DIGNITY MARKS NEW FIRST LADY

Mrs. Hoover Realizes Difficult Road Ahead and Preserves Quiet Demeanor Before Officialdom.

Washington, March 4.—Mrs. Herbert Hoover gripped her purse and straightened her shoulders with pride as her husband pronounced the president's oath.

Mrs. Calvin Coolidge smiled. From the moment she walked out of her old S street home, until she entered the inaugural parade, Mrs. Hoover preserved a quiet dignity—broken, while the public watched, not more than half a dozen times.

Mrs. Coolidge, from the start of the procession from the White House to the departure on the train that tonight was carrying her toward Northampton, appeared anything but unhappy to be escaping from confinement in a palace that had its glamour and its glories, but its burdens too. Evidently the weather caused Mrs. Hoover to change her mind about her inaugural wrap at the last moment.

While the crowd waited for her appearance from the Hoover home, word came from within that she would be dressed in a plum colored dress and coat; but she walked out instead in a black broadtail coat, with brown fur collar. The plum-colored gown was of velvet, with a close fitting waist and circular skirt. Her hat matched; its soft, small brim showing a bit of her hair and framing her rougless face. While other members of her immediate family drove directly to the Capitol, she rode to the White House to say farewell to her friend and predecessor, Mrs. Coolidge.

Mrs. Coolidge, dressed in a furless tan suit, straight-lined and matched by a soft, straw hat adorned with a ribbon band and tassel, took her place beside Mrs. Hoover in the machine directly behind that of Mr. Hoover and Mr. Coolidge. She carried a brown fox neckpiece over her arm.

Arrived at the president's gallery of the senate chamber, the two ladies walked down to the front row of chairs and sat down together.

Mrs. Coolidge helped Mrs. Hoover to remove her wrap, and then turned to talk excitedly, happily, with friends about them. She craned her neck to peer down at the crowding officialdom on the floor below, nodding merry greetings.

Mrs. Hoover also smiled—faintly. Throughout the ceremonies in the chamber, she showed a keen sensibility to the responsibilities that would devolve upon her when she stepped into her role of honor.

Mrs. Hoover faced the crowd outside more serious than she had been within. Seated at the right of Mr. Hoover, she gave Chief Justice Taft a slight smile. She nodded occasionally to friends, and as the president turned to her after receiving the oath, she stood with radiant face.

A Laundry Hint

Never iron over snaps and buttons laid on a hard, flat board. Double a Turkish towel or several thicknesses of blanket and stretch the garment button side down on this. The buttons will sink into the pad and leave a smooth surface to iron.

Flints for the Home

When the breakfast room is in plain view from the dining room or off the kitchen it is pleasantest to have its color scheme in harmony with the one so near it.

One attractive method of working out the scheme is to use reverse colors—that is, if the dining room scheme uses a biege rug with ivory walls and a great deal of soft blue in the draperies, a good combination for the breakfast room might be: A dull blue floor covering, furniture painted a soft French gray-blue, with over-curtains a dull canary or beige background and a pattern whose design and coloring are in keeping with those in the other room.

Cleans Tubs Quickly

To remove the ring of soap suds that clings to the bath and wash basin, moisten a rag with turpentine and rub over the entire tub, then scrub well with soap and warm water. This stain will disappear like magic.

A Nice Company Dish

Put cooked or canned lobster through a meat grinder, season to taste, mix with a little cream to moisten and fill small hollowed tomatoes with the mixture. Sprinkle top with crumbs and dot with butter; brown in the oven, cooking until the tomatoes are tender.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS

The County Highway Commission of Spartanburg County, S. C., and the County Board of Commissioners of Laurens County, S. C., in a joint letting on March 12th, 1929, at 2 o'clock P. M., at the office of Spartanburg County Highway Commission, Spartanburg, S. C., will receive sealed bids for furnishing and erecting a steel bridge over Enoree River, being a joint county bridge, known as the Fowler or Cooney bridge, consisting of one 120'x12' steel span and 160 feet of steel approaches with necessary piers and footings and abutments, according to plans and specifications adopted or provided by the County Engineer of Spartanburg County.

All bids shall be on the prescribed form and shall be accompanied by a certified check in the sum of $500.00, made payable to Laurens and Spartanburg Counties, as guarantee of good faith that the bidder will, if awarded the contract, within ten days thereafter enter into a written contract and give satisfactory bond for the performance thereof.

The right is reserved by the Commissioners to reject any, or all bids. Further information will be furnished by H. B. Humbert, County Engineer, Spartanburg, S. C.

An Oklahoma Mother Says:

"BLACK-DRAUGHT is a fine medicine to give to children. I use it for mine whenever I need to give them a laxative. They don't mind taking it when I make it into a tea; and it quickly relieves constipation and the bad symptoms which come from it. I can recommend it to other mothers, for I have found it useful in my home."

"When I was a child my mother gave it to me whenever I complained of not feeling well. I have always taken it, for upset stomach and constipation. It is about the only medicine I have to take. A few doses of Black-Draught, now and then, keep my system in order. My husband takes it, too. I hardly see how I could keep house without Black-Draught. It has become a standard with us, in keeping the children and ourselves well."—Mrs. Luther Brassfield, Claremore, Okla.
