ACCUSED OF TAKING GOVERNMENT BONDS

Louis Glicksman Arrested at Y. M. C. A. in Detroit.

CHECK FOR $3,905 AT ISSUE

Charged With Having Misappropriated the Money for His Own Uses.

Accused of misappropriating government funds to his own uses, Louis Glicksman, until recently chief voucher clerk at the Port Terminal, will probably arrive here today from Detroit, where he was arrested by the Detroit police on information furnished by the Newark police and Mr. A. J. Walser, an investigator for the intelligence bureau, who is congratulated on his work, in rining Glicksman down.

It appears the Glicksman separated from the government service at the Port Terminal. It is reported that he had received a telegram offering him a lucrative position if it were accepted at once. In the circumstances, Col. Frank Lamphere, constructing quartermaster at the Port Terminal, agreed to the resignation, and Glicksman left July 5.

Glicksman is accused of converting a check for $3,905.13 to his own uses, depositing it personally in the Atlantic National Bank instead of officially in the People's National Bank to the credit of the Treasury Department. He had been employed on the Port Newark and Charleston projects for eighteen months. He came here as assistant voucher clerk and was later promoted to chief in the field auditor's office.

July 5, it is charged, on leaving the Port Terminal job, he went to the Atlantic National Bank, where he secured a cashier's check for $3,000, taking the rest in cash and in small local checks he issued. He is said to have proceeded to Washington with an introduction to a bank, but in Washington it appears that he went to the Riggs National Bank, which for some reason questioned the transaction. Inquiry was made of the Atlantic National Bank by the Riggs National Bank. Col. Lamphere was communicated with and an investigation begun, it being found that the funds had been embezzled.

Meanwhile the Riggs National Bank had honored the cashier's check and Glicksman had been given the money. Glicksman then proceeded to Baltimore, thence to Philadelphia, thence to Newark, thence to Pittsburg and thence to Detroit, using a series of travelers' checks on the way, taking these from one bank to another, until a few days ago, when he converted his money into liberty bonds.

Mr. Walser and the Newark police communicated in Newark with a young man who is said to have sent Glicksman a bogus telegram about a lucrative job. This young man is quoted as saying that he had been told by Glicksman that the latter was in some sort of trouble in Charleston, but that he was not aware that Glicksman was accused of stealing government funds. Through his friend's identity communication with Glicksman was set up, and he was told to call at the Detroit Y. M. C. A. Wednesday for the glasses he wanted as he purposed to go to the Mexican oil fields. When he called at the Detroit Y. M. C. A. he was arrested by the police.

At Detroit Glicksman has been held for warrants from the office of the assistant United States district attorney, J. Waties Waring, Esq. He is said to have waived a preliminary hearing at Detroit and is coming to Charleston to face trial before Judge Henry A. M. Smith in the Federal District Court. When apprehended he appeared to have been using the name of L. Edward Gleason.

Mr. Walser is commended by Col. Lamphere and others for his quickness in rining Glicksman down. Mr. Walser, who was employed on both the Port Newark and Charleston jobs as an investigator, moved rapidly once he was called into the case. He picked up Glicksman's trail and never faltered in following it. Mr. Walser is returning from Detroit with Glicksman, who will be incarcerated in the Charleston County jail—Monday's News and Courier.
