

Opening Game Friday Night

The Presbyterian college basketball season will be opened Friday night with Lonsdale Mills furnishing the opposition. The game will be played in the college gym tomorrow night beginning at 7:30 and promises to be a lively scrap since the P. C. quintet is unusually fast this year. The Presbyterians will go to Columbia for their second game Saturday night against Carolina.

CELEBRATE NATAL DAY OF WILSON

Chief Festivity Held at Hotel Astor With Morgenthau in Chair. Governor Elect Roosevelt Speaker.

New York, Dec. 28.—Franklin D. Roosevelt, governor-elect of New York state and assistant secretary of the navy under Woodrow Wilson, told those gathered in New York for the Wilson memorial dinner Friday night that in halting the war-time president as a great idealist the fact that he was a great administrator often was forgotten.

The dinner, held at the Hotel Astor was the eighth memorial gathering for Wilson here. Henry Morgenthau, former ambassador to Turkey, presided.

"During those years which have passed since the death of our great leader," Mr. Roosevelt said, "the greater emphasis in our thoughts of him has been placed on his idealism—on that quality which stirred the nation to its depths in the most critical period of world affairs. It is right that the principal emphasis should be placed on the idealism of Wilson because it is that quality which makes him, and will make him, for all time an example for American presidents and indeed for all public servants.

"But there is the other side of Wilson which we are apt to forget—a side for which due credit has never been rendered him. Woodrow Wilson was not an impracticable idealist—not a man only of vision as so many of his petty political opponents would have us believe. Those of us who served with him in the practical administration of the nation's affairs during those eight years can well bear witness to the contrary.

"Woodrow Wilson was not a business man by training, but the whole record in Washington is constant proof, first, that he knew how to pick subordinates, and, second, that he himself kept in close and careful touch with the practical affairs of administering the government."

After praising those who served in Wilson's cabinet individually, Mr. Roosevelt continued:

"To continue the story of Wilson's appointments to other posts, both in the cabinet and at the heads of the great war divisions hastily created in the emergency, would be like calling the roll of most of the famous business men in the United States. You may say that these men came, as a result of the war, but it is fair to note from the facts, first, that they were chosen by Wilson, the idealist, and, secondly, when they came to Washington, they found a smoothly-running, practical business machine with only the duty of enlarging its scope."

Eulogizing the late president; Mr. Morgenthau drew for the foundation of a picture of a great moral leader and a great formulator of the doctrines of democracy.

"Year by year," he said, "we have observed the steady growth of the appreciation accorded to Wilson by the people, by the young, as well as the old, Republicans, as well as Democrats. And now, even the outgoing administration at Washington joins the admiring ranks. President Coolidge declares that the crowning achievement of his seven years in the White House is the multilateral peace compact—a weak thing, to be sure, a timid intimation, a mere shadow of Wilson's great conception of the League of Nations, but yet the compact is conceived in admiration of Wilson's splendid vision.

"But well-meaning as the Kellogg pact may be, it has none of the broad scope of Wilson's great structure of peace. It has none of its sound architecture, none of its virility, none of its potency. So far as our international policy is concerned, the seven years of the outgoing administration may be called seven lean years of intellectual and moral famine. By contrast, how fat a time were Wilson's eight years!"

Newton D. Baker, secretary of war in Mr. Wilson's cabinet, sent a telegram, which was retelegraphed to the various other dinners, saying: "The peace of the world is still maintained by the principles he (Wilson) laid down, while in our home affairs he remains the great liberal of modern times. To commemorate his birthday is to preserve a great tradition."

Wilmington, N. C., Dec. 28.—A memorial tablet honoring the late President Woodrow Wilson was unveiled here today in observing his birthday anniversary. A memorial dinner was held tonight.

Dr. Harry W. Chase, president of the University of North Carolina, presented the handsome bronze and mosaic tablet of the First Presbyterian church, President Wilson's father, the Rev. Joseph R. Wilson, having served as pastor there from 1874 to 1885. The present pastor, Dr. A. D. P. Gilmour, accepted the memorial in behalf of the church.

The tablet was given by the Stamp Defiance chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The life of President Wilson and his efforts toward establishing world peace were eulogized by Doctor Chase in a brief and appropriate speech.

ROOSEVELT IS INAUGURATED

Demonstration Given Both New and Retiring New York Executives by Big Assembly.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 1.—A new governor of New York—Franklin Delano Roosevelt—was inaugurated today amid the plaudits of an enthusiastic crowd which filled the assembly chamber in the state capitol. A demonstration equally as enthusiastic was given to his predecessor, Alfred E. Smith, who today reentered private life after a quarter century in public service.

A departure from the ancient ritual of inaugurations in Albany was made when the retiring governor introduced his successor immediately after the latter had subscribed to the oath of office.

In his speech of introduction, which was in the nature of a farewell to the public, former Governor Smith sketched the growth of the state's activities during the twenty-five years he had been a part of the state government.

"I am turning the government over to you—not perfect, no human institution reaches perfection, but as good as it can be made," Mr. Smith said. He added that the state officials, by their cooperation, were responsible for about ninety per cent of the state's progress.

Governor Roosevelt in his inaugural address pleaded for the cooperation of the citizenry of the state in helping him reach a solution of the problems confronting the government. Among the problems he mentioned were the question of water power, simplification of court procedure and improvement in the condition of the farmer.

Except for the address by the retiring governor, the inaugural ceremonies followed closely the procedure of many years standing. At the instant the oath of office was administered a battery of guns in the capital boomed out the governor's salute of 17 guns.
