Got Up In The Morning Feeling DIZZY

"I BEGAN to suffer with headache and biliousness," says Mr. John C. Malone, of Buena Vista, Ohio. "I had a hurting through the middle part of my body which seemed to come from indigestion. I would get constipated, and then feel all out of sorts. I would get up in the morning feeling dizzy, and everything I ate would disagree with me."

STRONG APPEAL FOR COLLEGE

President McSween Makes Challenging Address Before Chamber of Commerce for Approaching Campaign and Declares Debt Crisis Must Be Met If Institution Is To Survive.

The May meeting of the Chamber of Commerce was held Tuesday evening with President C. F. Winn presiding. The dinner was served by the local Eastern Star chapter, with one hundred members and visitors present.

After a few brief announcements, President Winn stated that the meeting had been arranged especially in the interest of the Presbyterian college campaign opening next week.

W. P. Jacobs, chairman of the committee directing the campaign, was presented and gave an outline of the plan of procedure to raise $50,000 in one day as Clinton's goal. After explaining the details of the undertaking, and pleading for a united, whole-hearted support on the part of the city and community, Mr. Jacobs spoke in the highest terms of President McSween and introduced him to the large audience.

President McSween made an earnest appeal for Presbyterian college and his thoughtful and impressive address was listened to with rapt attention, making a strong presentation for a loyal, united effort on the part of the community as the campaign opens next week to raise $50,000 to assist the institution in its present debt crisis.

In discussing the college and the approaching campaign, Mr. McSween spoke of what Presbyterian college means to Clinton what Clinton means to Presbyterian college; and of the challenge of the present situation.

What the college means to Clinton cannot be expressed, he said, for only eternity can reveal the definite impressions and training received in this institution which has been positively Christian since the day it was founded in 1880 by the late William Plumer Jacobs, D. D. The college, he asserted, has awakened in the souls of hundreds of young men and women enlarged visions of service. He spoke of the pecuniary advantages to Clinton, the great saving brought to local citizens in the education of their sons due to the institution's presence here, and stated that conservatively from $75,000 to $100,000 is spent annually through this educational channel.

Continuing, Mr. McSween spoke of the great advertisement the college has proven to Clinton that cannot be estimated in thousands of dollars.

In discussing what Clinton means to the college, Mr. McSween spoke of the vital importance of education today in all fields of endeavor. There are only three sources from which the denominational college is to receive its support, namely, the church, liberal friends and the local constituency where the school is located.

Speaking most impressively of the challenge of the present situation, Mr. McSween said that the challenge is the most tremendous one that has ever been faced. We are today facing a discouraging debt, he said, a burden that is hampering the college and must be met. This debt is not due to extravagance, he said, but is the outcome of a chain of circumstances over which no one held control, brought about largely by economical depression following the period of expansion the college enjoyed. As a result today, we have the finest small college plant in the South.

Discussing the financial status, Mr. McSween stated that the college has been operated this year without a deficit, that the Presbyterian church has contributed $40,000 to it for current expenses. To live within our income next year, he said, curtailment has been necessary. There has been a reduction in salaries all along the line, and he paid a beautiful tribute and appreciation to the faculty members, their unselfish services, and the spirit in which they have adjusted themselves in the present crisis.

In closing, Mr. McSween declared that debt is today threatening the life of the college, and that unless this burden is lifted, the college will inevitably meet its doom and become a great liability on the community and its constituency. Our people must rally in this hour of greatest need, and the institution's directing head expressed the belief that the response will be liberal and enthusiastic.

Is the college—your college—worth sacrificing for, he asked. Are we willing to retreat, or will be as a united community come to the aid of our wounded child? The opportunity is here—the college is yours, Mr. McSween said in closing. Will you fail in this hour of need or will you willingly, liberally do your part in this emergency hour?

Following the address of Mr. McSween, a fitting prayer was offered by Rev. Edward Long asking God's blessings upon the campaign soon to open in this city.

Among the many advantages that the Clinton people derive from the presence of the Presbyterian college in their midst, the greatest is undoubtedly the effect of its cultural and moral influence. The value of this influence on our young people is incalculable, and cannot be measured in dollars and cents. People are prone to take their blessings for granted, and for this reason we are apt not to appreciate the college to its fullest extent.

Last year we raised fifty thousand dollars to bring a new industry to town. It seems that we might more easily raise a similar amount for the college this year, as everyone will readily agree that the well being and prosperity of the latter is of much more importance to the community.

The people of South Carolina will gauge their subscriptions largely by the response we make to this appeal. It should be a generous one.

We Believe In Our College

We believe in our college because it is a religious institution located in our midst, and its faculty and teachers are Christian men. Therefore, the Christian influence and environment make it an asset to our community far greater than that of dollars and cents; because it is an asset in the community for the building up of character and young manhood for the country at large, as well as for our own homes and town.

The great needs of a Christian college of today are very evident, from the fact that the state colleges and other similar institutions are given their support by taxes. The religious institutions have no such source of income, and therefore, it behooves us to be up and doing and rally to their support with our money, as well as with our co-operation and patronage, because it is the religious institutions of today which are turning out men and women with that religious training and character building that will enable them in the making of our country, as a whole, a worthwhile place in which to live.

Now let's, everyone of us put our shoulder to the wheel and show that spirit of co-operation which such a deserving campaign merits.
