNT Cut out the lower string of New Year resolutions and substitute for them a few strong noble purposes.

THE CALENDAR By MARTHA B. THOMAS THE calendar is a curious human document when you stop to think about it. Just an easier way of reckoning than the counting of moons and suns, and a very important matter it is, too. A calendar is the director of man's affairs, the "consulting engineer" always to be interviewed before arranging life, whether it is a dinner or business appointment, a siege with the dentist or a trip abroad. It is the grand reference book; a silent, inanimate thing composed of twelve pages or sections with black marks on them. Probably no other book, large or small, has as many readers or commands the respectful interest enjoyed by its unimpeachable reputation. (©, 1922, Western Newspaper Union)

IRA HARRISON COMES OUT OF STUPOR AND TALKS

Asks for Haircut—Also Requests That He Be Given a Shave

IRA Harrison, one of the convicted murderers of John C. Arnette, who has been in an apparent state of coma or stupor since a day before he was resented to die in the electric chair, came out of this condition yesterday at noon and asked for a haircut and shave.

Harrison remained in his apparent state of coma from the day before he was resented until his copartner, Frank M. Jeffords, was electrocuted and until the second date for his own electrocution was passed. Harrison was sentenced to die Friday along with Jeffords, but an appeal to the supreme court stayed the sentence.

For Two Weeks For two weeks Harrison refused to talk, being motionless on his cot in the penitentiary hospital and eating only when he was fed, so far as the authorities were able to learn.

Physicians maintained at the time the defendant was resented that he was feigning his state of coma or stupor. His attorney, Earnard B. Evans, asked Judge Mauldin to have Harrison examined, claiming he was not sane. The judge refused to grant the request and Mr. Evans appealed from the refusal to the supreme court.

Thursday night Harrison is said to have left his cot and walked about the prison hospital. A newspaper man saw Harrison turn swiftly over to his cot Thursday afternoon and then become motionless as the visitor entered the room.

Yesterday Harrison is reported to have come out of the state all at once and to have asked that he be given a shave and haircut. In the afternoon he was lying on his side apparently talking, but as a guard and newspaperman approached he turned over on his back quickly and became motionless.

As Santa Claus parks on roofs, congested traffic doesn't bother him.

The only way to beat Wall street is to stay out of it.

Sentenced on Stretcher It will be remembered that Harrison had to be brought into the court room on a stretcher when he was sentenced. Three reputable physicians testified that Harrison was of sound mind and feigning his state of coma. They have said all along that the defendant was feigning.

Harrison went into his first support the day the supreme court dismissed his appeal for a new trial. He came out of this after his attorney had made legal moves to prevent the remittitur in his case from being sent down to the lower court and to make preparations to appeal the case to the United States supreme court.
