HOW SPIDERS UNDRRESS.

It is an interesting sight indeed to watch a spider change its skin and one that will repay any one for the time taken up waiting for the little known—generally speaking—event to take place. When preparing for the change the spider stops eating for several days and makes his preliminary arrangements by fastening himself by a short thread of web to one of the main lines of his snare, this to hold him firmly while he proceeds to undress. First the skin cracks all round the thorax, being held only by the fore part. Next the lower part of the body is uncovered, and then comes the struggle to free the legs. He works and kicks vigorously, seeming to have a very hard time of it. Fifteen minutes of continued perseverance, however, brings him out of his dress, the struggle causing him to appear limp and lifeless for some time after it is finished.
