 "I have been growing tobacco for over thirty years and have used various tobacco fertilizers during that time. For the past ten years, I have used your 'AA Quality' Fertilizers and have found them satisfactory in every way. The goods are always in very good mechanical condition; making distribution uniform, which is very essential for raising good crops. My crop this year yielded 1200 pounds per acre.
 "I take pleasure in recommending 'AA Quality' Fertilizers to farmers who are particular about their fertilizers."

 "I have been farming for more than thirty years and for the past ten years have been using 'AA Quality' Fertilizer for tobacco and it is the best I have ever used. I have found by actual experience running through a period of years, that it is far superior to any goods I have used on my farm. My yield this year was 1250 pounds of good quality tobacco per acre."

Fine-quality leaves which command top prices require the best tobacco fertilizer

A TOBACCO plant is always hungry. Its roots are always reaching for more. It demands rich plant foods to make top-quality leaves. That's why it takes a complete fertilizer well balanced to make tobacco fields produce their best.

"AA Quality" Tobacco Fertilizers are made especially for tobacco. They feed the plants properly and promote uniform development. Each plant gets its full share of the food, in readily available form, right up to the ripening period. "AA Quality" Fertilizers make each leaf smooth - textured, fine-burning, top-quality.

The materials used in these famous fertilizers are completely mixed, cured and re-milled. They are mechanically perfect. They distribute easily and evenly.

Three generations of successful farmers know "AA Quality" Fertilizers as old and reliable friends. Sixty years of practical fertilizer experience goes into their making. And the largest fertilizer manufacturing company in the world guarantees their absolute dependability.

For consistently good yields of top-price tobacco, use "AA Quality" Fertilizers.

IN CONFIDENCE

—BY FLO—

In the Absence of Overpowering Love Dear Miss Flo:

The question which I find so difficult to answer for myself is whether I shall marry a man for whom I have only a casual affection, or remain an old maid. I shall soon be thirty. I have an excellent position and I love my work. I enjoy the money I earn, and the luxuries it brings me, as only a woman can whose family has always been poor and whose girlhood was devoid of all the gaiety and happiness a girl craves.

I can truthfully say that I have no desire to marry. When I see other women shabby, overworked, with crying babies and grumpy husbands, I feel that marriage has no charms for me, but I am afraid the day will come as it seems to come for all those other women who do not marry when I will find myself a lonely old woman, and wish I had married and had children.

It does seem rather unfair, doesn't it, that a woman has to choose between marriage and her career? When a man marries he merely acquires a home and a wife and children in addition to the other pleasures and interests of his work, but a woman usually has to sacrifice one or the other. Only the exceptional woman as yet can manage both without breaking or falling down on one job or the other. As a matter of fact, there are women who have no need of marriage—who do not desire it, but who virtually force themselves into it because of their fear of being an old maid or of old age loneliness.

But some of the youngest women in the world today are married women with children.

The unmarried woman of today is really a happy creature. She is no longer an "old maid." She is a bachelor girl, and her life is often so full and interesting and useful that she is utterly happy and contented in her own way.

A very spry, interesting old lady of 62 recently claimed that her principal reason for not marrying was her intense horror of parting with the freedom, and of having her individuality and gifts killed by husband and children and circumstances. She is convinced that for her at least the only life was single life, and she has absolutely no regrets for not having married.

All of this, of course, seems impossible to the wife and mother who has reasoned herself into a state of superiority and has only pity for the unmarried woman. She expresses on every possible occasion her belief that there is no work and no honor that can recompense for the tragedy of not having a child. This view is little short of insulting to the many great women who have done everything and had everything but a child, and who have made life worth living for other women's children and found recompense in full for themselves.

Were you in love, there is no question as to which you should choose. You would decide in favor of marriage, and a tiny two-by-four house would look better to you than the finest job in the world. To be sure, there would be many times when you would find marriage most trying, but having for your very own the man you loved would be sufficient compensation for any hardship.

But as you are not in love, in my opinion it is a toss-up as to which will prove the most satisfactory—single blessedness with a career, or marriage. There is considerable charm in both lots, and whether you decide on marriage or a career, you will be times when you will regret with all your heart the decision you made, because it is human nature to believe that everybody's lot is easier than your own.

FARM GOSSIP

The crop that suffers most for proper cultivation is the crop of country boys and girls.

Competition may be the life of trade, but cooperation will certainly add vigor to the life of farming.

NEW INVENTIONS

Connected to the house water-supply system, an electric heater controlled by a push-button is said to be economical and safe, and has the additional feature of being noiseless. When the heating units wear or burn out, they can be replaced without the need of draining the water from the heater, and safeguards are provided to eliminate the danger of overheating.

Resembling a fountain pen in appearance, a pencil has a small bulb lighted by a battery inside the holder. It is specially adapted to use in a sick room and, as a light alone, is always ready.

German truck designers have gone to the railroads for one of their latest attachments, a sander which distributes a supply of dry dust in front of the rear wheels to prevent skidding on slippery surfaces. The arrangement is similar to the sanding equipment on a railroad locomotive. The box holds a generous supply and is easily refilled.

Increasing the usefulness of the portable typewriter, a carrying case, devised by a southern school-teacher, is converted into a serviceable table when unfolded. Besides the typewriter, which is taken without its own case, the container has room for writing materials and a small dictionary. Extended, it provides a spread of thirty by twenty-six and one-half inches, and folded, occupies a space of seven by twelve and one-half by fifteen inches.

Tattooed lips, marked in "Cupid's bow" pattern of red, are reported to be the latest beauty fad in California, regardless of the pain that accompanies the operation. The effect is permanent, saving repeated applications of the lipstick.

Based on the fact that a softly humming, monotonous sound often serves to induce sleep, a clockwork apparatus patented by a German doctor produces the desired noise for about forty minutes after winding. In order not to awaken the person using it by an abrupt cessation of the sound, this gradually becomes weaker until it finally dies away.

Mounted on the dashboard, a red electric lamp lights up when the gasoline supply reaches a low point and remains lighted until the tank is replenished. The signal gives ample warning to prevent running out of fuel entirely.

Run by oil-burning motors, a ferry boat operating between Germany and Denmark can carry 1,000 passengers. A special feature is the construction of the bow which tilts up for loading and unloading cargo from the end.

LIGHTNING STRIKING A VESSEL THROWS IT OFF COURSE

Compasses were seriously affected on the motorship "Narragansett" not long ago when a bolt of lightning struck the vessel as it was cruising in the north Atlantic, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The needles spun about rapidly, then settled down but with marked deviations. One indicated a westerly course, another an eastern, the difference being as much as twenty-three degrees. To meet the unusual situation and regain the proper course, the officers had a platform erected above the wheelhouse sufficiently high so that the magnetic influences induced in the house by the lightning would not be communicated to the instruments placed on the elevation.
