FIVE BIG DAYS IN SANTEE SWAMP

(By Roscoe Turner, Aviator, 1st. Lt. U. S. R. C.)

Not lost, or a forced landing; just a pleasure trip. Having flown in most every county in the State of South Carolina, and after having picked it out of twenty-two (22) others we have visited by air, my partner, Mr. Runser and I, are now fully convinced that this State is not surpassed, even if equalled by any other in the Union, as a regular all around place to live, offering most any thing the heart can desire, in any vocation, or walk of life.

As the guests of Mr. Sam Barron, a prominent business man and sportsman of Manning, S. C., and the Black Oak Hunting Club, of which he is president, Mr. Runser and I are quite sure that South Carolina possesses most any thing in the world. We have studied the commercial possibilities, and we have now learned what the big swamps contain, which we have seen from the air many times, and always pointing the nose of the ship skyward to get plenty of altitude before crossing, as they are not very inviting for an airplane to land in.

We accepted the invitation to go on the annual Thanksgiving bear and deer hunt over a month ago. So at the appointed time, we returned with many curiosities in our minds, as we had never experienced any hunting of big game. I tried to picture a deer or bear rushing through the woods with a pack of dogs at his heels, and just how I would feel if he was coming my way. Shooting a gun loaded with buckshot was something I had never experienced, as the range is very different from that of a rifle, which I had learned to use in the army, but not saying how well I could shoot with it.

Everything was set and we were off for the Santee Swamp, early Monday morning, November 21. After a drive of several miles in Mr. Plyler's high powered Chevrolet automobile, we arrived at the edge of the swamp. The darkies were waiting there to help carry the supplies. So after transferring all the luggage from our car and the others in the party to our backs, I was informed that five miles more was ahead of us, before we would be there. We started on our way through the cane brakes and over the swampy wet places via foot log. Mr. R. D. Plyler, as he was nearing the end of one of the logs, informed me that he was an expert log walker, and about the time the word left his tongue, off he went into the water, almost shaking me off, as I was following close behind. Anyway we continued the march and arrived at the river. There we were transported across to Black Oak Island in a motor boat and a canoe.

Black Oak Island is leased by the hunting club of the same name. It is quite a noted place for big game.

It possesses bear, deer, turkey, ducks, alligators, coons, and squirrels by the thousands. Many prominent men from the North have had the pleasure of hunting under its jurisdiction. The rules are—First: Cut a piece of shirt farthest from the eyes if a man shoots and misses. Second: A scratching with a brier if you leave your stand where placed, or go to sleep, also shooting at squirrels. Among the souvenir shirts are those of the mayor and police judge of East Orange, N. J.

Now back to the story of the hunt, all the tents were well arranged and soon we were all out cutting cane for our beds. Then a little time passes and supper was served. The darkies are quite some cooks that were with us, all of them taking particular pains to see that no one went hungry while there. Then we were informed as to the rules and regulations of the Hunting Club and numbers drawn for the stands we should take next day. Early next morning everyone was out the dogs rearing to go. Each man placed on a stand and dogs started. The stands would have been very lonesome had it not been for the woodpeckers continually hammering on the dead trees. Some of them were such heavy hitters I fully expected to see a branch of the tree fall off, as it would shake quite a little. The squirrels also were very plentiful. It was not out of the ordinary to see as many as six or ten at one time. On one occasion a little fellow jumped up on a stump close by and barked at me as if to say "I dare you to shoot." I can remember when my father would take me hunting with him and walk for a half day killing not over a half-dozen and considering it a good hunt.

Getting back to the deer hunt, the day passed very fast for me and on returning to the camp with a guide as it was no trouble to get lost, a large buck was hanging up. York Mack, one of the colored boys, had been the lucky one. Some of the boys bid for his head, others the feet. I managed to get one of the feet for a souvenir and considered it quite a prize. Next day, which was Wednesday, the same course over again and Mr. Wallace Plowden killed a deer. After every one was in camp, and supper served, roll was called. Joe Graham, Monroe Ridgill, A. J. Barron, Jr., C. A. Williams, R. D. Plyler, Everett Horton, Boo Lee, Archie Thompson, J. G. Dinkins, W. C. White side, Webe Spott, Marion Williams, J. W. Rigby, W. R. Davis, Maynard Davis, Julius Davis, Willie Bradley, Mac Appelt, Tom Flowers, S. W. Barron, B. A. Weinberg, Harry J. Runser, Roscoe Turner, Thomas Spratt, Buck Thompson, Milton Graham, George Tindel, W. E. Reardon, W. M. Plowden, W. S. Plowden, Pet. Cheyning, Harvin McFadden, (Colored); Willie Bowman, cook; Aron Contey, first assistant; George Williams, second assistant; Dan Berry dog keeper; the Rev. Warren Johnson, dish washer; York Mack, first driver; Arthur Mack, second driver. And then it was decided to hold court. Mr. Wallace Plowden was appointed judge, and a jury selected of which I had the pleasure of serving on. Cases brought up for trial, William Cooper Whiteside, charged with shooting at a deer twice and missing it, pleaded not guilty, but was found guilty by the court and sentenced. Thereby losing part of his shirt in the rear. Mr. William Bradley pleaded guilty for the same offense and also lost part of his shirt. Mr. Harvin McFadden and Mac Appelt were charged with deserting their stands. Both were found guilty but sentence suspended which would have been the brier. In the meantime, Mr. Appelt informed us that he could tell a gun with hammers or without by the report or sound of the shot. So all hunters will kindly take notice to this as it is new in hunting history.

Thanksgiving Day started off well. The dogs began work after having been released only three minutes and five minutes later Mr. Lee killed a deer. Later on in the day little Buck Thompson killed one. This was his first trip deer hunting and he is only 14 years of age. He said he would have shot him standing still but he was so nervous he could not get the hammers back on his gun. He was also decorated with the cross of blood on his forehead on returning to camp, which denotes his first. It seemed that all were perfect today as no evidence could be gotten so as to call court.

Friday the dogs got very busy and several deer shot at and one wounded, but he got away, so there would have been plenty of work for the court that evening but most all of the hunters went home. They tried to accuse me because I came in camp with a turkey feather which I had found during the day, but as long as there was no court I got by with it. So after all I never had the experience of seeing a bear or deer run through the woods, although I heard a bear dashing through the cane which sounded as if to come thickly was being broken to pieces. Also a turkey flew over and I thought a cyclone was coming. I did kill a few squirrels late in the evenings.
