

We publish in to-days Times the address delivered by Capt. R. B. Tillman before the Clarendon Agricultural Association on last Monday.

Why should the farmers of the State enter into a crusade against those supposed to represent other interests? Anarchy and political confusion, resulting in unkind mischief to the welfare of the true interests of the State, would be the result.

Reforms may be necessary and there are possibly grievances to redress, but for Heaven sake let it be attained otherwise than by arraying in hostility, trade against trade, creating strife and possibly political disintegration.

Address of Capt. Tillman before the Clarendon Agricultural Association. Mr. President: Gentlemen of the Clarendon Agricultural Society:

It is hardly necessary for me to say that it affords me no small pleasure to meet so many of the intelligent and representative farmers of the county—a portion of the state in which I have never been before.

I have grave misgivings lest, some of your members who heard me speak at Bennettsville last August, may have led you to think you would hear something eloquent or laughable to-day, and there you will be sadly disappointed in what I am going to say.

That speech was written and delivered under peculiar circumstances and surroundings, such as are never likely to occur again and I cannot hope to ever control and enshouse an audience again as I did that one.

The question I propose to discuss is, "The State in its relation to Agriculture." It is a very large subject, and gives scope for almost any amount of argument or assertion.

The consequence is that while we live in the nineteenth century, we are not of it—but are groping blindly along the parts trod by our fathers a hundred years ago.

The local organization of County and recent agricultural societies in various parts of the State is an encouraging sign and shows first, that our people are beginning to realize the real condition of our agricultural interests; and secondly, that they feel that organized effort is necessary to accomplish any result.

What other interpretation can be put on their actions? We feel and know that the interests of the farmers have received little or no attention at the hands of the Legislature, and it might be said that too many of the farmers sent there, have been either traitors, cowards, or fools.
