MANNING, CLARENDON COUNTY, S. C., WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 11, 1885.

NO. 48.

One of the Pack.
I see how it is: I'm one of the pack—A pair playing cards; nothing more.
You should deal, then take me back.
Or toss me to the where I was before.
There are royal heads at your mimic court,
But they fare no better; they're in the same Six.
For you vary the usual order of sport:
You take what you please while you play your tricks.
No doubt it serves well as a source of fun To watch your lovers, this one against that: Though perhaps, when the evening's amusement is done
And the pack put aside, we seem rather flat.
But suppose that by chance in the deal of the
When you dream with disdain of our being Inert?
We should thank your repose, rising up in our
And declare to your face that our feelings are hurt?
For, whatever you fancy we each have a soul,
And the rules that apply here are oddly so planned
That while we seem bent to your finger's control,
And are played with, yet we two are taking a hand.
Don't you see that a sequence of hearts you may break Whom I'm keeping one mean little trump-spot to save.
Or succumb to an equally luckless mistake
And let a king go for the sake of a knave?
Does Tom's Diamond take you, or is it my heart?
The deuce, after all, will perhaps end the race.
Then, again, you may yield to young Algernon Smart.
Or the one-eyed old banker's Creolean see.
The game's to be Lotterey—so you said—Or Matrimony? No; both, I declare!
Why, the next thing I know you'll take to Old Maid.
And leave me to sorrow and Solitaire.
Cross yourself still! This never will do.
You've begun Vingt-et-un; I'm at Thirty-one.
Just ten years ago, Ah, I wish I knew Some smoother way to make matters run!
You change the game like a pantomime;
And now it's Euchre, I really believe.
For you're trying to cheat me half of the time.
With a "little joker"—a laugh in your sleeve.
Let us end this nonsense! What do you say?
Leave me out, and go on with the rest.
Or throw the whole heap of cards away,
And strike your ace on a man as the best.
You can't manage love according to Hoyle, And your effort to do so you surely would ruin.
Besides, what's the use of such intricate toils?
You shall win all the games if I only win
one!
—Geo. Parson Lathrop, in Editor's Drawer, Harper's Magazine for September.

HE WAS AN ARTIST.
He had a studio on Chestnut street—before his arrival it was known as an attic. It had that trade mark peculiar to an artist's den, namely, dark and disorder. But this morning there was a suspicion of neatness in the arrangement of many unfinished canvases; some of the dust and dirt had been removed, though a few spider-webs lurked in the corners. However, taking all into consideration, it was not so bad a place as it might be.
So thought his sole lord and master, by name David Marvin, as he sat before his easel, putting in a little darker background to the lovely face he was painting. Perhaps you might not call it lovely, but I assure you that the artist thought those deep brown eyes, the auburn hair, and the firm red lips something extraordinary.
"So you think a broom and water has somewhat improved the appearance of my room, Miss Lothrop," he was saying to the original of the portrait.
"I do, indeed; I believe if I hadn't reminded you in time you would have been entirely lost in the lacework those little creatures were spinning about you," she replied, laughing, and flashing a glance of those liquid orbs at Marvin.
"I wish she wouldn't do that," he thought, bending his flaxen head to avoid any more flashes of eye suppose.
"By the way, you wished to see those new water-color sketches of mine, didn't you?"
"Yes, I should like very much to see them, Mr. Marvin."
"There was no mistake this time; the eyes had a curious gleam that caused the painter to dive into a corner in an agony of search for the sketches.
"But what was this? Bump, bump, up the stairs it came, and amid a great heaval of sighs the door was swung open, and in the open portal appeared a personage of great proportions; an immense white chip bonnet adorned with flaming red roses and blue ribbons, a purple gown, green-flannel bag of dimensions unknown, and a white cotton umbrella made the tour ensemble.
"Laws & mercy, Davy! But them be the awfulest stairs I ever seen. Here am I, a-blowing like an old whale, and never a breath of air in this stujo of yours; it oughter been called stewpan, it's my opinion. He, he!"
Miss Lothrop had withdrawn into a corner by the window at the panting dame's unceremonious arrival, and was now eyeing her gaudy attire with badly concealed merriment on her face.
"And never a cheer, neither. Bless my soul, Davy, yer getting airy in yer sketch; that's one thing; a tumble out yer cheeks for this rubbish," she continued, with a majestic wave of her hand to the works of art lying around.
"Well, upon my word, Aunt Eliza, you've taken me by storm. I did not look for you on such a hot day as this,"
at last gasped David.
"Oh, no! I was sarten sure of that.
I knew I wasn't wanted; that's just why I came, Dave. Marvin!" snapped Aunt Eliza, looking vindictively at Miss Lothrop. "Who's that?" she asked, in a stage whisper.
"I beg your pardon, Aunt Eliza," said David, recovering his lost energy and pulling himself up with a jerk.
"Miss Lothrop, allow me to introduce my aunt, Miss Hawkins."
"I'm from Redington, Pa.; ye've heard of Redington, miss?" inquired the old lady, with some pride. "It's a real smart town, Davy was brung up there," she went on, seating herself.
"Indeed!" Miss Lothrop murmured, endeavoring to appear interested, while Mr. Marvin inwardly cursed his fate.
"I hope that feller hasn't been telling ye yarns about his an—ay, an, whatever you call 'em; they say all in Philadelphia, do you know. Why, do you know, I member Davy when he were a little chap in petticoats, fetching water from the well, and mindin' the babies, carryin' them pig-a-back. Ye needn't bust, Davy; it's gospel truth.
I wonder what yer mother would say if she seen ye now, dabblin' in those nasty paints? Like as not she's washing your father's clothes; his father's a miner, Miss Lothrop. Why, yer surely not going?"

"Yes; you will please excuse me, but I remember that I have a pressing engagement that I cannot slight. Goodbye."
"I am sorry, Miss Lothrop," said David, in a husky voice, surprise and indignation making his naturally stupid tongue dumb. "Good morning. Oh, aunt! What have you done?" he exclaimed, as he closed the door after the young lady. "I can hardly say I thank you for airing those spicy anecdotes of my juvenile days," he continued, bitterly, as he busied himself before his easel. "What will she think?" was the next thought. "And she'll never come back!" he unluckily muttered aloud. Aias, poor Dave!
"You blamed fool, Dave Marvin!" exclaimed Aunt Eliza, grasping the ferule of her umbrella. "You blamed fool!"
"Aunt!"
"Yare. I s'pose ye'll be bringing that proud hussy home ter Redington when ye git her. He, he! When you do! But, never fear, Dave, no one that's insulted me—"
"Once for all, aunt—"
"One-half hour, afterward! Aunt Eliza came out into the broad daylight, mopping her moist brows, and frowning darkly at the fifth floor window, from whence her painter nephew was gazing down stupidly on the crowded street.
Another morning two weeks later, David was at his easel, working on the deep brown eyes, with the heavily fringed lashes. Was it no—but it was the original again sitting before him.
"Yes I really thought that you would never come again. You were so terribly put out, you know," he was saying the hot blood mounting to his brow.
"Why, what made you think that? I was very much amused by the old lady; she is very communicative, don't you think?" she asked with a queer gleam in her eyes that the poor fellow dreaded so much.
"Ah, yes—that is—," he stammered, then quitted his work, and brush and palette were thrown down.
"Miss Lothrop!"
"Mr. Marvin!"
He stopped and looked doubtfully around him.
"Miss Lothrop, don't you—I mean—would you mind hearing more about that little fellow who carried his sisters—the way she said?"
"No answer; the eyes were hidden by the long lashes, and a faint, shell-like tint crept over her face.
"You will not say that you have an engagement?" he asked, thinking he had the upper hand, and consequently feeling brave.
"Oh, will you not believe me? It was really the truth. Why should I make an excuse when I like—"
"A full stop."
"What? Whom?"
"What were you going to say, Mr.
Marvin?" she inquired, ignoring his question. "Something about yourself, you'll remember."
"It was—not until you finish your sentence," he said.
"Myself! Do you mean it, Mabel? I was going to say that I love you, my Queen Mab!"
That incorrigible young man was on his knees, grasping the two warm palms of Miss Lothrop. Her dark head was bent over him, the bonnie brown eyes that David both loved and feared were looking down in his blue orbs with unutterable tenderness. What more was needed?
"Darling, your turn now," he whispered. "You liked—whom?"
"I! O, David! I intended to tell you—not now, but somewhere off in the vague ages—that I liked to listen to the lady's chat about—"
"A pause."
"Me! O darling of darlings!" The postures were something artistic, since their attitudes were struck quite innocently, somewhat after that painting of Romeo and Juliet in Friar Lawrence's cell. The friar alone was needed.
But lo and behold! Who made an appearance at this moment but that venerable gentleman in feminine garb of—Aunt Eliza!
"David Marvin! Ye blamed—Sakes alive! I'm sure I beg yer pardon, Miss Lothrop. I—"
"Aunt Eliza, allow me to introduce my little wife to be," David said, rising from his cramped position.
"My soul! Ye don't say! Would you marry an artist, Miss Lothrop?"
"Yes, indeed, any amount of them," she answered, with a fond glance at David.
"One at a time, darling. I think would be best," he suggested. "Take me first for a trial!"—Waverly Magazine.

Great Men's Feet.
"Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, the pastor of Plymouth," continued Dr. Palmer, "has soft, chubby feet. He always wears a broad-soled, easy-fitting shoe of the finest kid made, and suffers but little from corns or bunions. I brighten up his finger, and toe nails about once a month. Mr. Beecher is a most interesting talker. The last time he was here he related many pleasant anecdotes of his home in Peekskill, where he resides with his family during the summer. In speaking of the regiment's encampment at Peekskill, Mr. Beecher remarked that the boys in blue greatly added to the income of the shopkeepers of the town, and taken upon the whole they improved its social and moral condition."
"Rev. Dr. Talmage, who recently sailed for Europe to rejoin his family in London, is also one of my customers. His feet in some respects resemble a canoe, being long and narrow. I cannot say they are free from corns and bunions, like Mr. Beecher's, but nevertheless they are pleasant to look upon. Dr. Talmage's toe-nails grow out perfectly straight, and are as pink and white as a woman's."—New York World.

As a curious statistical trifle it may be mentioned that the United States has over fifty penitentiaries and 2,400 jails. These institutions contain over 50,000 boarders.

A Negro Flogged to Death.
Some time ago George Rouse was lynched at Vienna, Ga., for the murder of Mrs. Doles. Tuesday last, Rouse's cousin arrived and, inquiring the whereabouts of some of the lynchers, said he would cut some of their wives' throats before the week was out. This was reported to these men, whereupon a party was organized. They seized the negro, took him to the woods, and flogged him to death.

Medical Students Amuse Themselves.
After a boisterous procession last Saturday night in celebration of Halloween the students of Trinity Medical School at Toronto suspended a male corpse from a hook on a butcher's veranda. A policeman found the body at three o'clock in the morning and it was removed to the hospital.
Two corpses were also found in the hospital yard.

NOTICE TO FARMERS.
I respectfully call to the attention of the Farmers of Clarendon the fact that I have secured the Agency for the Corbin Disk Harrow, Planet Jr. Horse Hoe and Cultivator, Johnson Harvester and the Coni-tional Reaper. I have one of each of these instruments for display at my stables, and will take pleasure in showing and explaining their utility. No progressive farmer can afford to do without these implements.

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
A book of 100 pages.
The best book for an advertiser to consult, he will be expected or otherwise.
It contains lists of newspapers and estimates of the cost of advertising. The advertiser who wants to spend one dollar, finds in it the information he requires, while for him who will invest one hundred thousand dollars in advertising, a scheme is indicated which will meet his every requirement, or can be made to do so by slight changes easily arrived at by correspondence. 149 editions have been issued.
Send, post-paid, to any address for 10 cents.
